NEW GAIN SEEN IN CITY'S DRIVE FOR CLEAN AIR

Improved Devices to Cut Smoke

BY ROBERT HOWARD

New progress is clearing the air over Chicago of smoke and dust was predicted yesterday by Frank A. Chambers, the city engineer in charge of the smoke abatement program. Diesel locomotives, competition expected to bring about improvements in both coal stokers and fuel oil burners, and continuing efforts to get more efficient combustion in better furnaces will contribute to the progress.

Chambers, who now has a staff of 38, has achieved for Chicago a national reputation in the fight against air pollution. Since 1917 he has been secretary of the Smoke Prevention Association of America, which will open its convention in Columbus, O., Tuesday.

Seeks Improved Incinerators

Manufacturers of the incinerators used to burn garbage and rubbish in tall buildings have been summoned to the Columbus meeting by Chambers, who will ask them to help design ways of keeping dirt from reaching the top of the smokestacks. His idea is that the solid materials can be caught in expansion chambers in which they could settle and be removed.

Chicago has an estimated 8 per cent of the nation's supply of mechanical stokers, which can burn the Illinois fuel with as clean results as the "smokeless" coal from eastern fields. Whereas, in 1933 70 per cent of the coal sold at retail was from the east, now 70 per cent comes from Chicagoland states, said Frank Donovan of the Chicago Coal Merchants' association.

Favors Bigger Heating Plants

Chambers has asked the Chicago Building Managers' association to instruct engineers to quit blowing flues after dark, which adds to unseen pollution, and to adopt clean methods of burning rubbish.

Another suggestion, he said, is that more big downtown buildings furnish central heating for an entire block. A big and efficient plant, he said, can take over the work of several less efficient heaters which pour coal smoke thru the vicinity.

The oil burning Diesel locomotives, widely used for switching, have been a big help in recent years and may be extended to suburban runs as well as long distance hauls.

Other Sources of Dirt

Chambers said that the black coal smoke pouring out of chimneys is only part of the dirt problem. Soot and other carbons are often invisible, as is the fly ash floating upward after complete combustion of fuel. Rubber worn from skidding tires and insoluble oxides in the air are also added to the volume of dust.

"Chicago officials seek permanent abatement of the smoke nuisance primarily by adoption of better equipment and improved methods," Chambers said. "Skill and intelligence in burning can be taught and stokers and other equipment always can be improved. In such activities Chicago has a national reputation.

Dust Fall Being Reduced

"In some cities, smoke abatement work has concentrated on the stipulation of the fuels which may be burned, but such methods are not economically sound and the fuels themselves are not always available."

The average dust fall in Chicago, as measured at 35 stations maintained by Chambers, was 96.39 tons per square mile in 1934, but had been reduced to 54.1 tons by 1940. Since then the trend increased to 73.7 tons in 1943, but improvement again is being recorded.

For 39 years the city has approved the sizes and types of furnaces and chimneys for all buildings except residences and two apartment buildings. St. Louis, Mo.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Cincinnati, O., and other cities suffering from dirty air have adopted the Chicago system of permits.

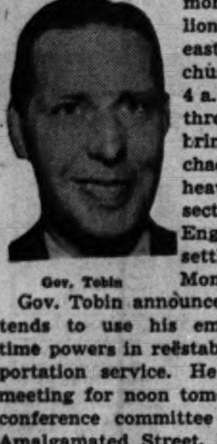
British Mother of 18 Bears No. 19, 14 Pounds

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Oct. 13—Already the mother of 18 children, Mrs. Dorothy Russel, 43, of Grimsby, on Thursday gave birth to a boy weighing 14 pounds. The eldest of Mrs. Russell's 27 living children is 23 years old.

Over Million Left Stranded by Bus Strike

Boston, Mass., Oct. 13 [Special]—A transportation tieup affecting more than a million residents of eastern Massachusetts began at 4 a. m. today and threatened to bring industrial chaos to this heavily populated section of New England unless settled before Monday morning.



Gov. Tobin

Gov. Tobin announced that he intends to use his emergency war time powers in reëstablishing transportation service. He scheduled a meeting for noon tomorrow with a conference committee of the AFL Amalgamated Street, Electric Railway, and Motor Coach Operators of America.

The tieup was brought about by the walkout of 1,975 bus drivers and trolley operators, all employes of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway company, which operates an intercity bus system serving 71 cities and communities in the Boston suburban area.

Strike Not Sanctioned

The strike was voted by 10 of the 11 locals of the union, but was without the sanction of the union's international officers.

Of the dozen large cities served by the company, only Salem remained unaffected. Here 125 members of the union voted to stay on the job and were running their buses as usual.

Major cities without local transportation included Lowell, Lawrence, Lynn, Fall River, Brockton, Haverhill, Quincy, and Taunton.

Governor Confers

A union demand for higher wages was the cause of the strike. The union is asking a wage hike from 97 cents to $1.35 an hour for a 40 hour week for drivers and a 40 per cent wage increase and a 40 hour week for mechanics.

Gov. Tobin was in conference tonight with Saul Warren, regional director for the war labor board. It was reported he asked Warren for information regarding the power of federal authorities to intervene.

The governor also sent a wire to A. L. Spradling, Chicago, international executive vice president of the union, asking him to come to Boston at once and use his influence to get the drivers back on the job.

BUS SERVICE RESUMED

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 13 (AP)—Fifty employes of the Cumberland Coach company returned to work today, ending a week long strike that had tied up bus service in Harlan county, Ky.

BUS TALKS STALLED

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 13 (AP)—Negotiations got nowhere today in the nine day old strike that has paralyzed bus service in seven western states.

"The union won't go back to work and won't arbitrate," F. W. Ackerman, Greyhound Bus company vice president, said. He added that 90 per cent of the issues had been met but no agreement could be reached on the mileage rate for drivers.

N. Y. DOCK STRIKERS RETURNING TO JOBS AFTER 13 DAY TIEUP

New York, Oct. 13 (AP)—Mile after mile of wharves in New York's harbor began to take on life again today as gangs of longshoremen went back to their jobs of loading and unloading about 400 ships tied up for the last 13 days by a strike of 35,000 to 60,000 dock workers.

Joseph P. Ryan, president of the AFL International Longshoremen's association, reported that strikers were returning to work "all along the waterfront."

Gene Sampson, business agent of local 791, which began the strike of 60 union locals Oct. 1, said 1,200 men went back today. He said there was "every reason to believe" all the strikers would return Monday, but leaders of six insurgent locals in Brooklyn have voiced their intention of remaining out as a challenge to Ryan's leadership.

The strikers demand of the New York Shipping association a new contract guaranteeing overtime pay for lunch hours worked, a standardized weight load for cargo nets, two instead of three daily hiring periods, and a relief man for each group of 20 longshoremen.

BOARD TO HEAR DISCUSSIONS ON AIRPORT RUNWAY

Whether Chicago's new aviation terminal should have tangential or parallen runways will be considered tomorrow by the airport selection board appointed by Mayor Kelly. David L. Behncke, president of the Air Lines Pilots' association, is scheduled to present arguments for the parallel system.

Air Line engineers, who were among the original advocates of moving the air center to Douglas field northwest of the city, favor the tangential system, which would be laid out in the form of an elongated pinwheel, with the terminal building in the center. The two runways at opposite sides of the pinwheel would be parallel.

Behncke has argued in favor of a layout under which more than two runways could be parallel to meet the demands of future air traffic. The same argument, in which Behncke participated, was presented in the planning of the new Idlewild airport at New York. It will have tangential runways, subject to further change.

The selection board has agreed to complete its work by Nov. 15.

DOLLAR WORTH 20,000 PENGOES IN HUNGARY NOW

BY HENRY WALES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Oct. 13—The Hungarian pengo dropped sharply today to 20,000 to a dollar—it was 8,000 to a dollar Tuesday—and for the first time Budapest merchants and stores today were refusing to accept the national currency, insisting that purchases be made with dollars. Only perishable goods, like fruit and vegetables, were sold freely for pengoes.

A wretched woman came into the control council headquarters pleading to get three dollars for 75,000 pengoes so she could buy medicine for her sick daughter, as the pharmacy refused to sell for the depreciating local currency.

The authorities were conferring this afternoon to issue a decree making sales with foreign currencies illegal, but they realized that this would only force the city into becoming a huge black market, as no one with staple goods is willing to sell for pengoes as they plunge downward.

One More Day to Mail Gifts for Overseas

Tomorrow is the last day for sending Christmas parcels up to five pounds out of the country without specific requests from those to whom they are addressed and with assurance that the gifts will be delivered in time.

The main postoffice and the downtown annex will be open until 10 o'clock tonight and until midnight tomorrow night for overseas packages. District and suburban postoffices will accept such packages until 6 p. m. tomorrow.

The Chicago postoffice was in the thick of a Christmas rush yesterday. Throngs waiting to mail overseas gifts formed lines of 12 and 15 persons in surges of activity that kept enlarged crews of postal employes hustling.

Brighter Spirit Now

This will be the first Christmas since war's end, and there's a new, bright spirit among those sending gifts. postal employes said. The anxiety and uncertainty that service men's relatives and friends showed last year and the year before have vanished.

There was an evident undercurrent of disappointment among those whose loved ones will have to stay far from home with occupation forces. This feeling, however, was tempered by the knowledge that the fighting is over, and Tom, Dick, and Harry will be able to enjoy their gifts.

Those gifts, it was apparent, are sensible and down to earth. The choices, it develbped, were not dictated as much by the limits on packages as by the wishes the soldiers, sailors, and marines have expressed.

Knows What They Want

Pvt. Michael Bonsonto, 1314 Fillmore st., home on furlough from Fort Bragg, N. C., was one of the busier Santa Clauses at the downtown postoffice. He took packages for six friends and relatives, all in Germany, and knew what they'd want, he said, because he spent four months overseas himself.

"There's macaroni they can cook themselves," he said. "There are joke books, and comic books, to pass the time, and more food—canned fish and other food they can't get in Germany, and candy, too."

Salami sausage and pumpernickel were high on the list of gifts that Corp. Fritz Sanger, 34, who is on Luzon, requested, so that's what he's getting from his friend, Walter Carsch, 4640 Lake Park av. Corp. Sanger also is receiving candy, shaving articles—and lipstick.

Lipstick for Girls

"The lipstick is for the girls," Carsch explained. "Fritz isn't married."

Robert M. Chandlee, Negro, 5720 South Park way, has five sons in the army. Two still are overseas, Lt. Roland W., 23, who got to Marseilles, France, en route home, then was ordered back to Germany, and Pvt. Edwin, 25, a musician on Morotai. They love lemon drops and they also will get fruit cake, nuts, razor blades and toilet articles.

Mrs. Harry Semple, 3748 Irving Park rd., was mailing her 10th Christmas package to her son, Corp. Jack, 20, who has been ordered from Okinawa to Korea. The postoffice limit is one package a week, but Mrs. Semple has gotten around it by enlisting the aid of relatives and friends so that Corp. Jack will have plenty of food and books.

Send Set of Chessmen

Fred Fujii and his wife, Marion, 2137 Sheffield av., who are American-born Japanese, sent their package to his brother, Sgt. Edward, 21, who is with army intelligence in Japan. Fred, who was in the army until six months ago, picked out a chess game, peanuts, and tobacco.

Miss Margaret Lynch, 5322 Congress st., mailed her brother, Seaman Walter, 21, with the Seabees on Iwo, boned chicken, fruit cake, fudge, and nuts. She sent candy, mints, sox, razor blades, and toiletries in an earlier parcel.

Miss June Tetzke, 2611 23d st., picked out a navy blue muffler, wallet, identification bracelet, joke books, and stationery for her friend, Seaman Milton R. Zurek, now at Wakayama, Japan.

A total of 627,181 overseas parcels have been mailed, Postmaster Ernest J. Kruetgen said. This is about half of the number sent at the corresponding time last year.

28 SAILORS DIE, 70 MISSING IN OKINAWA GALE

Navy Reports 423 Men Injured

PEARL HARBOR, T. H., Oct. 13 (AP)—Navy headquarters said tonight 28 navy men were killed, 70 are missing, and 423 were injured in the typhoon which swept Okinawa Island Monday and Tuesday.

Of the injured, 91 were seriously hurt. Twenty-five of the navy men met death in accidents afloat and three were killed in shore establishments. The navy said casualty reports have not yet been received from all ships at sea. The army has announced that 100 of its personnel were injured.

Chicagoan Sees Storm

Fairfield, Cal., Oct. 13 (AP)—Eighth air force and navy installations on Okinawa were demolished and five ships were beached by the typhoon which struck that island Tuesday, an eyewitness declared on arrival at this army airfield today.

Tech. Sgt. Harry J. Phillips of 526 Addison st., Chicago, made a photographic reconnaissance flight over Okinawa and left for home aboard the second plane that took off after the storm.

"Installations of the 8th air force were completely devastated. At Yontan and Naha air fields the hangers, tents, and buildings were downed," Phillips said.

Light Damage Surprises

"It was a miracle that only slight damage was caused to heavy bombers and transport planes based on the island.

"The navy suffered the brunt of the storm. Five ships anchored in Naha bay were beached. Quonset huts were demolished and a navy air transport operations building was left a wreck," he said.

"The first warning we received of the storm came when ships anchored in the bay headed out to sea two days before the typhoon struck. Navy officials decided to have their ships try and ride the storm instead of being wrecked on the beaches.

His Tent Collapses

"When the typhoon hit it was accompanied by torrents of rain. The tent I was quartered in collapsed. The storm finally blew over about 2 o'clock Thursday morning," the sergeant said.

Sgt. Phillips will leave for Chicago tonight.

Air Force Injuries Light

TOKYO, Oct. 13 (AP)—The worst typhoon in 20 years scattered their personal belongings all over Okinawa, but did not severely injure any of the personnel of the United States 8th air force, Maj. Gen. Earle E. Partridge, commander of the air force, reported tonight.

Partridge reported his men were digging out of the wreckage, which was scattered by winds which at times reached a velocity of 130 miles an hour.

Planes Hard Hit

Minor first aid treatment was sufficient for most of his men, the general said, despite the fact that 70 per cent of all their tents will have to be replaced.

Fifty per cent of the force's planes will need major replacements before they are able to fly safely, and communications and power lines were so hard hit that it will take at least two weeks to restore normal conditions.

The threatened food shortage caused by the typhoons has been eliminated by B-29 deliveries from Pacific bases.

TRANSPLANTING OF 10 MILLION BEGINS IN REICH

FRANKFURT, Germany, Oct. 13 (AP)—A huge migration involving the transplanting of some 10,000,000 Germans to new homes and the restoration of several hundred thousand to their former homes is under way. Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters said today that 500,000 Germans from Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland already have entered the American occupation zone. Movement of 150,000 Germans from what now is the American zone in Austria back to their homes in the reich also has started, officials said.

It is estimated that eventually some 2,000,000 more Germans from the Sudetenland, from former parts of Germany now incorporated in Poland and other areas, must be resettled in the American zone.

RED TERRORISM OF RUSSIANS IN GERMANY TOLD

BY WALTER TROHAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13—Sen. Wheeler [D., Mont.] tonight made public a documented report of soviet terrorism toward thousands of Russians who were found in Germany when allied forces moved in.

Sen. Wheeler

The fate of these displaced Russians has been a post-war mystery. Sen. Wheeler lifted the secrecy surounding the treatment of the Russians without a country by releasing letters from displaced Russians who volunteered to be repatriated and then succeeded in fleeing to the American zone of occupation.

The letters tell stories of soviet brutality and terrorism. The displaced Russians all expressed their unwillingness to return to Russia where they received even harsher treatment than they received at German hands.

Many in Camps

The plight of the displaced Russians was brought to the attention of the senator by Paul Alexeef, an American who recently returned from a tour with USO camp shows in Germany. Alexeef, who speaks Russian, was able to get first hand stories from the displaced Russians.

"There are still hundreds upon thousands of displaced Russians in our zone of occupation, all living under a terror of a forced repatriation to the USSR," Alexeef wrote the senator. "Many are in the camps for displaced persons, others, even more numerous, wander along the roads of Germany, hungry and homeless, and at the mercy of the local German authorities, yet afraid of going to a D. P. camp from which they might be shipped to the soviet zone.

"Displaced soviet citizens still left in our zone of occupation are, with a very few exceptions, innocent people seeking refuge in the haven of justice and compassion America always has been. Their only crime is to have survived German slavery and still remember the true essence of the soviet regime. They beg to be left on our side of the border."

Wheeler released the statement of Lioubov Chepinoga, 19, who was a slave laborer in Germany and was shipped across the Elbe with a group of displaced Russians when the war ended. Later he escaped into American territory.

Taken from Mothers

"Conditions of life in camp [in Russia] are difficult," Chepinoga wrote. "Food was even worse than the food we got in the German working camps. All children born in Germany were separated from their mothers and sent to special points. Mothers were sent to work.

"Orders were given to separate all men from 14 to 46 years of age from their families. These men were deprived of all their belongings and sent eastward thru Berlin with soldiers to guard them. No information exists as to the lot of these men.

"On the soviet territory are special camps for women who had anything to do with the Russian liberating army, police, or any German organization. They are under a severe regime. Their hair is cut off; they live in camps fenced by barbed wire. Men of the same status were shot on the spot."

Alex Rodzevitch, a slave laborer in Austria, reported that the Russians sought to induce displaced cit-

GERMAN PRISONERS GO TO SCHOOL AND LEARN DEMOCRACY

Fort Benning, Ga., Oct. 13 (AP)—German prisoners of war stationed here have spent $12,000 of their own money to "learn about democracy"—and they like what they're learning.

To quote one of them who attends classes in American government: "We know democracy is not perfect, but we see you have something to cherish—freedom. We want it."

Each night, after the day's work in the cotton field, pulpwood mill, or peanut patch is done, the prisoners study the processes of American government. The school is the outgrowth of a petition signed by all but 100 German prisoners of war here.

CHARGES ABUSE OF PRISONERS IN EAST EUROPE

Justice Demanded for Conquered

Chambersburg, Pa., Oct. 13 [Special]—Former President Hoover registered a sharp protest in an address here tonight against "the committing to concentration camps in eastern Europe of thousands of persons without a semblance of justice and compassion." He charged that under the name of reparations, men are being seized and prisoners worked "under conditions reminiscent of Roman slavery."

Herbert Hoover

Speaking at the 75th anniversary celebration of Wilson college, third oldest women's college in the country, the former President asserted that we have become so accustomed to brutality that we tolerate this condition with little protest, adding that, "indeed, our own army officers are required to take part in that policy."

He warned that a lasting peace will not be secured thru harsh treatment of the German and Japanese people, and asserted that a just peace, rather than a hard peace or a soft peace is needed if another war is to be avoided.

Sees Less Freedom

Altho this war was to have been our second and last crusade to free the world from domination, despotism, imperialism, and brutality, Hoover said, it has not worked out that way.

"Now we find hundreds of millions of human beings breathe less independence, less liberty, less freedom from fear than before we started on this crusade," he said. "Their successful rescue at that time was the justification for our first crusade. Can we honestly say that we have not surrendered these peoples on the altar of appeasement?"

He recalled that before the war we protested the bombing of children, women, and civilian men by the Japanese at Nanking, the Russians at Helsinki, and the Germans at Warsaw and London. Yet the United States ended the war by killing tens of thousands of women and children at Hiroshima and Nagasaki, he said.

"Even if we grant that it was necessary it is not a matter to exult over," he said.

Cites Case of Children

Referring to the cries for "vengeance" that have followed the close of the war, Hoover said that altho the military castes and their weapons should be destroyed justice requires that we do not visit on the children of millions of Germans, Italians, and Japanese the sins of their fathers.

We cannot indict and punish 200 million people, Hoover said.

Without mentioning proposals to reduce Germany to an agricultural state by stripping her of her industries, Hoover warned that measures which reduce the economic life of coming generations to the low levels of an agricultural state are neither justice nor good policy.

The former President called upon American colleges and universities to restore the normal intellectual and spiritual losses caused by the war, and in this connection attacked the present draft policy of continued induction of boys between 18 and 21.

Calls Policy Destructive

By this policy, he said, we are destroying another crop of potential scientists, teachers, doctors, and other professional persons. The war has already cost us, he said, the equivalent of six annual crops of young men trained in the professions and the arts.

"It is not even intelligent of our military forces to continue depriving our future defense of these skills," he charged.

If mankind is to remain at peace, serious reconversion in the intellectual and moral fields is essential, he contended, adding that at present truth has been degraded and propaganda has taken its place. Conceding that propaganda is useful in war, he said it should not be tolerated in peace and that "there will be no lasting integrity in citizens unless there be intellectual honesty in government."

The responsibility for the idealism of America rests not alone upon the church but also on our institutions of higher learning, Hoover said.

"Such institutions," he said, "have loyalty to standards as vital as to patriotism itself. He added that colleges have the responsibility to proclaim truth and tolerance, to insist upon justice, and to awaken sensitiveness to wrong, selfishness, and brutality.

He expressed regret that "too small a part" of the young Americans who went to war are returning to colleges for training.

Good for Vote Getting

"It is dinned into us that this is the century of the common man, that he is going to do this and demand that," he said. "The idea seems to be that the common man has come into his own at last. Certainly he is a good vote getting attachment."

Hoover said he wants "this political common man" to have all the benefits of the American way of life, but warned, "If we are to have leadership in government, in science, in education, in professions, and in the home, we must find and train some uncommon men and women."

Hoover spoke in the open air from a platform in the court of the college's main building. He was introduced by Gov. Edward Martin of Pennsylvania who called him "our greatest living American."

"His knowledge of production and distribution and his great understanding of mankind and of the true social and governmental aspirations of the various peoples makes him inestimably valuable to the United States in these critical and dangerous years," Gov. Martin said.

Martin asserted that if the news agencies of Germany, Italy, and Japan had been free and open the chaos we have experienced would not have occurred.

"A great free people depend on free education and a free press," he said. "When government controls the press or controls education, the people will not long be free."

STRIKE CAUSING LOSS OF MILLION TONS COAL DAILY

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 13 (AP)—More than half the nation's 400,000 bituminous coal miners were idle today in the three week old strike of mine foremen for recognition of their union. Production loss was officially estimated at more than a million tons daily.

Steel output losses, as a result of the coal shortage, continued to mount.

In Washington, Labor Secretary Schwellenbach, who has been trying all week to get an agreement between the coal operators and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, said there was no change in the situation. The conference will resume at 7 p. m. Monday.

Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation said 10,000 steel workers will be furloughed by next Tuesday. Already 5,000 are idle at Duquesne, Homestead, Braddock, and Farrell plants, all in Pittsburgh district.

Cutbacks were being planned by other firms including Jones & Laughlin Steel corporation, Youngstown Sheet & Tube company, and Republic Steel corporation.

Miners idle were: West Virginia, 90,600; Pennsylvania, 61,033; Kentucky, 277,200; Ohio and Tennessee, 8,000 each, and Indiana 6,052.

Hess Asserts He Lost Memory Ten Days Ago

NUERNBERG, Germany, Oct. 13 (AP)—Rudolph Hess, Hitler's former deputy who is facing trial as one of Germany's 24 major war criminals, claims that he has lost his memory, it was disclosed today. Col. John Amen, chief American interrogator, said: "He says he does not remember anything beyond 10 days ago. As yet no official opinion, legal or medical, has been arrived at."

All Clothing Seized

"However, after passing over the soviet-American frontier they were made to take a shower bath, and all their clothes were taken away from them," Rodzevitch said. "After they came out of the bath they were given old working clothes or made to wear German uniforms. Men as well as women had to have all their hair cut off.

"People are being fed only once a day, and no one is trying to conceal from them that they are being taken to places for forced labor."

Valentine Galkine, who fled from East Prussia to American forces in Bayreuth, said he was in a camp of 10,000 "liberated Russian workmen."

"We were often beaten," he said. "We received daily about 10½ ounces of bread and a little thin soup. All men up to the age of 43 were transferred to a military camp where they were dressed in uniforms and trained. Educated people and unreliable elements disappeared rapidly."

Condition Described

Another picture of camp life was given by Vladimir Bouharinoff, who said:

"The camps mostly have no barracks. People live under the open sky. They are fenced with barbed wire. Food there is even worse than it was with the Germans. No means of transportation between the camps exist. People are made to walk the distances.

"There is often no food at the camps for several days. When epidemics break out, such as typhus and typhoid, the camps are condemned. No one is allowed to get out. There is no medical help and masses of people die."

BURGLARS GET $4,800 LOOT

Thieves who broke a front window of the Roosevelt Jewelry and Luggage store at 3208½ Roosevelt rd. took watches, rings, and bracelets, all valued at $4,800, Herman Gelboim, 1301 N. Rockwell st., the owner, reported to the police yesterday.

WOMAN FINED ON ADVERTISING FRAUD CHARGE

Madison, Wis., Oct. 13 [Special]—Mrs. Anna Carlitz, 63, Sheboygan, Wis., was fined $200 by Superior Court Judge Roy Proctor here today on charges of fraudulent advertising. C. W. Totto, assistant district attorney, told the court Mrs. Carlitz had advertised that the profits from sales of cosmetics and extracts were to be "used for patriotic welfare work." Totto said she actually gave the sponsoring organization, the auxiliary of the Sons of Union Veterans, only 10 per cent of the gross receipts.

Mrs. Carlitz told the court she solicited orders for merchandise by telephone. The sales talk informed prospective customers that the money was to be used for "disabled and wounded veterans."

She disclosed she took orders totaling $3,337 within a three week period in Madison.

LUCE DEMANDS D.A.R. REVERSAL ON RACIAL STAND

Greenwich, Conn., Oct. 13 (AP)—Rep. Luce [R., Conn.], in a telegram to the local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, today urged, as a member, that it draft a resolution opposing the action of the Washington, D. C., chapter in denying use of Constitution hall there to Pianist Hazel Scott.

The congresswoman told the acting regent, Mrs. Henry M. Brooks, that if "no such resolution can be drafted by our chapter, I shall be forced to resign from the D. A. R."

In New York today, Rep. Powell [D., N. Y.], a Negro, announced formation of a "people's D. A. R." as a protest against the D. A. R.'s refusal to let Miss Scott, his wife, use the hall.

Powell said the "People's D. A. R." meant "drive against reaction."

SECRECY HINTED IN HEARINGS ON PEARL HARBOR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13—The joint congressional committee to investigate the Pearl Harbor disaster came to life today, four weeks after its appointment.

Chairman Barkley [D., Ky.], senate majority leader, called a secret meeting and announced at its conclusion that public hearings probably will begin next month.

Liaison Aids Named

Barkley reported that the governmental departments concerned have appointed liaison men to cooperate with the committee by supplying the necessary information, as requested.

The navy's representative will be Rear Adm. O. S. Colclough, assistant judge advocate general. Lt. Col. Harmon Duncombe will represent the army, and Assistant Secretary Donald Russell the state department. Green R. Hackworth, state department legal adviser, will aid Russell.

Some Secrecy Possible

Barkley said the three departments have pledged their full cooperation in bringing out all the facts, but conceded that there might be certain documents bearing on the case that would not be made public.

He said that no definite arrangements have been made for the committee's visit to Pearl Harbor.

Boys Try 'Unloaded' Tank Gun; It's the Old Story

PARIS (AP)—In Europe as in America they "didn't know it was loaded." Two young boys in Lille, playing with the gun of an abandoned German tank, pressed the trigger, shattered windows for blocks, killed one girl, and wounded another.

RUSSIANS BLOCK ALLIED PLANS IN RULE OF AUSTRIA

VIENNA, Austria, Oct. 13 [Reuters]—Instructions from Moscow have virtually stopped the allied council for Austria from making further major decisions, it was disclosed today. It seems that the Russian representatives have been ordered not to discuss with the allies the urgent measures necessary to help Austria.

The deadlock extends over the three issues on which the survival of Austria virtually depends.

The Russian veto of the currency law condemns Austria to inflation this winter unless a last minute settlement is achieved at the next meeting of the allied council on Oct. 20.

Vetoes Barter Agreement

Veto of the Czechoslovak barter agreement at the same time, which would have provided a basic coal supply for the country in exchange for Austrian oil, jeopardizes the fuel supply for hospitals and bakeries during the next few months.

The Russians also have turned down the inter-allied woodcutting plan which was intended to bring some fuel to Vienna's civilians.

The size of some of the occupation armies is being discussed. One Austrian estimate is that there are more than a million Russian soldiers in Austria, but more conservative calculations put the total at about 600,000. British and American forces are known to be much smaller.

Billeted in Homes

Other estimates are that there is one foreign soldier or refugee for every four Austrians. In some parts of the country, particularly within the Russian zone, "lower Austria," this proportion is believed to be as high as one foreign soldier or refugee for every man, woman, and child. This large army is bileted mainly in Austrian homes.

In addition there has been large scale requisitioning. The result is that supplies, cattle, and crops in the Russian zone are running dangerously low. What is left is first earmarked for the occupation army.

There has been hardly any planting for next year. Women fear to work in the fields alone because of the large number of troops, deserters, displaced persons, and refugees roaming the countryside.

This situation is further complicated by the absence from the country of one generation of men. The men between the ages of 18 and 35 are missing. Vienna today consists of almost two-thirds women and one-third men—men very young and diffident or men more than 50 years old.

This accounts for the great labor shortage and the fact that six months after liberation Vienna, in some quarters, still looks like the morning after a heavy bombardment.

It has become clear that no plan for helping Austria can work so long as the country is divided into two contrasting zones with widely different standards of living, observers say.

Footpad Saves Bandit from a Useless Task

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. (AP)—Yeoman 3/C Earle C. Lenhart told police that after a footpad dashed away with his wallet, a second man approached but disappeared when the fleeing thief yelled back: "Don't bother him, I already got his money."

ONLY 1 AMERICAN IN KEY POSTS OF UNRRA IN LONDON

Britons Hold 11 of 14 Highest Jobs

BY E. R. NODERER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Oct. 13 — Despite the fact that the American taxpayer foots most of the enormous bill for the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration [UNRRA], the spending of money and distribution of supplies is largely in the hands of Europeans, a survey showed today.

Only one of the 14 key positions in the European regional office here is held by an American. The British occupy nine executive posts, with France, Russia, Australia, and New Zealand also holding one each.

The London office staff, which occupies half a dozen buildings in the heart of the city, totals approximately 800 persons.

Briton Is Top Man

The top man in Europe is British Lt. Gen. Humphrey Gale, whose title is deputy director general of the UNRRA. He is responsible only to the director general, Herbert Lehmann, in Washington, D. C.

The financing and accounting of the millions spent in Europe is in the hands of two Britons and one Frenchman. British Maj. Gen. Richard G. Lewis is deputy director general of finance and administration, with another Englishman, L. W. Le Gros, director of the division of audits and accounts. The director of the finance division is A. Morhange, a Frenchman.

The important post of director of public relations also is held by a Briton, H. B. Cummings.

Other important posts held by British subjects are: Dudley Ward, general counsel; D. H. Adair, director in chief of the missions office; Air Commodore P. Warburton, director of the division of organization and management; Maj. Joseph Grimond, director of the division of personnel, and Dr. N. M. Goodman, director of the division of health.

American Directs Welfare

Two other empire officials are the legal adviser, K. A. Aicken of Australia, and the director of the administrative services division, L. R. Lockie of New Zealand.

A Russian, N. J. Feonov, is deputy director general of supply.

The sole American in the group is C. Van Hyming, who is director of the division of welfare.

There are, of course, a number of Americans in less important jobs here, but the bulk of the 800 UNRRA employes in London are Europeans, mostly British.

Lehman said here in August that there was no attempt to enroll personnel on the basis of fund contributions. He asserted that the question was that of finding the best person for the job.

STAMP COLLECTION STOLEN

Burglars who broke into his home stole early American postage stamps valued at $800 but left a purse containing foreign coins, Henry P. Conkey, 5000 Woodlawn av., reported to police yesterday. He is president of W. B. Conkey company, 332 S. Michigan av., printers and bookbinders.

AIR FORCES TELL HOW LINDBERGH HELPED VICTORY

Taught Winning Tactics to Pacific Airmen

An article in the October number of Air Force, official journal of the army air forces, praises Col. Charles A. Lindbergh for some of his little known war service. The article appeared two weeks after the navy department refused to tell of work done by Lindbergh, who was a civilian technician in the Pacific in the spring and summer of 1944.

The author is Maj. Milton R. Krims. He points out the air war in the Pacific required tremendous extensions in the range of fighters accompanying bombers. P-38s had a combat radius of 375 miles by November, 1943, he says, and by September, 1944, their range jumped up to 795 miles. Col. Lindbergh was one of those who made this possible, says Maj. Krims.

New Ideas Introduced

"Something more than tactical surprise was playing havoc with the Japs," Maj. Krims wrote of this phase of the war. "Something was happening to the fighter pilots themselves. The old, carefree days of instinctive, extravagant flying were over.

"Technical experts and test pilots—men with cold, analytical, bookkeeping minds—were teaching them new techniques. These men, among them Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and technical representatives Joe Parker of Republic Aircraft and Frank Meyer of Lockheed—contributed new ideas, demanded a new kind of flying discipline.

"Fighter pilots learned how to fly according to a flight plan. They learned cruise control and the mathematics of gasoline consumption in relation to mileage, altitude, and power settings. They learned new tactics, the self-discipline of making one pass at enemy aircraft under certain fuel conditions, of not going downstairs to meet an enemy coming up, of going home if the enemy didn't come up soon enough.

"Made Results Possible"

"It was a tough transition for many a happy-go-lucky fighter pilot, certainly a minor revolution in his psychology of battle. But it was the beginning of the kind of thinking that made future results possible."

Painstaking research charted the possible mileage for a fighting plane under almost any set of conditions and methods of operation. Fighter range continued to grow. In October, 1944, six P-38s flew a round trip of 1,900 miles. Fighters came to be able to remain aloft for 7, 8, and even 9 hours.

Another October article reviews the application of skip bombing, the low flying, on the deck aviation attack which Gen. Kenney of the 5th air force asserts "instilled a spirit of offensive that dominated the comeback and the advances that followed" against Japanese shipping.

Known Since 1927

The basic doctrine of skip bombing, known as early as 1927, was put into practice in the Pacific by Maj. Bill Benn of 5th air force.

"He worked on the technique—timing, altitude, speed, angle of approach, delayed fusing—and then selected Rabaul for the test," the article relates. "Only B-17s were available for the tests. They were entirely inadequate in forward firepower and lacking in maneuverability. Benn was forced to go in at night in an effort to offset these weaknesses. In three Rabaul missions the skip bombing B-17s, never more than six on any mission, sank six Jap vessels."

CIO UNION SUED BY MILWAUKEE FIRM IN STRIKE

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 13 [Special]—Suit against the CIO United Automobile Workers union, local 409, asking damages of $205,000, has been started by the L. J. Mueller Furnace company, 1005 W. Oklahoma av., it was learned today. Several officers of the union are named in the suit, which charges the defendants with a conspiracy to injure the business and reputation of the firm.

A dispute over working hours has kept the plant closed since Aug. 31. The CIO union calls the stoppage a "lockout." About 400 workers are involved.

Defendants, in addition to the union with headquarters in Detroit, Mich., and the Mueller local union, are Thomas Pilachowske, president of the local; Fred Mueller, Edwin Kaczynski, Edmund A. Banach, Arthur Demeny, Harry Pelzek, and Valentine Pahn, members of the local's bargaining committee, and Walter Cappel and Lawrence Carlstrom, international represenatives of the union.

It is alleged that since Sept. 17 union pickets have forced nonstriking office employes to remain from work by threats of violence and that the company has been denied the use of its office buildings since Sept. 17 by mass picketing.

The claim for damages is based on the company's contention that it is being prevented from deriving benefit from the wages paid its approximately 75 nonstriking office workers and from the use of its office building and equipment.

MONTREAL GETS ITS JUSTICE IN TWO LANGUAGES

BY FRANK HUGHES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 13—In Montreal's unparalleled courts of law bilingualism is as important as Blackstone or the Code Napoleon and the first thing taught English speaking law students is "know French or starve."

To get a picture of bilingual justice, let us examine the recent trial of a suit for damages in the Provincial court, which in Cook county, Ill., would rank near the level of Superior court.

The plaintiff was a French Canadian. The jury panel was mostly French. Most of the witnesses were English. The defendant company, one of whose motor buses was alleged to have struck the plaintiff at a street corner, also was English. A physician was testifying.

The black robed judge spoke both French and English but the words he used came in French: "Et maintenant, continuez, s'il vous plait." Had he been expressing the same thought in English he might have said, "Go on, please."

It's Midwest, but Different

He was clad in a flowing black robe, with a white collar and dickey at his throat. His black, tricorn hat, the symbol of justice thruout British Canada, lay on the bench beside him. On the wall behind him a crucifix was suspended, the symbol of salvation and justice in French Canada.

The lawyers, who sat at tables just below the bench, also wore black robes and white dickeys, and so did the clerk and the bailiff, who spoke French with an Irish brogue. On the wall was a sign: "Defense de fumer [no smoking]." Except for these things, the 19th century, gray-painted, dingy courtroom, with its round iron pillars and four-pane window sashes, might have been any county courtroom in the United States' middle west.

The jury of 12 men—no women serve here—sat in a box on the judge's right. The witnesses stood in a box between him and the jury. There is no witness chair. One stands as one talks in French Canadian courts, and that applies to lawyers, witnesses, and everybody except the judge, who is addressed as "Your lordship."

Translation Mere Formality.

A defense attorney asked the physician in French whether the accident might not have caused more serious injury than his examination of the plaintiff indicated. An interpreter began to translate the question into English, but the doctor said "Non," before he had finished.

Nobody seemed to mind. The same thing happens when questions are asked in English, but everybody seems to understand. The next witness was a French speaking photographer, and the next an English speaking draftsman. "C'est tout" [that's all], the attorney told him.

A constable was summoned and he got into trouble right away. The defense asked him in French about where he found the injured plaintiff. He replied in English.

For the French—English.

"Respondez vous en Francais, s'il vous plait," intoned the judge. Then he told the constable in English to say where he found the man, without any relation to buses. The constable told in French.

At adjournment for the day, the French jury was given a warning in English against discussing the case outside the court. And the judge told the jurors, again in English, that the defense might conclude in the morning and that there was a ray of hope that they might get out of there the next night. All smiled happily. No translation was needed.

Let us turn to another hearing, this one across narrow Rue Notre Dame Est, in the newer, massive criminal court building, where sessions of the King's bench are more formal and impressive. There Doris LaGault was on trial for manslaughter, alleged to have killed a 16 year old girl with his automobile.

Rich walnut paneled the room and formed the bench, the jury box, and the prisoner's dock on the judge's left. This was surmounted by a shiny brass rail. There was no crucifix on the wall, but a British crown carved in walnut topped the judge's chair.

Spectators Rule on Prejudice

Since LaGault was a Frenchman, a French jury panel was called. English speaking panels are provided for English defendants, but most of the proceedings go on in French.

Lucien Gendron, defense counsel, who has freed his last two clients by bringing out conflicting evidence, signified to the judge, Wilfred Lazine, that he was ready.

Just before the first prospective juror was summoned the newspaper benches suddenly filled up. The reason was this: If a defense lawyer challenges either of the first two veniremen for cause, the judge appoints two newspaper men from those in court to decide the question of the witness' prejudice, and each is paid $5. When the first two jurors had been seated without challenge there was a stampede for the journalistic benches.

The court clerk had read the charge in French and was calling prospective jurors. He looked like a Scot but spoke like a Parisien. Atty. Gendron turned one or two veniremen aside, but the box filled quickly.

No English interpreter was present. When English witnesses are expected, an English shorthand reporter is called to sit beside his French writing colleague.

Two Policemen Guard Jury

Two uniformed policemen sat at the side of the court clerk. Another was at the entrance to the prisoner's dock. Two others were called and sworn in French to watch and protect the jury.

Irenee Ragarde, the prosecutor, stated his case to the jury, shoving back the wide sleeves of his black gown as he rested his hands on the rail of the jury box. He said La Gault had struck and killed Jeannine St. Michel while driving when drunk. All of it was in French, with no translation.

In rapid order Regarde called the child's father, a doctor, the autopsy surgeon, and a police photographer. Questions, answers, objections, and rulings from the bench were all in French.

Judge Talks Baseball English

The Quebec police officer who opened the door as the session adjourned for lunch said in French that he had been in Chicago 35 years before. "O, yeah," he said, "I talked English down there."

Downstairs, in the chambers of an English judge of the Magistrate's court, "his lordship" signed bonds and questioned applicants in French.

Then he turned to talk about the world series in the best baseball English. He, too, had been in Chicago. "Swell town," he said. "Montreal? C'est magnifique; I like it, too."

REPUBLICAN LEADERS SUPPORT DRIVE TO FREE WORLD PRESS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13 (AP)—The house Republican leadership threw its support today behind a "world free press" drive.

Rep. Martin [Mass.] leader of the 189 Republicans in the house, called a meeting of the party's steering committee for next week and predicted it will approve unanimously a proposal to prohibit use of American relief funds in foreign nations not permitting press freedom.

Specifically, Martin said in an interview, the committee will consider an amendment to pending legislation appropriating an additional five hundred fifty million dollars for activities of the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration.

The amendment was drafted by Rep. Brown [R., O.], who said it complies with a policy declaration of the American Society of Newspaper editors issued last November.

agent of the union, asserted that all the concessions so far have been made by the union.

ASK 307 STRIKE VOTES

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13 (AP)—Labor unions filed a record breaking total of 307 requests for strike votes in September and this month's tally may reach 600, the national labor relations board reported tonight. Some NLRB offices are doing nothing but taking strike polls, the agency said.

Affected by the petitions on file are 96 plants of General Motors, 20 plants of Chrysler, 51 of Ford, 56 companies in northern and central California lumber operations, 271 Chicago fruit and vegetable firms, 87 Michigan pattern making shops, 59 New Jersey silk manufacturers, and 1,390 midwestern trucking concerns.

Commerce Secretary Wallace believed labor could be granted wage increases of around 15 per cent in response to its 30 per cent reconversion demand.

Wallace suggested in a radio interview last night that a 15 per cent increase would force living costs up only 3 or 4 per cent. It might prove a useful measure, he said, to curb a deflationary trend that might develop eight or nine months hence if puchasing power drops off.

STOPPAGE AT HANGAR

New York, Oct. 13 [Special] — A jurisdictional dispute between two CIO unions was the cause of a three hour strike today at an American Airlines hangar at New York airport as workers of one union protested alleged company favoritism toward the other.

The CIO Transport Workers' union, whose members initiated the protest, are demanding that the national mediation board expedite a representation election. The union's rival is a unit of the CIO United Automobile Workers.

MILLWRIGHTS YIELD

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 13 (AP) — Approximately 1,000 AFL millwrights, whose strike in a wage dispute retarded reconversion of the automobile industry's assembly plants, voted this afternoon to return to their jobs on Monday.

The millwrights, who had been engaged in installing assembly plant equipment, voted to accept a 12½ cents an hour wage increase retroactive to Oct. 1.

CALL LUMBER PARLEY

Portland, Ore., Oct. 13 (AP)—The first stride toward settlement of the northwest lumber strike was taken today by the Willamette Valley Lumber Operators' association, who announced at Eugene, Ore., they would reopen negotiations with the AFL Lumber and Sawmill Workers here next Tuesday.

Pickets Meet Movie Actress

2 MORE STUDIOS FEEL EFFECT OF MASS PICKETING

Columbia, RKO-Pathe Latest Targets

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 13 (AP)—Movie strikers extended their mass picketing strategy to two more studios today while maintaining lesser demonstrations at two others.

The pickets moved in force against Columbia and RKO-Pathe studios. About 150 of them massed at the entrances of RKO-Pathe and a few workers, mostly office employes, entered. Culver City police said an automobile struck and bruised five pickets who confronted it at the gate, but otherwise no trouble was reported.

Workers Not Stopped

At Columbia, 200 pickets made no effort to prevent workers from entering the studio after police issued a warning against violence.

Herbert Sorrell, head of the AFL Conference of Studio Unions and strike leader, told the pickets: "If any of those goons want to hit the line, let them thru."

Meanwhile, at Warner Brothers' and Universal studios picketing was continued by lesser numbers. Sorrell said pickets would be kept at Warners's, scene of bloody encounters and mass arrests of pickets.

"That you can bet on," he said. "They used tear gas on us."

Display Picket Strength

Of the spread of mass picketing today to the other studios, Sorrell explained:

"We just wanted to show Warner's they're not the only bad boys. Some of these days we'll go to M-G-M. I flipped a coin to see whether it would be Columbia or Paramount today."

Strike settlement efforts proceeded today, with Earl J. Ruddy, regional conciliator for the United States department of labor, assigned to the case.

The strike started seven months ago in a dispute between the AFL Painters' union and the AFL International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes over bargaining rights for studio set decorators. In a labor board election, results of which were announced this week, the painters' union was named as the winner.

TWO N. Y. UNIONS VOTE TOMORROW ON MILK STRIKE

New York, Oct. 13 [Special]—Emergency measures to provide milk for hospitals and other essential users were arranged today by Mayor Fiorella La Guardia as efforts of federal and state mediation officials failed to shake the determination of two AFL plant production unions to proceed with their scheduled strike vote Monday.

Representatives of the two unions involved, local 30 of the International Union of Operating Engineers and local 56 of the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers, rejected invitations for further discussions.

Harold L. Luxemburg, the union attorney, said that negotiations on demands for a 40 hour week at the present wages paid for 48 hours had reached the point where further discussion was useless.

Three hundred members of the two unions are scheduled to participate in the vote, which will decide whether they will go on strike immediately.

Public Works Aids to Hold Conference Here Nov. 4-6

To discuss current public works problems, approximately 500 engineers and officials in charge of essential federal, state, and local public works functions thruout the nation will gather in Chicago for the 51st annual public works congress Nov. 4 to 6. Airports, surplus property, reconversion, and personnel problems are leading topics to be considered. The meeting, to be held in Hotel Sherman, is sponsored by the American Public Works association.

120,000 PACKER WORKERS SEEK WAGE INCREASE

Ask 25c an Hour Boost Thruout Industry

Demands for a general wage increase of 25 cents an hour for its 120,000 members have been made on the entire meat packing industry, officials of the United Packinghouse Workers' union [CIO] announced yesterday.

Union officials said their workers had not received a general wage increase since August, 1941, while the profits of the larger packing concerns had climbed 154 per cent over pre-war year averages. Negotiations with several of the companies have been started already.

Strike Vote Postponed

A proposed strike vote to be taken today by 400 members of local No. 44, employed as stock handlers in the Union Stock Yard and Transit company, was postponed because of failure to notify the labor relations board.

Completion of negotiations between union and management of the Cribben and Sexton company, stove manufacturers, strike-bound for seven weeks, was announced yesterday by Frank J. Hoenigmann, vice president and general manager of the plant.

Hoenigmann said officials of local No. 1114 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers' union [CIO], which recently supplanted an independent union, will summon approximately 400 workers to a mass meeting tomorrow and urge them to return to their jobs.

Agree on Arbitration

The strike started Aug. 27 when officials of the independent United Stove Workers' union refused to accept as members three foremen demoted by the company to their pre-war production line jobs. Company officials said the shutdown occurred when Frank Powers, union president, ordered the workers out without calling for a strike vote. In a subsequent bargaining rights election supervised by the NLRB, Powers' independent group was supplanted by the CIO union.

Hoenigmann said union and management have agreed to accept the decision of an arbitrator regarding the status of the three foremen. Another item of the settlement was the company's agreement to employ as workmen three of the six officials of the United Stove Workers' union, who were dicharged last August for violation of the union's contract with the company. The fate of the three others—Powers, Ray Ulm, former vice president, and John Halligan, a steward of the independent group—will be determined by a second arbitrator, Hoenigmann said.

NYLONS COMING AT 25c A PAIR, SAYS CHEMIST

Kalamazoo, Mich., Oct. 13 [Special]—Nylon hose of superior quality for women at 25 cents a pair were predicted by Dr. Hilton Ira Jones, president of the Chicago section of the American Institute of Chemists, in an address here today.

Dr. Jones said the new, better, and cheaper nylons can be washed, shaken out, and put right on without drying.

The price cut, he said, is inevitable because a recent development in chemistry makes possible the production for 20 cents a pound of an ingredient of nylon which until recently cost $2.80 a pound.

BRITAIN RUSHES MORE TROOPS IN DOCK STRIKE

Soldiers Unload Food in Various Ports

LONDON, Oct. 13 (AP)—Specially-trained dock operating troops were rushed back from the continent today to keep Britain's food supplies moving while approximately 50,000 striking dockworkers and their employers remained deadlocked.

These troops, coming from Germany and other parts of the continent, landed at Southampton, joining 4,000 other soldier stevedores already unloading food ships in various British ports.

Idle cranes were set in motion and trucks laden with meat, cheese, eggs and fruit streamed past strikers who have ignored back-to-work appeals from their union leaders and from the government.

Threaten Loss of Jobs

There was no violence. But neither was there any immediate sign of progress toward settling the dispute. Strike leaders said the shutdown would be intensified Monday. Employers at London's big royal docks repeated a warning that the men would lose their jobs unless they reported for work Monday.

A return-to-work movement was reported at London's West India dock where several hundred workers went back to their jobs, but this was offset by a threat of all ships' clerks in London to join the walkout Monday. Two hundred fifty clerks employed at the Royal docks already have left their jobs.

Five more ships arrived in London today and tied up at idle wharves, now lined with vessels awaiting unloading.

A ministry of food officials reported there was enough food on hand to meet week-end rations and said that, with more soldiers working on the docks, requirements for next week could probably be met.

Cut Out Exports

A spokesman from the ministry of war transport said the work stoppage had brought the nation's exports almost to a standstill. Railroad lines, wary of overloading congested yards, cut down the movement of frate toward port cities.

The strikers are seeking a wage increase averaging eight shillings [$1.60] a day.

Two Held in Attempted Theft of Light Fixtures

Donald J. Vikre, 19, of 1039 N. Butrick st., and Harold Shouse, 16, of 832 Lenox av., both of Waukegan, were arrested yesterday for attempting to steal six ornamental bronze light fixtures from the swimming pool on the former Edith Rockefeller McCormick estate at 1185 E. Westleigh rd., Lake Forest. The 100 pound, 6 foot fixtures, each worth about $1,000, were found in an automobile stalled on the estate grounds. Police Chief Frank C. Tiffany of Lake Forest said the men admitted the attempted theft.

LINER BREMEN BURNED BY BOY TO GET REVENGE

Captain Ends Mystery of 1941 Blaze

BY LARRY RUE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BREMERHAVEN, Germany, Oct. 13—The mystery of the origin of a fire that destroyed the liner Bremen on March 16 and 17, 1941, was cleared away today.

Capt. Heinrich Lorenz, who was staff captain of the vessel from 1929, when she was the fastest and classiest thing on the seas until 1938, said a 15 year old seaman, Gustave Smith, set the vessel afire to get even with seamen who were mean to him.

"It was Sunday," Lorenz said, "and the fire departments, which had been kept up day and night by air raids, had the day off. I was informed by telephone that the Bremen was afire and I reached Bremerhaven to find the blaze well under way.

Misfortunes Doom Ship

"The Bremen was lost because of a series of unfortunate circumstances. The first officer and I were both off the ship. Then there was the firemen's holiday. An off shore wind was blowing, the tide was unusually low, and when the fire departments got to the scene their hose could not reach the water from Columbus quay. We tried to bust a hole in the side and sink her, but that failed. The dynamite exploded, but that stainless steel was tougher than we had bargained for."

Lorenz said it took the combined admiralty and Gestapo investigation staffs to solve the riddle of the cause of the fire and they succeeded only because the answer walked into the chief examiner's office and confessed.

"Every one aboard the ship had an airtight story," he said. The investigating commission stayed in Bremerhaven for weeks, then could say only that owing to unfortunate circumstances the Bremen was destroyed by fire. The crew was dispersed.

"Gustave Smith, 15, a seaman, was sent with others to Constanza, Romania. He disappeared from his unit there and got back to Berlin.

"In February, 1942, he went to examiner's office and said that he would like to see the chief. He was told to come back another day. He did. Finally the deputy examiner got tired of chasing the boy away and asked what he wanted.

"The boy confessed he had set fire to the ship. He said that when every one went to lunch he set fire to one of many mattresses piled up under the stairs off the dining room.

Experiments Support Story

"Another commission came to Bremerhaven. It piled up 10 mattresses and set fire to the bottom one. The fire burned slowly but burst out into a huge flame after 45 minutes. The commission still was not satisfied and asked me to supply mattresses with covers on them. This time the flames burst out in 25 minutes. This timing coincided with the watch patrol movement. This seemed to satisfy the commission."

The boy said he had sought revenge but did not desire to destroy the liner. Lorenz does not know how he was punished, he said.

Scrap Brings Little

Lorenz had charge of the job when the Bremen hulk was torn up. The workers removed 7,500 tons of super structure. Her engines and boilers were removed for use elsewhere. The big generators and turbines also were lifted out. The scrap was sent to Essen. "A factory there paid 33 marks a ton for the scrap," Lorenz said. "It cost us 32 marks a ton to cut up and transport the plates, and so the navy got about a mark a ton for the scrap."

Lorenz said Nazi war leaders in 1940 considered using the Bremen and the Europa as landing ships for the invasion of England.

"I told the navy that I could take her across," Lorenz said, "but could never bring her back and would have to ground her on the British shore. It's representatives seemed to think that would be all right."

Plans to Retire

GRACIE FIELDS

BOMBAY, Oct. 13 (AP)—Gracie Fields, the Lancashire millhand who became Britain's favorite singing comedienne, said today she would retire after finishing the world tour in which she is currently entertaining British troops.

The blonde, loose limbed comic star, now 47, is the wife of Movie Director Monty Banks in personal life. She has appeared in numerous Hollywood and British motion pictures and toured the United States from coast to coast for British war relief.

"At 47, I am too old to swing my legs around," Miss Fields said. She added she would go from Bombay to Rangoon and Cairo, and then to the Isle of Capri, to take a three weeks' rest at her villa. Thereafter, she said, she would visit troops in France and Germany before returning to England for her farewell concerts.

"Then I will start playing house," she said.

MAYTAG HIRING WOMEN AS MEN LOAF ON DOLE

Newton, Ia., Oct. 13 [Special]—The Maytag company, manufacturer of washing machines and other household appliances, is turning to women for jobs formerly held by men as a result of its difficulty in recruiting male labor in competition with Iowa's unemployment compensation act.

E. F. Butler, public relations director for the company, said today that altho the company employed approximately 900 women during the peak of its war time operations it released all of them when its war contracts were completed in accordance with plans to return to its prewar policy of employing male help exclusively in its factory.

180 Women Rehired

In the last few weeks the company has found it so difficult to hire men that it has recommended hiring women for factory work, he said, and now has about 180 working on washing machine assemblies and in machining.

"Our employment recruiters report that men formerly employed in war plants refuse to accept our job offers because they can draw $18 a week unemployment pay for 18 weeks," he said in an interview.

"They bring back the same story every day. One recruiter kept a list for just one day and brought back a list with names of 102 men who are out of work but prefer the unemployment pay to taking a job."

Production Is Curtailed

Butler said the company is sending its recruiters to Des Moines, Grinnell, and Knoxville in an effort to get help, but that the lack of response has been so pronounced that reconversion progress and production are being seriously curtailed.

The company recently signed a contract with the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America under which returned service men who never before worked for the company are given a seniority rating upon employment dating from their entry into the service.

About 30 veterans have been employed under provisions of this contract, Butler said, and these men are starting their jobs with credit for a total accumulated seniority of 100 years.

Army to Accept Boys, 17, in New Enlistment Policy

Lt. Col. Charles C. Curtis Jr., commanding officer of the Illinois recruiting district, announced yesterday that boys of 17 may enlist in the regular army for periods of 18 months, two years, or three years if they have the consent of their parents. He said the war department has revised its enlistment policies in the drive to replace men with long service records.

JAVA PEOPLES' ARMY DECLARES WAR ON DUTCH

Poison Darts and Snakes Will Be Weapons

BATAVIA, Java, Oct. 13 (AP)—The Indonesian peoples' army, the military branch of the nationalist regime headed by Dr. Soekarno, issued a proclamation today declaring war on all Dutch, Eurasians, and Ambonese, the Netherlands news agency Aneta said.

The war-like Ambonese, inhabitants of the Island of Ambon, have furnished many troops for the Netherlands Indies army.

Use Poisoned Darts

Aneta quoted the proclamation as specifying that hostilities would begin at sunset. The order added:

"The weapons of war are all kinds of firearms, also poison, poisoned darts, and arrows, all methods of arson and any kind of wild animals, as for instance snakes.

"Guerrilla warfare will be stepped up by economic warfare. No food may be sold to any enemy. The markets will be strictly guarded, and our enemies will be severely punished."

Natives Seize Japs

SINGAPORE, Oct. 13 [Reuters]—Indonesian nationalists have imprisoned all Japanese troops in Soerabaja, Java, and have cut all communications with Batavia, the capital, a British naval officer who crossed the island and reached Singapore reported today.

"Japanese tanks and armored cars captured by Indonesian republicans are careening thru the streets driven by armed Indonesian drivers," he said. "The air field has been taken over and no planes are permitted to land or take off."

Cannot "Declare War"

LONDON, Oct. 13 (AP)—A British foreign office spokesman said tonight a proclamation of the Indonesian peoples' army in Java could hardly be called a declaration of war. Since it was directed against the mother country it appeared to be more in the nature of a rebellion, he said, adding that apparently only a relatively small proportion of the island's population was involved.

Soekarno Quits Batavia

LONDON, Oct. 13 [Reuters]—Dr. Soekarno, president of the self-styled Indonesian republic, has left Batavia, Java, for an unknown destination, a report from Java quoted by New Delhi radio, stated today.

CHINA FACES FAMINE, SAYS RELIEF CHIEF

CHUNGKING, China, Oct. 13 (AP)—China faces a winter of famine, flood, and economic depression and unless aid is received in time "suffering here will be terrible," Dr. T. F. Tsiang, director general of the Chinese national relief and rehabilitation administration, said today.

China's urgent needs, he said, were means of transportation, particularly river and coastal ships, medicines, doctors, and clothing. Thousands of persons, he said, were dying of malaria in Formosa and Kiangsi province and typhus is becoming rampant in Nanking.

Tsiang said food must be rushed to Honan province, where there is large scale starvation.

100 ANNAMITES, 2 JAPS SLAIN BY FRENCH TROOPS

Take 800 Prisoners in Fight Near Saigon

SAIGON, Indo China, Oct. 13 (AP)—French troops have killed 100 Annamese and two of their Japanese leaders in a push west of Saigon against rebellious nationalists, it was announced today, while the British disclosed the Annamese had been warned to halt "interference" with British forces.

The French began Friday to broaden their hold west of Saigon and eight French soldiers were killed and 15 wounded in an assault on a nationalist stronghold. British 25 pounders supported the attack.

Eight hundred Annamese were captured and will face court martial. One of the Japanese leaders killed was an air force captain, the French said.

Leaders Are Warned

Maj. Gen. D. D. Gracey, head of the control commission in Saigon, warned leaders of the Viet Nam [independence party] at a meeting Monday that any Annamese action against British troops carrying out their occupation assignments would be dealt with firmly, it was disclosed.

A truce between the Annamese and French, seeking to reoccupy the colony, was pledged in Saigon Oct. 2. Despite the truce, armed Annamese attacked British forces, Gracey said. A British officer, an Indian officer, and two Indian soldiers were killed when Annamese attacked an air field Wednesday night and ambushed a British reconnaissance party.

Gracey told the Annamese leaders that their professed ability to restore hostages seized by nationalists was "an admission of their inability to function effectively as an administration." Certain areas needed for controlling communications are being occupied by British troops, Gracey said, and Annamese who obstruct this occupation "will be treated firmly."

French reports said there were many Japanese snipers among the forces opposing the French reoccupation, and that many of the weapons carried by the Annamese were Japanese made.

A French token force still was fighting skirmishes today north of Saigon.

Puts Blame on Foreigners

PARIS, Oct. 13 (AP)—Minister of Colonies Paul Giaccobi, referring to "a vast anti-colonial current flowing thruout the world," said today France blamed her troubles in Indo-China on foreign support for independence movements. An official source interpreted Giaccobi's remarks as referring particularly to Japan, China, and the United States.

The French have insisted that the Japanese were largely responsible for the Annamite independence movement and that they secretly armed the Annamites. The French also have openly said that a few American troops have seemed sympathetic with the Annamites and in some instances h lped disarm French resistance forces.

Giaccobi said France had announced her intention of giving five Indo-China states the status of a semi-autonomous federation, with its own government and parliament. On the other hand, he said, France had no intention of completely relinquishing the territory.

SCHOOL PICKED AS BILLET FOR MARINES BURNED

TSINGTAO, China, Oct. 13 (AP)—A Japanese high school building, which had been earmarked as a billet for the 6th marines, was burned early today by vandals. Chinese police were holding 10 Japanese, including the principal of the school, as suspects. Apparently the vandals had objected to the billeting of the marines there.

The burning of the school is the only incident here since the landing of the marines, but to the north in central Shantung province, where fighting has been going on almost continuously since the Republic of China was founded 34 years ago, more railroad bridges have been blown up by roving bands of soldiers who claim to be Communists.

Observers said Communists in that area and Atchefoo, the only Chinese port in the Communists' hands, may resist any effort of the central Chinese government to take control.

BRITISH AGENT ARRIVES TO WOO MALAY SULTANS

SINGAPORE, Oct. [Reuters]—Harold MacMichael, who is visiting Malaya in connection with the British government's plans for a Malayan union, told a press conference here today that his function would be restricted to making contact with the sultans of the various Malayan states, explaining British policy to them, and seeking their coöperation.

MacMichael, who was formerly governor of Tanganyike and high commissioner for Palestine, said, "I hope to make contact with Chinese and Indian leaders, but my principal job is with the sultans.

He will visit Malacca and Penang first.

Chicago and Indiana Soldiers Get Silver Stars

TOKYO, Oct. 13 (AP)—The United States 164th infantry regiment today marked the third anniversary of its landing on Guadalcanal. Silver stars were presented to 1st Lt. Charles G. Ross of Lafayette, Ind., and Sgt. Jerome Gazler of Chicago.

U. S. Corporal Acquitted of Murder in Girl's Death

HIGH WYCOMBE, England, Oct. 13 (AP)—An American court martial today acquitted Corp. Leonard Dale Robertson, 23, of Tipton, Mo., of a charge of murder in the death of Betty Smith, 17, in a park at Marlow the night of June 24. The defense based its case on a physician's testimony that the English girl's body showed no signs of violence. Two army doctors testified that the girl's death resulted from an embolism caused by the introduction of air into her body.

205,000 PACIFIC GIs SCHEDULED TO COME HOME

Total May Rise If More Ships Are Available

BY ROBERT CROMIE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MANILA, P. I., Oct. 13—An estimated 205,000 American soldiers and female military personnel will be sent home from Okinawa and the Philippines by ship during October and November. Most of these will be eligible for discharge on their arrival in the United States. The figure does not include those to be returned by the air corps or Gen. MacArthur's headquarters from the same areas or any now in Japan.

This total, based on space aboard ships promised by the war department, may be raised or lowered as more or fewer ships are available. According to headquarters of AFWESPAC [American forces, western Pacific], the principal cause of delay in shipping troops of its command is lack of vessels.

Wounded Get First Priority

Wounded or convalescent patients and rescued personnel are given first priority in homeward bound ships. Men traveling on emergency furloughs or for other urgent reasons are given second priority, doctors and nurses third, and those eligible for discharge—by far the largest group—are fourth.

AFWESPAC also is responsible for the comparatively small number of troops still left in New Guinea and Australia. Some of these will be returned home direct from their stations when eligible. Others will come to the Philippines for shipment.

Between the middle of June, when the replacement command of AFWESPAC was activated, and Oct. 7, 110,000 men have been received as eligible for discharge. Of this number, 89,000 have been sent home, and 22,000 are awaiting ships.

Almost 16,000 former prisoners of war have been returned to the United States from this area, many by plane.

Orders High Point Men Home

Lt. Gen. W. D. Styer, AFWESPAC commander, issued an order to all units a few days ago that all men with 90 points, or over 38 years old, with the exception of Japanese language experts and a few medical and radio experts, be sent to replacement depots within 48 hours.

AFWESPAC officials estimate that when the point score drops on Nov. 1, about 106,000 military personnel will be eligible for return home and discharge.

The trip home by ship is from two and a half to three and a half weeks, and the length of time the men are held in replacement depots before being put aboard ship is dependent on when ships are available. The men usually are processed for departure within five days of the time they reach the depots.

Almost 500 men have reënlisted here in response to the so-called "red apple bill." Some did so because they wanted to change stations, others, to get mustering out pay; and some, with low points, because they think they will be discharged sooner by reënlisting than by waiting for the point system to come to their rescue.

MARSHALL, KING TO RETIRE WHEN CONGRESS ACTS

Permanent Five Star Rank Awaited

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13—General of the Army Marshall, army chief of staff, and Admiral of the Fleet King, chief of navy operations, are only waiting congressional action making their five star rank permanent, in order to retire, it was learned today.

Upon passage of the legislation, possibly next week, the two top Washington commanders will retire. King and Marshall already have signified their desire to be relieved of their duties. Adm. Leahy, chief of staff to President Truman, is expected to follow them into retirement shortly.

In the meantime, the Army and Navy Journal reported there is "considerable likelihood that Gen. Eisenhower will be selected as secretary general of the united nations organization." It has been expected that Eisenhower would succeed Marshall.

Approved by British

The service publication said Eisenhower already has "the backing of the British and French, while the Russians, with whom he has excellent relations, also would be likely to approve his selection."

Last December Generals Marshall, MacArthur, Arnold, and Eisenhower and Admirals Leahy, King, and Nimitz were given temporary five star rank. A bill making the rank permanent has passed the senate and is before the house, where Rep. May [D., Ky.], chairman of the military affairs committee, has shown no disposition to push it thru.

Face Loss of Rank

Should they retire before the bill is passed, Marshall would revert to the rank of four star general and King would revert to the rank of four star admiral. If they would leave their respective offices here before retiring, Marshall would revert to major general and King to rear admiral, their present permanent ranks.

With the passage of the bill they would continue to draw full pay of $13,500 a year. Retired at four star rank they would receive $6,000 a year or three quarters pay.

Public telegraphic communication has been restored between the United States and Hankow, Peiping, Tientsin, Shanghai, and Tsingtao in China, S. E. Hastings, superintendent of the Western Union Telegraph company, said yesterday.

TRAVELING VETS ASSAIL LACK OF TRAIN FACILITIES

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 13 (AP)—A troop train load of Nebraska and Kansas soldiers returning home from Europe today wired the Omaha World-Herald complaining that the train was without sleeping or washing facilities and that a change in destination should be revoked.

The telegram, filed from Newburg, Mo., by two officers, two enlisted men, and "400 others," said they left Camp Kilmer, N. J., Thursday and had been traveling on "slow routes."

Their destination originally was Fort Leavenworth, Kas., where they had arranged to meet their families, the telegram said, but a last-minute change was made and they are being sent to Fort Logan, Colo. They protested the destination change. It was believed the army made the change on grounds that Fort Leavenworth was overcrowded.

REPORT RUSSIA PUTS RED HAND IN JAP POLITICS

Gives Support to the Communists

TOKYO, Oct. 13 (AP)—With Russia reported to be taking an active hand, once inert political factions in Japan were consolidating rapidly today for a midwinter general election battle that may become violent.

Premier Shidehara's new cabinet meanwhile approved woman suffrage, lowered the voting age from 25 to 20, dismissed 4,800 "thought police," and abolished the 13 year old law under which 60,000 political offenders had been arrested.

Revision of Nippon's constitution was begun, and friends of Prince Fumimaro Konoye, newly named imperial adviser, reported that Emperor Hirohito was "seriously considering" abdication. They said, however, that Konoye was aiming suggested constitutional revisions at strengthening the diet without altering the traditional position of the throne.

Await Exiles' Return

In the elections, entrenched officeholders and their backers will be opposing a variety of political opponents who in turn are opposing each other, and the balloting is expected to afford a cross-section of public opinion rather than effect any real influx of new diet members.

Attitude of the Communists, supported, say American and Japanese officials, thru the soviet embassy, remains the biggest question mark. Tokyo newspapers report that local leaders are awaiting return of Japanese exiles—some of whom have been in Russia—before announcing their election platform.

Veteran members of the diet who constitute old line political party leadership took their first cautious step today toward reformation by setting up a research committee to plan a new party. Two new parties also are forming: Ichiro Hatoyama, old time politician, heads the "New Japan Liberal party," and Toyohiko Kagawa and Isoo Abe head the "Japan Social party."

Socialists Attacked

Hatoyama in a radio speech today attacked the Socialists as denying "economic freedom of the people" thru insistence on a planend economy. Kagawa and Abe earlier announced their broad socialist platform. A second Socialist party also was reported forming.

Yoshio Shiga, liberated Communist who had been imprisoned since 1928 for his left wing beliefs, is advocating "establishment of democracy in the American way," the Domei agency reported. Preparing for a finish fight against the Reds is Japan's new National Federation of Toilers, determined to preserve the throne.

Newspapers predicted that a revised constitution would be ready for submission to a special diet session in December, but first reports gave no evidence of any voluntary movement among the Japanese leaders for completely overhauling the document to realize Gen. MacArthur's goal—making the government the servant of the people.

Newspapers said Konoye's first draft altered principally the provisions making the emperor supreme commander of the now disbanding army and navy, and giving him treaty making power which Konoye would transfer to the diet.

21,600,000 Women to Vote

The newspaper Mainichi estimated that 21,600,000 women would be eligible to vote after diet passage of the cabinet approved suffrage measure. The paper Asahi estimated that the reduction of voting age would increase the number of male voters from 21,230,000 to 42,920,000.

Washington has notified MacArthur that Russian, British, and Chinese troops will join Americans in the occupation of Japan, his headquarters reported; but there has been no word on their numbers or time of arrival.

The arrest of nine officials of the Nanking and Manchukuo Japanese puppet governments by American counter-intelligence officers was announced by 8th army headquarters. They have been placed in custody of the provost marshal at Yokohama.

Nanking puppet officials arrested were Tsi Nin-tsou Wang, embassy counsellor; Chow Su-chu, second embassy secretary; Chen Shan Chi, Chung An Yuen, and Chong I-lung, third secretaries; Capt. Yuan, military attache, and Rear Adm. Wang Ching-wu. Manchukuo puppet officers arrested were Wang Jung-tin, ambassador, and Tao Yung-fang, military attache.

Allied headquarters today ordered a breakup of the Japanese silk monopoly and asked Japan's government for a report on present silk stocks and estimated potential production. Headquarters said it was seeking to learn the extent to which the industry could go on paying for imports.

The Japanese government also was told to revoke orders which would have resulted in a reduction of the mulberry tree acreage except in areas which will clearly be more valuable for growing food.

JAPS' FEAR HIROHITO WOULD BE SLAIN BY ATOMIC BOMB TOLD

TOKYO, Oct. 13 [Reuters]—Emperor Hirohito's decision to accept the allied surrender terms was wholly due to the use of the atom bomb, a member of the imperial advisory staff said today.

"Following atomization of Hiroshima and Nagasaki the entire population of Japan was in a state of panic, not because they were afraid to die but because they feared the emperor himself might be included among the victims," he added.

A rumor that Tokyo would be the atom bomb's next target was started by an American war prisoner, he said.

Immediately thousands gathered before the palace, imploring the gods to protect the emperor. "The imperial family was contemplating moving to the palace at Kyoto when surrender terms were accepted," he concluded.

John Markes, 58, of 1419 E. 91st st., who shot himself in the jaw with a revolver in front of his home Thursday, died of a heart attack Friday in South Chicago hospital, according to the verdict of a coroner's jury yesterday.

HURLEY TO TAKE UP ENVOY POST IN CHINA AGAIN

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13 (AP)—Ambassador Patrick J. Hurley will return to his post at Chungking after "a short rest," State Secretary Byrnes disclosed today.

Byrnes authorized the announcement after he and Hurley conferred with President Truman. Hurley came home recently in the expectation of resigning and returning to private life. It was assumed the President and Byrnes prevailed upon him to change his plans. He had held the post since November, 1944.

Hurley himself was willing to be quoted today only on one subject—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek: "He is a selfless patriot."

BELSEN DEFENSE CLAIMS HURT BY OWN WITNESS

Woman Volunteers, but Contradicts Nazis

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LUENEBURG, Germany, Oct. 13—A voluntary witness who, the defense alleged, had been prevented from testifying previously, appeared on the stand today and tried to aid dapper Franz Hoeszler, one time SS leader at the women's camp at Oswiecim [Auschwitz]. Her testimony, however, contradicted previous defense statements.

Twenty-nine year old Erika Schoepff was the witness. Maj. A. S. Munro was to have produced her in court before, but she had disappeared. Munro charged that the sinister work of prosecution witnesses was to blame.

On the stand today Erika stated that when she went to the barracks where the witnesses are housed, "two Jews told me it would have been better if I had not come."

Story Is Disputed

The prosecutor then rose to declare her description of what happened inaccurate. It developed that two of the women witnesses who had been at Oswiecim recognized her as the German forewoman, who, they charge, used to beat them unmercifully. They followed Erika because they wanted to find a policeman and have her arrested as a war criminal. Erika chose to leave town but then returned under the protection of British guards.

Her testimony contradicted Hoeszler's own. She said she never saw him when victims were selected for the gas chamber, but Hoeszler himself has admitted attending the selections, "but only to keep order." Erika declared that some prisoners working in the same bricklaying commando as she did had been sent to "block 25, which meant that they would die in the gas chamber, but Hoeszler took their names and saved them. They also saw a Jewish girl speak to him on the road and beg to save her mother who had been sent to block 25, and he saved her."

Took Jewels as Bribes

Germans in Oswiecim got more bread than Jews, even prisoners like Erika who had landed in the concentration camp because she refused to work in the Hamburg dockyards. Jewish prisoners, she admitted, managed to keep some of their jewels and some money for an emergency. Erika and her pals would smuggle themselves into the Jewish section and sell their surplus bread to starving Jews for their trinkets, and money in competition with the SS guards who also bestowed favors on prisoners who still had means.

Another witness was Hertha Ehlert, one of the accused. She claimed to have tried to help prisoners.

"Let Them Die"

Joseph Kramer, "the beast of Belsen," howled when he heard his former helper tell of his reaction when, in Belsen, she went to him after visiting one of the blocks where the smell was so terrible that she was sick. She said, "I told him that something had to be done, but he answered, 'Let them die. I can do nothing about it. My hands are tied.'"

A film which the Russians made at Oswiecim after seizing that camp will be shown in court Monday. The defense tried to prevent its showing because it is "prejudicial to the accused." They objected because "the Russian narrator who explains the scenes includes propaganda in his text." The court ruled that only a silent film will be shown.

'DON'T ASK QUESTIONS'

WIESBADEN, Germany, Oct. 13 (AP)—Adolf Merkle, who kept the death records at the Hadamar insane asylum where thousands of patients were killed, told a United States military court today that he once asked why so many Russians and Poles were dying, and was told: "Do your work. Don't worry about other things."

Merkle said he thought that foreign patients died of tuberculosis or pneumonia, and declared he did not know that they were killed with morphine injections or poison pills.

Merkle and six other Germans are on trial for the slaying of more than 400 Russians and Poles. Fifteen thousand German mental patients were killed as incurables at the "murder factory" before foreigners were brought there.

Willig, an elderly nurse, said "I assumed that, if the German doctors had examined the patients, it was true they were incurably ill."

GREEK REGENT STILL HOPES TO FORM CABINET

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 13 (AP)—Archbishop Damaskinos, Greek regent, said tonight that all his efforts toward forming a new cabinet had failed, but said he was nonetheless convinced the crisis would be settled.

In a message to the people, the archbishop said he hoped that all those persons who might be called to offer their services would not refuse. Earlier the regent had summoned representatives of the Populist party and offered them the assignment of forming a cabinet to suceed that of Premier Petros Voulgaris, who resigned Tuesday. He was said to have stipulated that Liberal party members be included in such a cabinet.

The Populist party members said they "declined the offer as the only alternative is a caretaker cabinet which will put an end to the crisis and conduct elections as soon as possible.

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND; BELIEVED HATCHET VICTIM

Pontiac, Mich., Oct. 13 [Special]—The body of a well dressed woman of 35 was found by a group of mushroom pickers today in a wooded section about 20 feet from a highway near the city limits. Sheriff E. K. Thomas said the woman apparently had been killed by blows from a hatchet and that there were several stab wounds in the body.

Coroner L. F. Cobb ordered an autopsy and said no indication of the woman's identity has been found thru examination of her clothing. He said the body, which was fully clad, had apparently been lying where it was found for at least two days. He said an absence of blood at the scene indicated the slaying had taken place elsewhere.

The woman was described as 5 feet, 8 inches tall and weighing about 140 pounds. She had dark hair and light blue eyes. She wore a two piece black suit, a heavy brown coat and brown shoes.

Red Cross Acts to Give Cash to Wives of Yanks

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Oct. 13—The American Red Cross today moved to provide relief funds for British wives of American soldiers. On Thursday night the wives in a noisy demonstration protested against delays in providing them with transportation to join their husbands in the United States. The women have been told that no transport thru army channels would be available to them until all American soldiers have been returned to home.

PERILS OF DEEP PUNY TO THOSE OF RED GDYNIA

Rapine and Rioting Too Much for Swedes

BY HAL FOUST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 13—Swedish ship captains—hard knuckled characters out of Conrad—have protested to their owners against any more calls at Gdynia. They say it is too tough for them—safe neither for life nor property.

Gdynia, in the former Polish corridor near Danzig, is one of Premier Stalin's World War II. prizes. Sweden, thru arrangements with the united nations, has been receiving slim rations of coal at this port.

The captains report that robbery, slugging, burglary, and rioting are common in Gdynia. The police are numerous, but they are young Polish Communists, trained in Moscow, and do not restrain fellow Reds nor Russian soldiers and sailors with manners like the khans. The commander of the city is a Russian.

Poles Rebellious

The Poles in the port—those who remain after the deportations to Russian labor and concentration camps—are in a rebellious mood, according to Swedish seamen. The Poles charge that the Russians have appropriated for their own use clothing and other supplies shipped by the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration for Polish relief. The natives shout at foreign seamen, taunting America and Great Britain for not succoring them from the Communists.

Two young Polish boys with revolvers boarded one Swedish motor boat, held up the captain in his cabin and took his clothes, a pistol, two radios, and two compasses. A sailor on guard also was robbed, of his duffle and blankets.

The captain reported to the Russian commander.

"Why did you not shoot them?" the commander replied, according to the captain. "Here is another revolver for the one you lost."

In another incident on another Swedish motor boat two armed Poles shortly before sunrise held up the second machinist in his cabin, taking his watch, clothes, and blankets.

Nevertheless, a ship is safer than shore for sailors in Gdynia, the captains say. Pistol and automatic rifle shots disturb the nights—supposedly celebrants in most instances. The Swedes know from personal experience that sometimes this shooting means fighting.

Swedish sailors never visit the city without shipmates, the more the better, even in daylight. Notwithstanding this precaution, they have been stuck up, have lost street fights with the Russians, and have lost their watches. They say the Russians cannot resist temptation when they see a watch.

One Captain's Story

One Swedish captain, who looked and talked like a man of veracity and of unimaginative observation, said that he had witnessed the daylight rape of a Polish woman by a sailor in the uniform of the Russian navy.

"She was walking with a Polish man," he related. "As they passed the sailor the Russian stuck a gun in the Pole's belly and he ran. The woman fainted.

"I yelled for help, but I have too many gray hairs to fight a man with a gun. No one stands a chance of winning a fight against a Russian in Gdynia these days. There are too many of them."

LAVAL RESIGNED TO EXECUTION EARLY THIS WEEK

Wife Bares Memories in Plea for Him

BY ROBERT SAGE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Oct. 13—Pierre Laval, three times premier of France, will die before a firing squad early next week, probably Wednesday morning, according to the best information available here late tonight.

Following a brief call by the condemned man's lawyer on Gen. de Gaulle last night, the government's director of criminal affairs left Paris by air early this morning to consult Justice Minister Pierre Teitgen, who is campaigning in the department of Finisterre.

It is believed that as soon as Teitgen's opinion has been transmitted to him De Gaulle will make his final decision on Laval's fate. However, nobody, not even Laval and his lawyers, believes the death sentence will be commuted, the execution stayed, or that a new trial will be granted.

De Gaulle is considered to have made his attitude clear last night when he listened in stony silence to the lawyers' appeal, and then without a word ushered them out. A few hours earlier he told his press conference that Laval would not get another trial.

No Ground for Mercy

Government circles can see nothing in Laval's record calling for De Gaulle's mercy. These sources regard De Gaulle's asking for Teitgen's opinion as a mere formality. They expect De Gaulle's final decision tomorrow, as soon as Teitgen's response is transmitted.

It is pointed out that Joseph Darnand, militia chief, was executed a week after sentence was passed on him. Laval was sentenced to death last Tuesday.

If Laval is executed, his wife and daughter have seen him for the last time, since he will be allowed no more visits. Meantime, shackled and garbed in the coarse wool uniform of a condemned man, Laval is reported to be passing his days in the death house writing his memoirs and feverishly smoking pack after pack of cigarets.

Tells of Married Life

PARIS, Oct. 13 (AP)—Gray haired, motherly Mrs. Pierre Laval broke a lifelong political silence today to plead for the life of the man she loves.

Distraught with fears for her condemned husband, she bared intimate memories of married life in an effort to show that Laval had sought to temper collaborationism and would have remained behind to turn power over to the allies if the Germans had not carried him off.

Mrs. Laval indicated that her husband turned to opportunism only after the Munich pact shattered his dream of maintaining a chain of steel around Adolf Hitler's Germany.

Earnestly, the 61 year old wife of the former Vichy chief of state told how she had spirited Jewish friends from the nazi occupation zone and smuggled out money for them by concealing it in her girdle.

His Childhood Sweetheart

She traced her life with Laval from the days when she was his childhood sweetheart in an Auvergne village.

"All Europe was with him [in 1935] when he wanted to encircle Germany. He made one front from Moscow to Paris, Bucharest, Budapest, Belgrade, and Rome," she said.

"But they destroyed it all in less than three years—the same people who got France into war so unprepared.

"They pushed Italy toward Germany. Then they drove Russia away by Munich. My husband was so bitter against Munich. We went to war without Russia, without Italy, without Yugoslavia, with no Austria or Czechoslovakia left. And today they want to keep my husband from talking. It should not be a matter of defending Pierre Laval but of throwing light on these questions."

"Receiver of Bankruptcy"

"It wasn't my husband who chose Petain," she continued. "My husband was not in the government. He wanted everything done constitutionally. He told me he was afraid of dictatorship."

Laval considered himself as "a receiver of a bankruptcy" at Vichy and tried to oppose the Germans while protecting France as much as he could, she said.

SUSPECT LEAPS THRU WINDOW TO EVADE ARREST

A man who attempted to cash a $154 worthless check yesterday in a currency exchange at 1049 Lawrence av. eluded a trap set for him by the cashier by jumping thru a plate glass window.

Miss Ida Cohen, 30, of 931 Foster av., said she became suspicious because the indorsement looked like the handwriting on the face of the check. She pressed a button automatically locking the front door, then called police.

But the check passer was suspicious, too. After trying the door and discovering he had been locked in, he grabbed his check and crashed thru the window.

BUILDS RAILROAD IN IRAN DESPITE 185 DEGREE HEAT

Three years ago the British tried and failed to operate and expand Iran's railroads. The only way to get supplies to Russia from the south, Winston Churchill, Averill Harriman, and other officials decided, was to let the United States try its hand. In August, 1942, in Cairo, Egypt, Harriman said to Col. John P. Johnson, "Man, you've bought youself a railroad."

Col. Johnson

Thus started another chapter of the fabulous career of Col. Johnson, who has been around the world two and one-half times since he was called to the army four years ago to supervise army transportation facilities. Before the war he had been a mechanical supervisor for the Santa Fe railroad, whose Chicago headquarters he visited yesterday.

Build Circular Tunnel

Col. Johnson supervised construction of nearly 200 miles of railroad in Iran in temperatures up to 185 degrees. His forces built a novel, circular tunnel thru a mountain. It was impossible to lay track along the mountain side, because a firm anchorage could not be gained and the track would not hold, so engineers bored into the mountain in a circle, with the exit of their tunnel 200 feet directly above the entrance, he said. It was done to gain height in going over the mountains.

The heat was not so bad in the mountains, but in the lowlands it was almost unbearable for white persons. Natives spent much of their time in underground caves which dated back before Christ, Col. Johnson said. It would get so hot that the rims of a man's sun glasses would blister and stick to his face. It was almost impossible to drive jeeps during the day because the steering wheels were too hot to touch. To sleep, the Americans had to soak sheets in water to wrap around them, and change the sheets four times a night.

Two Lines Constructed

When Col. Johnson arrived, there was only a single track railroad from the Persian gulf to the Caspian sea. He supervised the construction of two new lines, 70 miles from Ahwaz to Tanuma, and 120 miles from Ahwaz to Kharramshar.

One of his most treasured memories wa.. Christmas day, 1942, which he spent in Bethlehem, he said. All day long the bells rang out, 500 of them, he was told.

From the Persian gulf command Col. Johnson went to the China-Burma-India theater, where he was in charge of railroad, highway, river boat, air, and pack mule transportation. There he was beset by shortages of equipment, malaria among his workers, and a shortage of workers. Because he was among the first Americans to penetrate into India, he was in great favor with the rajahs, who gave him anything of theirs he admired.

Wears Massive Ring

He displayed a massive gold ring he wore, with a diamond weighing several carats in the center, and various precious stones in each corner. Other pieces of jewelry he brought back to his wife included a necklace with a 36 carat sapphire valued at $15,000, he said.

After a brief time back in the United States, he was sent to rehabilitate heavy equipment for the Alcan highway into Alaska; then to Puerto Rico, and then he was summoned by Gen. MacArthur to restore transportation facilities in the Philippines.

Facilities were virtually destroyed, and only 5 to 10 per cent of rolling stock and equipment could be salvaged, he said. Before new supplies could be sent in, sugar cane cars were borrowed from the big mills to transport essentials. Almost every bridge on the islands had been destroyed, he said, stations had been burned down, and railroad repair shops damaged.

Highways in Condition

Army engineers had rail and highway transportation nearly restored when he left, altho many of the bridges were pontoon or other temporary structures and must be replaced eventually. The Philippines had excellent highways built just before the war and most of them are in good condition again, he said.

Col. Johnson, who has just returned from the Philippines, will go next to Alaska, where he will be general manager of the government owned Alaska railroad, 500 miles between Seward and Fairbanks. A colonel in the reserve before the war, he will go to Alaska in his reserve status. His wife will accompany him, altho his two daughters, who are thru college, will remain behind. His home is in Kansas City, Mo.

HOUSE TAX CUT JUST A STARTER, GEORGE ASSERTS

Heavier Slash in '47 and 48' Predicted

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13 (AP)—The 5 billion dollar tax cut planned for next year is just a starter, Sen. George [D., Ga.] said today.

"Certainly in 1947 and 1948 taxes will be considerably lower, altho they still will be high when judged by pre-war standards," the finance committee chairman told reporters.

With hearings opening Monday on the tax slashing measure already approved by the house, George figures the bill can be sent to the White House by early November. That will give the internal revenue bureau time to send out new withholding tables and forms which probably will mean savings of 10 per cent or more to each taxpayer.

Greater Relief Planned

Almost immediately after this bill is out of the way, George predicts that congress will buckle down to drafting a comprehensive revenue plan for peace time. That bill, he forecast, will give greater relief to all taxpayers.

"Individual rates are entirely too high, and should and must be cut," he said.

He still maintained, however, it would be better to trim all taxes materially rather than cancel entirely the income obligations of 12 million individuals, as would be done under the house program. He conceded that "inevitably" some of the lowest bracket taxpayers would be swept off the rolls under almost any reduction plan that could be devised.

May Accept House Plan

George did not go into details of how taxes could be reduced without granting wholesale exemptions. In fact, he said, the committee may decide to accept the house plan and then go to work on a comprehensive tax equalization program.

George, who wields tremendous influence on congressional tax policies, made it known he still is considering outright repeal of the excess profits tax on corporations effective next January 1. The house bill would cut the effective rate of the levy from 85.5 to 60 per cent next year, and not repeal it until 1947.

If the senate should decide to repeal the excess profits levy, George favors keeping the normal and surtax rate at 40 per cent next year.

All Want Tax Relief

He indicated that the house decision to reduce certain war time luxury taxes to their pre-war levels is stirring manufacturers of other taxed items to demand reductions. Photographic supplies and pipe organ interests have asked relief, even tho their taxes did not go up in 1943 when the taxes were increased on liquor, furs, jewelry, luggage, and other items.

Senators appeared ready to take two house provisions with no questions asked. Those would knock out the $5 automobile tax, and freeze social security taxes another year at the present rate of 1 per cent each on employers and employes. Without such a freeze, the rate would go up to 2½ per cent January 1.

LICENSES ISSUED TO 242 COUPLES FOR RECORD DAY

The marriage license bureau had its busiest Saturday of the year yesterday when 242 couples applied for licenses. Many of them were soldiers and sailors and recently discharged service men. The previous high for a Saturday was 205 in June. Eighty-two of the couples went immediately to the Marriage court where Judge E. H. Harden, of Beardstown, Cass county, performed the wedding ceremonies. Thirty couples who reached the bureau after the noon closing hour were turned away without licenses.

Order Fairview School Reopened

[TRIBUNE Photo]

Miss Caroline Castle, spokesman for parents protesting closing of Fairview Heights school, and pupils of school after court ruled it should be reopened.

Pupils Hail Verdict

Chief Justice Robert J. Dunne in Circuit court yesterday ordered the board of education of school district No. 80 to reopen the elementary school in Fairview Heights, which the board had voted to keep closed this year on the ground that the school drinking water was contaminated by a nearby cesspool.

Parents, school children, members of the school board, and County Superintendent of Schools Noble J. Puffer testified during the three day hearing on the parents' petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the board to reopen the school.

Judge Dunne found that the sanitary conditions were those "of the usual country school," and held that any needed repairs or improvements could have been made by the board. William Meyer, attorney for the board, said he would appeal to the Appellate court.

SON CONFESSES GUN HOLDUP OF HIS OWN FATHER

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 13 (AP)—A young Detroiter who Detective Thomas Golden said admitted holding up his father at gunpoint was held today on an armed robbery charge.

Golden said the man, Franklin A. Hotchkiss, 22, told him he and Jack Taylor, 26, drove to the home of his father, Reed H. Hotchkiss, in Fowlerville, Mich., last Monday night. After asking the father to come out in the front yard, the detective said, young Hotchkiss and Taylor drew guns and made the elderly man give them his wallet, containing $85.

Young Hotchkiss said he left home years ago "because I didn't like my father." He made no effort to conceal his identity during the holdup. The father signed a complaint, also naming Taylor.

SCHOOLS TO AID IN COMMUNITY, WAR FUND DRIVE

Chicago school children and college students will take an active part in the victory campaign of the Community and War Fund beginning tomorrow when they will open their own drive to help raise $13,040,700, William J. Kelly, chairman of the fund's business division, announced yesterday.

The public elementary and high school campaign will be conducted thru the coöperation of Mayor Kelly, chairman of governmental solicitation for the fund; James B. McCahey, president of the board of education, and Joseph T. Gaffney, assistant supervisor of schools. Solicitation in private schools and colleges will be directed by Lyndon H. Lesch, assistant treasurer of the University of Chicago and chairman of the fund's education group.

Two more suburban communities, Flossmoor and Antioch township, have passed their fund goals, Stuart W. Cochran, chairman of the suburban committee, reported yesterday.

ARMY AND NAVY CHIEFS TAKE 6 ARGENTINE JOBS

Only Two Cabinet Posts Left to Fill

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Oct. 13 (AP) —War Minister Gen. Eduardo Avalos disclosed tonight that he and Navy Minister Venengo Lima each had assumed two more top cabinet posts in the reorganization of President Edelmiro Farrell's harassed government.

President Farrell

At the same time Avalos announced the lifting of press and radio censorship thruout the country.

Avalos took over the ministries of interior and finance and Rear Adm. Vernengo, sworn in only today as navy chief, became foreign minister and minister of justice and education. Thus the six portfolios of highest responsibility were placed in the hands of the two officers who forced the ouster Tuesday of Col. Juan Peron, vice president and former war minister.

Peron Under Arrest

Previously Farrell announced that he was retaining Commodore Edmundo Sustaita as secretary of aeronautics and Lt. Col. Marionano Abarca as secretary of industry and commerce and named Dr. Juan Fentanes as acting secretary of labor and social welfare. The last post was one vacated by Peron, now under arrest aboard a warship.

Still to be filled are the ministries of agriculture and public works, to which technical men might conceivably be named since the posts are nonpolitical.

Another development was the resignation of a three-man federal electoral court, in reality a government commission set up by Peron when he reorganized old political parties to his liking.

Supreme Court Issue.

It still was not clear whether Farrell would survive the crisis. After the former cabinet stepped down yesterday, the army said it had the President's resignation "for use at any moment," and the concentrated power handed Avalos and Vernengo was not regarded as a complete solution to the country's problem.

The main problem in the crisis is an impasse between political leaders and the army. The political leaders insist that the country's administration be turned over to the Supreme court, and the army wants to retain power until after the elections April 7, 1946.

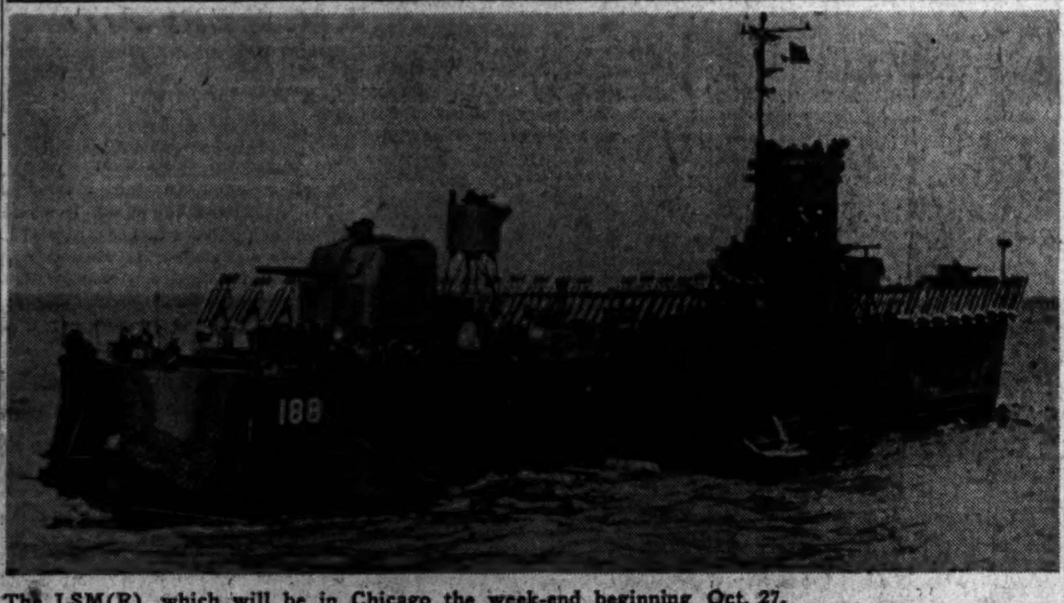
No violence was reported today, following last night's outbreaks in which one person was killed and 35 wounded. Mounted police, however, armed with rifles, patroled downtown streets. They normally carry rifles only in times of great emergency.

Report General Detained

Gen. Orlando Peluffo, who once served briefly as foreign minister, was reported ordered detained in the army's 1st division headquarters in Buenos Aires on the ground that he left his command at Bahia Blanca without permission.

Peluffo is one of the most active generals espousing the transfer of the government to the Supreme court, a move opposed by the new war minister.

Unusual Fighting Ship on Its Way to Chicago



The LSM(R), which will be in Chicago the week-end beginning Oct. 27.

Handles Rockets

Chicagoans will have their first chance to view one of the navy's most unusual types of fighting ships—the LSM[R], landing ship medium, rocket—on Navy day, Oct. 27, and thru that week-end.

The ship is now on the way to Chicago by way of the St. Lawrence river and will be on inspection at a dock on the south bank of the Chicago river, just west of Michigan av. bridge. The vessel is equipped with a powerful array of rocket launchers, mortars, a five inch gun, and anti-aircraft batteries.

The announcement that it would be here was made by Barrett Wendell, president of the Chicago council of the Navy League of the United States, which is sponsoring the ship's appearance here.

PAYS HIS $50,000 TO LEAVE JAIL, GOES RIGHT BACK

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 13 (AP)—Atlanta's Anti-Alimony Allen finished paying alimony of $50,000 to get out of jail and came right back because he said he couldn't find a hotel with a vacant room.

Seventy-two year old E. W. Allen forked over $21,295 yesterday, the balance on the alimony item, court costs, lawyers fees, and a $12,000 fund to insure income of $200 per month to his former wife. This ended a 14 month struggle, during which Allen preferred jail to paying.

Sheriff A. B. Foster said Allen left jail in the afternoon and was back before nightfall, declaring he could not find hotel accommodations.

Jailer Hugo Cromer refused to give Allen free room and board any longer. He is busy calling hotels himself, trying to get Allen a place to stay.

Allen operated a loan company before he went to jail.

WARNS RESORT OWNERS OF RACE FOR TOURISTS

Madison, Wis., Oct. 13 [Special]—Alvin Koerner, Manitowish resort owner, warned 100 Wisconsin hotel and resort owners here today they "must prepare for competition" from California, Florida, and Maine, which are bidding for tourist trade, he said.

Koerner spoke at the final meeting of a two day institute for resort managers, sponsored by the University of Wisconsin commerce school and the Wisconsin State Hotel association.

Martin Torkelson, secretary of the state planning board, told institute members a state-wide airport system would stimulate tourist business. Under legislation pending in congress, he said, Wisconsin may receive $1,500,000 annually for development of airports.

NIMITZ REACHES HOME, DRIVING TEAM OF HORSES

Kerrville, Tex., Oct. 13 (AP)—Driving a span of two horses pulling a buckboard, Fleet Adm. Nimitz returned today to this town where he spent his boyhood.

Texas ranch folk roared a welcome as Adm. Nimitz headed a parade down main street. Flanking the buckboard were cowboys in working clothes. Seated with the admiral on the front seat of the vehicle was Gov. Coke Stevenson.

Homefolks stopped Nimitz's police escorted cavalcade outside the city limits and the admiral was handed over into the buckboard after greeting his brother, Otto Nimitz, a retired naval captain.

24 U. S. QUEENS TO SWEETEN AN EDEN IN FRANCE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Oct. 13—The French ministry of agriculture today issued an edict of no fraternization between French bees and 24 American queen bees that arrived in Marseille by plane Thursday in regal splendor. Since the Yank queens are far more fertile than the emaciated hybrid French species, they are to be kept strictly off limits, probably in a garden of Eden like an island near Toulon, where there are no native honey begetters.

Uncle Sam sent prize winning Alabama queens to put the war ravaged bee industry back on its feet. Pierre Pinquet, president of the Rhone valley bee keepers, said the American queens are the healthiest and purest he has ever seen. "They are perfect specimens," he enthused. "W eare very grateful indeed. We hope to develop a pure Dixie strain and by next season we expect our honey industry to start buzzing again."

Lt. David Gulvin Senan Nastle, New York, the American queens' pilot, revealed they traveled in a 9 inch square crate, and were not at all upset during the trans-Atlantic flight. "Each queen bee," he explained, "was accompanied by her domain worker bees, which fed and kept her warm during the journey."

GI STYLE SHOW TO BE GIVEN AT SERVICE CENTER

The State Street council announced yesterday that its member department stores will stage a GI fashion show with GI models at the Chicago service men's center, 430 S. Michigan av., at 3 p. m. next Sunday.

The show, reputedly the first of its kind in the country, is to show an estimated 3,000 service men guests how they can manage to put a wardrobe together, despite the limited supply of "civvies" available, even in the State st. stores, which boast the widest variety in the world.

Olsen and Johnson, stars of "Laffing Room Only," will act as gagmasters for the fashion show. The veterans who act as models will receive a complete ensemble of clothes by the council, including overcoat, hat, suit, shirt, tie, socks, shoes and accessories.

HUNGARIAN VOTE HELD REJECTION OF RED IDEOLOGY

Report Many Embittered by Looting and Rape

BY HENRY WALES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Oct. 12 [Delayed]—Hungarian newspapers, printed under lynx eyed Red army censorship, are publishing articles to explain—without affronting Russian military authorities—why the Communists were so badly beaten in Sunday's municipal elections. However, editorial and news writers in conversations agree almost unanimously that first hand observation of the Russians and communism disillusioned many thousands in Budapest whose previous knowledge of Marxism and the Reds had been theoretical.

"Twenty-five to 35 per cent of the city factory workers listed as supporting the Magyar and Communist parties abstained from voting or cast ballots elsewhere," said my informants. "They have become embittered against the Russians and the entire Red system since the occupation with its inevitable looting, rape and crime and furthermore they were impressed by the lack of organization and efficiency of the Russians, as they have witnessed."

Another factor in the Reds' defeat was the heavy women's vote, cast solidly against the extreme leftists and largely for the "Small Holdings" party.

Mostly Pious People

"The type of woman who bothers to vote is conservative," Budapest editors said, "and when women think enough about politics to go to the polls they balk at radical and extreme parties. Furthermore the "Small Holdings" party obtained a heavy vote from the Democratic People's party, which is a newly organized, strong Catholic party and was not permitted to participate in the election. Remember, the mass of Hungarians are a pious people, strongly attached to the church and remembering the precepts taught by their parents and in parochial schools during generations."

Thirty-eight year old Dr. Istvan Baranovics emerges from the elections as a potential strong man in Hungary after seizing the Catholic leadership from Josef Palffy because Palffy was divorced.

Baranovics muscled into the political arena as the tutor of young Hungarian aristocrats, including the son of Jagyula Dessewffy, thereby becoming the editor of a Dessewffy newspaper. Dessewffy persuaded Zoltan Tildy, leader of the small Peasants' party, to support Baranovics rather than risk splitting the Catholic vote.

Baranovics' platform was a thinly veiled challenge to bolshevism, with the following planks: Opposition to state omnipotence or class and party hegemony or racial imperialism and respect for private property. As a sop to the Reds it provides for nationalization of industry where the public welfare is benefited. It also approves of land reform and strengthening of the position of the landed peasantry.

Stops in Chicago

Mary Pickford, in Chicago yesterday.

Mary Pickford, motion picture star who now is a director and producer with United Artists corporation, stopped in Chicago yesterday en route from New York City to the west coast, where she will direct production of three new films, including the movie version of "One Touch of Venus." She was met at the train by a Chicago friend, Mrs. Harold Webster, 1320 N. State parkway. Miss Pickford left late in the day for Kansas City, where she will be joined by her husband, Buddy Rogers, who has been visiting his home in Kansas.

TWO THIRDS LACK ENOUGH TO EAT, SAYS ANDERSON

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13 (AP)—Agriculture Secretary Anderson said tonight the new international food agency faces "one towering fact"—that two out of every three people in the world don't get enough to eat.

But he and other experts agreed that the new united nations food and agriculture organization can do something about it by starting a war against hunger and want. The new war begins when the organization gets going next week in Quebec.

Anderson told about it in a broadcast with Lester B. Pearson, Canadian ambassador to the United States, and Gove Hambidge. Pearson has been chairman and Hambidge secretary of the commission which has been getting ready for the birth of FAO. The food and agriculture organization will be a sort of international department of agriculture, Pearson said.

Chinese Reds Endorse Accord with Chungking

CHUNGKING, China, Oct. 13 (AP)—The Chinese Communist central executive committee has endorsed all decisions reached in the unity talks held recently in Chungking, a message reaching here from the communist stronghold at Yenan said today. The message spiked rumors that the Communist headquarters had considered Mao Tse-Tung, who represented them, went too far in reaching an agreement with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Demand Report by Japs on Activities in Fishing

TOKYO, Oct. 13 (AP)—Allied headquarters demanded of the Japanese government today a complete report on Japanese fishing activities in Philippines waters from 1939 to the present. Headquarters said it sought information on the types of boats used and their personnel, technical methods, and ultimate disposition of the boats.

'WESTERN BLOC' BETRAYS WORLD, SAYS WOMAN RED

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

BUCHAREST, Romania, Oct. 11 [Delayed]—Anna Pauker, one of the Romanian Communist party's leaders, accused the western powers today of "betrayal of the world." In an address she said the "western bloc" is directed against soviet Russia tho the people of France and Britain do not feel that way.

In Romania, she said, the people have seen the folly of that attitude and devoted themselves to the fight against fascism. Romania's Communists want a union between the people and the government, between the government and the king.

She attacked persons who see the atomic bomb only as a possible instrument of power politics, and said it should be a tool for improving man's lot, not a secret weapon to be guarded.

EXPECT ATTLEE TO OFFER PLAN FOR PALESTINE

Compromise on Demands of Jews Seen

LONDON, Oct. 13 (AP)—Prime minister Attlee is expected to propose a compromise within a fortnight to forestall the possibility of serious outbreaks in Palestine, official quarters said tonight.

An informed source predicted the prime minister would offer to allow 1,500 to 2,000 Jews to enter Palestine monthly, under an interim setup.

The cabinet was reported debating the question.

Zionists said that the admission of 2,000 a month would be little more than a drop in the bucket.

There is a considerable difference of opinion within the British government, with the foreign office interested principally in keeping peace in the Arab world, and the colonial office inclined to favor Jewish demands for lifting immigration and landowning restrictions.

Favors Stop-Gap Plan

Informed sources gave these three reasons for Attlee's desire to work a stop-gap plan, pending a long range program:

1. Zionists assert that many of the 1,250,000 Jews estimated to be in central and southeastern Europe will die if they are all forced to remain on the continent this winter. Only about 3,000 Jewish immigration permits remain to be distributed under a 1939 white paper which, Zionists insist, should be immediately abrogated.

2. Jews and Arabs in Palestine are armed, and growing tension increases the possibility of serious violence.

3. Britain must prepare to turn the mandate into a united nations trusteeship.

Suggestions for partition of Palestine into separate Arab and Jewish states apparently have been abandoned, because of objections from both sides.

All Quiet in Palestine

JERUSALEM, Oct. 13 (AP)—Palestine was outwardly quiet tonight. British military headquarters announced that no disturbances had been reported in the last 24 hours.

There were signs, however, of intensified propaganda activities by both Jewish and Arab factions.

Leaflets were placed in mailboxes of Jerusalem homes today appealing to all Jews to be prepared for the new tasks "to which the whole public will still be called."

Rumors circulated that three small vessels carrying illegal immigrants had landed in Palestine in the last few days.

The government threatened collective punishment for Jewish colonists of Yagur settlement, near Haifa, if they did not reveal the names of citizens who forced police to surrender nine illegal Jewish immigrants Oct. 10.

The nine were taken from police after they had escaped from Athlith camp and had been rearrested.

JURY IN TRIAL OF DR. RUMELY FAILS TO AGREE

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13 (AP)—A jury failed to agree and was discharged today in the trial of Dr. Edward A. Rumley on charges of failing to turn over to the house campaign expenditures committee a list of contributors to the Committee for Constitutional Government. The District of Columbia court jury deliberated for eight hours before reporting it was unable to reach a verdict.

Rumely is executive secretary of the constitutional government group. Charges against him grew out of the house committee's investigation of Rumely's organization last year. Prior to his indictment, the committee cited him for contempt.

The government contended at the trial that the organization was engaged in politics while the defense argued it was an educational group.

Killed on Hay Ride

Robert Anderson, 17, who lost life when hayrack was struck by trailer truck.

Jacob Steinberg, 60, of 7409 Yates av., owner of a shoe repair shop at 2347 E. 71st st., was killed yesterday when he was struck at Yates av. and 73d st. by a truck driven by John Thompson, 45, of 4238 St. Lawrence av.

Joseph Pettinger, 73, of 5404 Dakin st., father of Policeman John J. Pettinger of the Desplaines st. station, was struck and killed by a hit and run driver at Long av. and Irving Park rd. He was a retired Wieboldt department store employe.

Einar Mork, 50, of 1514 st. Charles rd., Maywood, died in Westlake hospital, Melrose Park, of injuries suffered when struck by an automobile at 15th av. and St. Charles rd, Maywood, on Oct. 9. He walked with the aid of crutches. The driver was Earl J. Meusching, 136 Oakland Grove av., Elmhurst.

Ben Newberry, 48, Negro, 4925 South Park way, died in Provident hospital of injuries suffered Oct. 5 when he was struck at 49th st. and South Park way by a taxicab driven by Lucius Green, 30, Negro, 5176 Michigan av.

An inquest into the death of Robert Anderson, 17, of 6921 Normal blvd., who was killed Friday night when a trailer truck demolished a hayrack carrying 20 Parker High school pupils was continued yesterday to Nov. 20. Eighteen pupils were injured in the accident, which occurred on route 83 west of route 45 in Palos Hills forest preserve. The truck was driven by A. E. Snyder, 42, of 1340 Emerald av., Chicago Heights.

Kills Self Showing Wife Pistol Wasn't Loaded

Frank Spitzhuettl, 28, owner of a tavern at 4425 S. Wells st., accidentally shot and killed himself yesterday when he held a pistol to his head and pulled the trigger to prove to his wife, Ruth, that it was not loaded. Mrs. Spitzhuettl had cautioned him to be careful as he was removing bullets at the bar after the tavern was closed.

CHICAGO JEWS DEMAND BRITISH OPEN PALESTINE

More than 20,000 persons are expected to gather tomorrow night in the Chicago Stadium to protest continued British restriction of Jewish immigration from Europe into Palestine. The group will be addressed by Sen. Barkley [D., Ky.], majority leader in the senate, Mayor Kelly, and Lt. Gov. Cross.

Sen. Barkley recently returned from Europe where he learned first hand of the status to which surviving European Jewry has been reduced by Nazi atrocities.

With other national and state leaders, Sen. Barkley appealed to the Attlee Labor cabinet to lift the bars immediately for Jewish refugees from Europe who are seeking entrance at the border of Palestine.

Jews Sponsor Meeting

The massmeeting was called by the committee for justice, representing Chicago's Jewish organizations with membership of more than 100,000, to protest British discriminatory measures—even tho the British government and the Labor party repeatedly have assured world Jewry that Palestine is to be the Jewish homeland.

Prayers for European Jews will be offered today at synagogs and temples thruout the city. The day of prayer was called by the Rabbinical assembly.

Rabbi Baruch E. Rabinowitz, executive director of the mid-western region of the American League for a Free Palestine, yesterday called upon members and supporters of the league to give all-out support to a resolution introduced in both houses of congress on Oct. 11.

Action by U. S. Urged

The resolution calls for the United States to take appropriate measures toward the reopening of Palestine to the free entry of Hebrews and toward establishment of Palestine as a free and independent democratic state.

Rabbi Rabinowitz pointed out that establishment of Palestine as a free republic will allow the immediate transfer of the surviving Hebrews of Europe to their "oft promised land."

The Chicago Federation of Labor, over the signature of its president, John Fitzpatrick, yesterday sent this cable to Prime Minister Attlee:

"We appeal to your government to live up to Great Britain's pledge given the Jewish people to help reestablish Palestine as Jewish homeland and open the gates of Palestine to relieve the plight of tragic remnants of European Jewry."

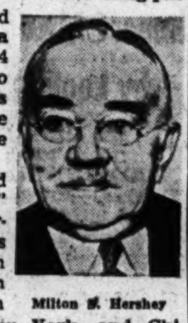
SHANGHAI, China, Oct. 13 (AP)—The army transport La Vaga, America's last evacuation ship leaving Shanghai, sailed today with 392 repatriates, most of them Americans from Shanghai, Peiping, Tientsin, Tsingtao, and other sections of North China.

MILTON HERSHEY DIES AT 88; GAVE RICHES TO BOYS

Orphan School Set Up by Chocolate Maker

Hershey, Pa., Oct. 13 (AP)—Milton S. Hershey, 88, chocolate king-philanthropist, died today, leaving a trust fund of 84 million dollars to "the orphan boys of America." He had been ill since Thursday.



Milton S. Hershey

"Late to bed and late to rise" was one of Hershey's keystones of success, which was built upon three failures—in Philadelphia, New York, and Chicago.

Then, in 1888, he went to Lancaster, Pa., for a fourth try at caramel making and sold out 15 years later for a million dollars.

Founded Industrial School

Hershey and his wife, the former Catherine Sweeney of Jamestown, N. Y., started on a world tour after he sold out but returned home in a few months. He purchased 1,200 acres of land near his birthplace and founded his chocolate and cocoa empire, the town of Hershey, and the Hershey industrial school for orphans.

The school was established in 1909 and Hershey set up for it a trust fund of 60 million dollars, which has grown to 84 millions. The school, for boys 4 to 15, has an enrollment of approximately 800. A board of directors handles applications for entrance to it.

His "Living Monument"

The thousands of his "boys" who were graduated from the school remained his chief interest. "They are my living monument," he said in an interview on his 86th birthday. Mrs. Hershey died in 1915. They had no children.

The town of Hershey became a show place in Pennsylvania, with its resort hotel, four golf courses, a swimming pool, a sports arena seating 8,000, a park of 1,000 acres, and a ballroom that can accomodate 4,000 dancers. The town has a population of more than 4,000.

With the death of Hershey, direction of the chocolate king's vast enterprise fell to P. A. Staples, 62, a native of Portland, Me., and a Hershey associate for almost a quarter century.

SCOUT POW WOW OF NORTH SHORE CLOSES TONIGHT

More than 2,500 Boy Scouts pitched their tents at Camp Fort Dearborn, Higgins and River rds., between Park Ridge and Desplaines, last night for their annual north shore district pow wow.

The scouts will give demonstrations in woodcraft and camping today. Several thousand visitors are expected to attend the jamboree, which will be concluded tonight.

Eisenhower 55 Today; Will See Football Game

FRANKFURT, Germany, Oct. 13 (AP)—Gen. Eisenhower will be 55 tomorrow, but he is planning no special birthday celebration. He hopes to attend a football game between the two undefeated army teams—the 508th parachute and United States headquarters.

DIES ON OPERATING TABLE

John Peterson, 38, of Carbondale, Ill., died yesterday while undergoing a throat operation in St. Luke's hospital.

All that is said of modern scientific research, especially treated cords, the use of rayon instead of cotton, and many other things, might also be said of the construction and materials used in CORDUROY tires.

Those statements may influence the first time purchaser, but it's the actual proven service delivered that determines the repeat purchase. And that has always been CORDUROY'S goal, — "to build tires so rugged, so long-lived that the user will voluntarily repeat without the slightest doubt that he is getting the best tire value available."

By far the bulk of CORDUROY'S business comes from Repeat Purchasers — the folks who KNOW that CORDUROYS give exceptionally long mileage and service. The next time you need tires buy Factory Fresh Extra Quality CORDUROYS. Then you too, (we'll wager), will join the CORDUROY Repeaters' Club.

TITO SAYS EX-AID SEEKS FOREIGN INTERVENTION

Denies Yugoslav Election Plans Are Undemocratic

LONDON, Oct. 13 (AP) — Marshal Tito has accused Dr. Ivan Subasic of resigning as Yugoslav foreign minister in order to give a "motive for foreign intervention" in Yugoslavia before the elections scheduled for Nov. 11, the Belgrade radio said today.

Dr. Ivan Subasic

The broadcast gave a text of Tito's letter to Subasic, accepting the latter's resignation.

When he left the government earlier this week, Subasic said he was doing so because an agreement he had signed with Tito, the Yugoslav premier, for the establishment of a coalition regime was not being carried out.

Will Hold Elections

According to the broadcast, Tito denied that this was true and told Subasic: "Everything I pledged to do in agreement with you, and everything proposed to us by the Big Three in Yalta is being done."

Tito made it clear he was determined to go ahead with the Yugoslav elections with the present suffrage and voting rules, and added that it was not his fault if Subasic's party and the rest of the opposition refused to present candidates.

Tito established a soviet-backed government in Yugoslavia during the war. Subasic served as premier of the exiled Yugoslav government in London until the two administrations were merged under Tito's leadership last March.

British Skeptical

Official British circles greeted Tito's accusations with skepticism, asserting that the idea of allied intervention in Yugoslavia was "farthest from any one's mind." British government quarters have expressed the opinion that Subasic's complaints about the allegedly undemocratic flavor of Yugoslavia's election plans were well founded.

Subasic did not attend the recent foreign ministers' council in London because of an announced illness. At that time there were reports that Subasic was under house arrest. Vice Premier Edward Kardely took his place at the conference.

U. S. Returns Danish Lion Seized by Germans in 1864

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Oct. 13 (AP)—Lt. Col. Barney Oldfield of Lincoln, Neb., has returned to Denmark the "Isted Copenhagen lion" which honors Danish soldiers killed in the Danish-Prussian war of 1848. Germans captured the statue after the second war of 1864 and have held it for 81 years.

BATTAGLIA IDENTIFIED BY 4 AS COMPANION OF SLAIN GAMBLER

Sam Battaglia, 37, avowed gambler and former leader of the "42" gang, was identified last night by three women and a man as the man they had seen in a Gary saloon on Sept. 28 with Alexander Chase, 38, a Gary gambler, two hours before Chase was found shot to death in Hammond after a gangland ride.

Sam Battaglia

Battaglia was arrested in his home at 567 Cabrini pl., yesterday on a Hammond warrant accusing him of Chase's murder. Sgt. Timothy O'Connell said Battaglia, now reputed to be connected with the Chicago gambling syndicate, had $3,000 in his pocket. He handed his wife $2,500 of this before he was taken to the detective bureau.

The four witnesses said Battaglia and Chase sat drinking together for more than two hours before they departed together in an automobile. Battaglia refused to waive extradition to Indiana. He will be arraigned in Felony court tomorrow.

Deputy Chief of Detectives John Warren said he intended to question Battaglia about the murder of Morris Margolis, Chicago bookmaker, who was slain July 13.

END OF CIGARET RATIONING SEEN NEAR IN FRANCE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Oct. 13—Due to large shipments of American tobacco and the resumption of tobacco shipments from Africa and Madagascar, the end of cigaret rationing in France is in sight.

Official figures released today show that since April American leaf tobacco received in French ports totals nearly 23,000 long tons—a weight equivalent to seven months' domestic cigaret output. A large amount of tobacco has been taken by the French in occupied Germany as partial repayment for tobacco seized by the Germans during four years of occupation—estimated at one-sixth of the total French production.

The cigaret output in France already is two-thirds of normal, altho the pre-war quality has not been reached due to difficulty in obtaining the 20 different kinds of colonial tobaccos which formerly were blended with American and 50 per cent domestic varieties.

BUDAPEST DOWN TO THREE DAYS BREAD SUPPLY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Oct. 12 [Delayed]—Budapest has only a three days' supply of bread available and unless fuel is received imminently electric and gas will be cut off, Mayor Zoltan Vas told Premier Bela Miklos today.

"The working classes have not received an ounce of cooking fat for months and there is no sugar for them," Vas said. "Increasing wages do not remedy the situation, owing to the daily increased cost of living due to the inflation of paper currency."

Miklos promised an investigation, but pointed out that Marshal Voroshilov has permitted postponing delivery by the Hungarians of 35,000 tons of wheat to Russia, due now under the armistice terms, until after the harvest and agreed to postpone delivery of another 100,000 tons of grain until next harvest. The premier promised to order police to break up the black market and foreign money speculation. Today the dollar was quoted at 14,000 pengoes, altho it was only 8,000 Tuesday.

TOKYO, Oct. 13 [AP].—The arrival of Maj. Alexander P. De Seversky in Tokyo as a special representative of the war department was announced today.

FRENCHMEN WHO SAVED U.S. FLYERS WILL GET FOOD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Oct. 13—Several hundred French men and women who assisted American flyers in evading capture after being shot down will receive food and clothing to be distributed to them by American army personnel, it was announced today.

The first shipments are expected to arrive at Orly airport near Paris in the next few days. The project is sponsored by the National Association of Air Forces Women of America with war department approval. The association, composed of wives and mothers of flyers, is donating the food and clothing as a token of appreciation.

Hundreds of flyers were hidden by the French underground and eventually smuggled out of the country across the Spanish border.

WOMEN BRING FOOD ISSUE TO FRENCH POLLS

Campaign Talks Ring from Back Yards

BY ANNE BRUYERE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Oct. 13—Stout doorkeepers who make speeches in back yards, maquis [patriots] who fought the nazis during the occupation, deportees who have returned from the German torture camps, university professors, mayors, and presidents of feminist groups—all these are among the hundreds of women running for offices in France's general elections on Oct. 21.

Mrs. Ernestine Ollier, 63, a doorkeeper in Paris' rowdy market district, says she does not understand politics but she has a platform.

Rotten Tomatoes Stir On

"I advocate lower prices for essentials and the cleaning up of the black market," she asserted today. "It is time Parisians returned to normal living. Once the housewives refuse to stand in line to pay a dollar a pound for rotten tomatoes, the farmers will deliver good produce at decent prices."

Another woman, Germaine Evreux, mayor of Perpignan, started something when she went on strike because she charged farmers and truck drivers refused to coöperate to feed the country. Fourteen other mayors joined her and decided not to reopen their offices for the general elections unless the citizens organized the transportation of food services to their satisfaction and thus proved their ability to govern themselves.

Women generally are enthusiastic about the elections, in which two issues will be decided. One is whether the assembly to be elected shall have power to revise the constitution; the other whether it shall be given power to name the head of the government and his cabinet.

Many Flock to Rallies

By day the women eagerly study new lists of candidates posted at schools, churches, and city halls. At night they take their children to crowded halls to listen to speeches by representatives of the numerous parties.

There are 436 candidates for 53 seats in the general council [legislature] of the Seine department alone. Sixty-four are women. One is Danielle Leroux, whose husband was killed by the Nazis and who was a deportee.

The list also includes Maria Radot, president of the Union of French Women and a Paris municipal councillor; Mirielle Osmin, a professor and formerly secretary to the cabinet of Leon Blum; Jean Vigier, a delegate to the consultative assembly, and Odette Roux, mayor of Sables d'Olonne, Vendee.

FORCED BY ROBBER TO REMOVE PANTS

Robert Dwyer, 23, of 6460 University av., a milk wagon driver, told police he was robbed of $114 yesterday by an armed Negro who boarded his truck in an alley in the rear of 5327 Wentworth av. and forced him to remove his trousers.

FATHER OF 3 ADMITS RAPE OF GIRL, 16, IN FOREST PRESERVE

Walter Clyde De Frates, 25, of 8251 Morgan st., married and father of three children, confessed to Lt. Max Ramelow of the Willow Springs sheriff's police station yesterday that he raped a 16 year old girl Monday night in an automobile in the Palos Hills forest preserve after threatening her with a revolver.

Walter De Frates.

De Frates was arrested when the girl saw him driving in his car Friday night and reported the license number to police. A watch had been kept at her home by police since she reported the attack. De Frates had told her he would see her again.

The girl said De Frates first met her in a 5 and 10 cent store on the south side where she is employed. He offered to find her a better job, she said, and she accepted a ride with him after work. Lt. Ramelow said De Frates told him he was convicted on a sex crime in September, 1943, and placed on probation for two years.

HOW KING VICTOR ESCAPED NAZIS ON BOX OF FISH

BY P. E. BRIQUET
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

CHIASSO, Switzerland, Oct. 13—New facts about King Victor Emmanuel's escape from the Germans on the Adriatic coast at Ortona near Pescara Sept. 10, 1943, have been revealed by an eyewitness account in the Milan newspaper Italia Libera.

"About 9 p. m. on Sept. 9, 1943," the story relates, "four motor boats of the Italian navy, the Niccolina, Anna, Littorio, and Dolia, were ordered made ready immediately to put to sea and transport the king and his court to a battleship in the small harbor.

"At 10 p. m. a motor procession arrived, preceded by an army motorcyclist covered with dust. The king, queen, and Crown Prince Umberto got out of a large black car. The other cars were loaded with courtiers, admirals, and generals. All seemed anxious and carried on a conversation in low voices.

Warship Is Late

"Under a coat of military gray-green the king was wearing the uniform of the supreme commander of the army. Umberto would not mingle with the group surrounding the royal personages, but remained apart. Not long before, at the castle of the Duchess Bovino near Creccio, he had had a long discussion with his father. The subject remained secret, but the intervention of Pietro Badoglio became necessary.

"The awaited warship did not appear until 1:15 a. m. Forgetting all etiquet, Victor Emmanuel ordered a life boat to put out from the Dolia immediately for the warship to find out how many could be taken aboard. The reply came after half an hour that there was room for 30.

"There was a grotesque scene. Every one hurried about in the confusion, appealing to court etiquet to obtain a seat in the life boat.

Sits on Fish

"A lusty fisherman seized Victor Emmanuel and lifted him safely onto a box filled with fish. The queen shared the same fate, but the fisherman had to work harder because the big woman constantly yelled from fear.

"When both fleeing sovereigns were at last seated upon the evil smelling, improvised throne the courtiers started embarking. First came Badoglio and an admiral, then 60 other generals, but most of them were obliged to remain on the shore and fled toward Chieti.

"As dawn of Sept. 10, 1943, came, the first German motorcyclist appeared in Ortona, having sought in vain for the king's party at Pescara."

Reports Two More Cases of Polio in Milwaukee

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 13 [Special]—Two more cases of polio were reported today by Dr. E. R. Krumbiegel, city health commissioner. This brings the total for Milwaukee for the season to 115. The new cases are from the south side as were yesterday's three cases.

BRITISH SEIZE SOVIET TROOPS IN A RAID ON BERLIN BLACK MARKET

BERLIN, Oct. 13 [Reuters]—British military police and German civilian police, supported by British armored cars and tanks, today raided a black market center near the Brandenburg gate—just inside the British zone of Berlin. More than 2,000 persons, including 100 Russian soldiers and officers, were arrested. No Americans or British were involved.

Several Russians tried to escape and were roughly handled by both the British and the German police. One Russian soldier who resisted arrest was seized by five British military policemen and thrown to the ground.

The arrested Red army men, together with a number of Russian civilians, evidently displaced persons, were taken to British military police headquarters. They will be turned over to the soviet military police.

DOUBT VALIDITY OF GI DIVORCES IN SOUTH DAKOTA

Court Rules Army Station Not Legal Residence

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 13 [Special]—Marital muddles for an estimated 600 soldiers who have obtained divorces here in the last three and a half years were forecast by judges and attorneys today as the result of a court ruling upsetting a divorce obtained in August by Warrant Officer Harold F. Walter, formerly of Chicago.

Circuit Judge John T. Medin ruled in canceling the decree that Walter had no right to obtain a divorce in a South Dakota court because his residence was in Chicago at the time he was inducted into the army Feb. 3, 1941.

Army Station Not "Home"

The judge cited a provision of the South Dakota constitution which says that "no service man is deemed a resident of this state in consequence of being stationed therein," and ruled that "a man in the army retains his old residence as long as he is in the army and cannot acquire another one." This is true even if he brings his family to the place where he is stationed, the judge said.

Attorneys said that hundreds of service men stationed at the Sioux Falls army air field have obtained divorces in the Sioux Falls Circuit court in the last three and one-half years. Almost all of these divorces, they said, are open to invalidation as a result of the ruling.

Valid Unless Challenged

A check of court records showed the number of divorces granted as follows: 1942, 154; 1943, 221; 1944, 231, and up to Oct. 1 in 1945, 213. Court attaches said that at least three out of every four divorces granted by the court in these years involved service men from the air field. Of the 819 decrees signed, at least 600 were in this category, they agreed.

Questioned about the status of these divorces, Judge Medin said, "In any instance where a court action is brought, I believe the divorce decree would be set aside. The divorces will stand, however, unless such action is brought."

Judge Medin took action in the Walter case on a petition to set aside the decree filed by Mrs. Dorothy Walter, formerly of 2711 N. Rockwell st., Chicago, and now a WAC corporal stationed at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Wants Husband Back

Mrs. Walter said in an affidavit that she knows her husband has remarried since getting his divorce but that she still loves him and wants him back.

She said Walter has been stationed at the Sioux Falls field since 1942 and that shortly after his arrival he met a woman named Virginia. He and Virginia lived together as man and wife, she said, and now have two children.

Mrs. Walter said Walter sued for a divorce in August, accusing her of desertion, and obtained a decree by default. He then married Virginia.

Mrs. Walter denied the desertion charge in her affidavit. She said she had at all times maintained a home for her husband in Chicago.

Hugh S. Gamble, attorney who represented Mrs. Walter in the nullification proceedings, said he will ask prosecuting authorities to bring bigamy charges against Walter. Walter was not in court and could not be reached for comment.

Evacuees on Way Home

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13 (AP)—The state department announced today that the hospital ship "Refugee" traveling from Shanghai with more than 200 American and other evacuees from the far east would reach a west coast port approximately by Oct. 20. Those aboard have been recently released from Japanese concentration camps after long detention. Also aboard are some 150 crew members from the liner President Harrison, which was lost at Shanghai at the start of the war.

10,964 on Seven Ships

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 13 (AP)—Seven ships arriving here Monday and Tuesday will bring home 10,964 allied soldiers and civilians, including 2,530 released from Japanese prison camps.

Carrier Bringing 1,094

PEARL HARBOR, Oct. 13 (AP)—The escort carrier Saginaw Bay sailed for the west coast today with 1,094 marines, sailors, and Seabees.

T. J. CALLAGHAN'S FRIENDS TO GIVE DINNER FOR HIM

Capt. Thomas J. Callaghan, who on Sept. 30 retired as supervising agent of the Chicago office of the federal secret service, will be honored next Saturday evening at a testimonial dinner in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel.

Many federal, state and city officials as well as judges, lawyers, and business men are expected to be among the 1,500 attending the affair. Gov. Green, Mayor Kelly, United States Atty. Woll, and Police Commissioner Allman are among the scheduled speakers. Several stage and screen stars now playing in the city will provide entertainment.

Capt. Callaghan spent 35 years in the federal service, the last 19 in Chicago. In appreciation for his service, a new automobile will be given to him by friends. Atty. A. Bradley Eben is in charge of arrangements for the dinner.

A NEW POLICY FOR AMERICA

The American policy in Germany, to state it bluntly, is to starve the Germans so that many millions of them, including children, of course, will die this winter. All this was implicit in the Potsdam arrangements, as we said at the time. It is confirmed by an army commission that finds that Germany, under present arrangements, can't sustain itself. The commission was concerned with the long term problem. Immediate prospects are even worse. The army reports that only 15 per cent of the industry in the American occupation zone is operating and that production is only 5 per cent of capacity.

This chaos maintained by force is the official policy of our occupation forces in Europe, as laid down by Secretary Patterson, Chief of Staff Marshall, and President Truman. The policy was revealed again in the removal of Gen. Patton from his position of authority in the occupation. Whatever the reasons assigned for ousting him, there is no doubt that he had been aiming to restore administrative order and economic activity. All this is necessary if the German people are to survive the winter. For this essentially humane policy Gen. Patton was removed. Gen. Truscott was put in his place on the theory, which for his own sake and the honor of the American army we hope proves false, that he will be a more remorseless killer, or at least more amenable to bloodthirsty orders from Washington.

The policy of deliberate starvation of a conquered enemy to render him impotent in the future is an old one in Europe. It has been carried out in Russia for nearly 30 years. Its victims there have been numbered in the tens of millions. Men and women have been murdered, starved, or worked to death in concentration camps by their own government, merely because they stood in the way of plans of the ruling clique.

Hitler took the communist book and added his own refinements of bestiality at home and in the occupied countries. Always the purpose was to starve and humiliate the defeated into helplessness.

This was the policy of the English in Ireland for centuries, as it is still their policy in India. The British, it must be conceded, have usually avoided the cruder manifestations. They have let restrictions on commerce and industry do the work of the firing squads and the concentration camps. Their system takes longer, but in the long run is just as effective.

But this is something new for America. American policy has undergone a great change since our country became intimately associated with its European allies. Elements in this country which have always made a great parade of pseudo-liberalism are crying for blood. When a very few men like Chancellor Hutchins have spoken out courageously against the new barbarity the fellow travelers have sought to smear them as pro-Nazi. Here and there the official policy of death and negation has evoked protests from the pulpit, but they have been neither numerous nor very vigorous.

No American with any religious feeling can face his God or his conscience if he keeps silent in the face of this policy, officially promulgated, of brutal and largely senseless revenge.

THE BUILDING CODE

Lewis Hunt of THE TRIBUNE has just completed an exhaustive and objective investigation of Chicago's building code. His findings have been printed in a series of stories in our news columns.

Mr. Hunt found little to admire in the code. It is unnecessarily massive and complicated. Altho the city council went thru the motions of revising it in 1939, it has been allowed to remain static since, thereby denying Chicagoans the advantages of new methods and new materials in the building field. It favors special interests and helps foster uneconomic practice by building trades unions. Its revision or amendment is in the political hands of the city council, rather than in those of building experts.

A fundamental defect is that it is what is known as a material code instead of a performance code. This means that it specifies certain materials or certain dimensions of walls or other structural members, whereas the better practice, followed in the majority of the states and cities of the country, is to require that, regardless of materials used, the members of a building must meet certain standards as regards strength, fire resistance, etc.

The aldermen of Chicago should reread what they said in a resolution on Aug. 5, 1942, when they permitted the more progressive standards of the federal housing administration to be substituted for building code requirements in the construction of single dwellings for war workers in Chicago.

The council at that time acknowledged that the FHA standards "reasonably protect the health, safety, comfort, and welfare of the public." What else is the purpose of a building code? The war housing was not temporary. It was intended for permanent use. Most of it was financed by 25 year mortgages.

There is still a housing emergency in Chicago. It is as true now as when the resolution was adopted that, unless the building regulations are made more flexible, there will be little residential construction in the city. Citizens will move to the suburbs or other cities. They will move because the Chicago building code puts a heavy and unnecessary burden on the man who attempts to build a home under its provisions.

The next move, it is obvious, is up to the council. Its members now stand as confessed blockaders of the low cost housing that Chicago needs so desperately.

THE RUSSIANS LEARN TO YODEL

A Reuters dispatch from Vienna the other day announced that Austria's claim to the recovery of the southern Tyrol probably would receive Russian support. At any rate, Austria wants the territory back. It includes the Brenner pass, control of which was given to Italy after the last war. The pass, connecting Italy and Germany, is one of the classic routes of conquest in Europe.

The Brenner was one of Italy's prizes and it was awarded to her in spite of the fact that the region contained a quarter of a million German speaking people. When Mussolini came into power he decided that these folks would have to become Italians. Those who didn't like it could go some place else, which a number of them did. The schools, courts, and government in the area were obliged to use the Italian language exclusively. It was a foreign tongue to most of those who remained. The charge was made that when Mussolini sent troops into Ethiopia he was careful to include a large contingent of Tyrolese in the fond expectation that those of them who were not Italianized in the war would not return to cause trouble.

Now Austria wants the Tyrol back. The Austrian government which makes the demand is under the Russian thumb. It may be that the Russians are acting from sympathy for the Tyrolean victims of oppression, but it hardly seems likely. Stalin is the world's champion population and boundary scrambler. His solution of minority problems is engagingly simple and direct. If you want the territory but not the people on it, you kill as many of them as may seem expedient and move the rest some place else. The treatment of the Tyroleans was mild, indeed, compared with what Stalin [with the approval, it must be confessed, of Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Churchill, and other eminent humanitarians] has meted out to Poles, Germans, Finns, and many others who lived in places which Stalin thought somebody else should have.

Naturally enough, Russia wishes thru Austria to control the Brenner pass. Italy, in spite of all that the British have done to make themselves odious to the Italians, seems to be falling within the British sphere. Accordingly, the Russians covet the Brenner. It will be useful one of these days if they decide that Italy is ripe for what is sometimes called liberation; at the same time the pass in Austro-Russian hands will be useful in keeping northbound liberators from getting too far too fast.

WHITE HOUSE TENURE

Resolutions again are introduced in congress to limit the Presidential tenure by constitutional amendment to two terms. If Mr. Roosevelt did anything distinctive it was to prove the imperativeness of this restriction on tenure. He alone could do it because he alone undertook to do it and succeeded. He proved that the White House can contain the germ of an occupational disease.

The myth of the necessity of the third and fourth terms evaporated when Mr. Roosevelt died. Mr. Truman may not be an extraordinarily gifted statesman. As a successor to Mr. Roosevelt he has proved that he is good enough. With Mr. Truman and without Mr. Roosevelt the country is following a path which it does not clearly see, but certainly without additional trepidation because Mr. Roosevelt is no longer here. And Mr. Truman was not the choice of a convention seeking the best available second place man. If he's good it proves that the average American citizen of good intentions and fair abilities can, with honesty of purpose and good assistants, be a reliable chief executive of the United States.

This country has suffered nothing directly attributable to the death of Mr. Roosevelt. He was not indispensable. A Missouri politician could take his place and the White House carried on. The transfer of authority from Roosevelt to Truman was made without a quiver in the government of the United States. There is a relief in getting out of the continuity Mr. Roosevelt's personal ambitions were imposing on the government of the United States.

No man should be tempted to take the course taken by the late President of the United States. No man should be permitted to do so. Mr. Roosevelt's sense of personal and public integrity decreased as his sense of control and dominance increased. He built up special groups to aid him in keeping political control. Vested interests grew on his tenure and winning elections became a habit.

Mr. Roosevelt's ambitions corrupted the political action of the nation. His era is one which should not find a repetition in American history. Americans should not permit another man to find it so easy to project and perpetuate himself at their expense.

Four elections to the Presidency destroyed every sense of balance and proportion which the occupant may have had when he took the office. He became self-enamored. His family became predatory. This Republic cannot permit dictatorial ambitions to build themselves up on the prolonged prerogatives of office and privilege.

AN ECONOMIC PARADOX

DUBLIN, Eire (AP)—Neutral Eire has emerged from the war period as an economic paradox—with full larders and little unemployment, yet plainly worried about her future trade prospects.

Primarily an agricultural country, Eire sacrificed much potential industrial development in favor of neutrality. Aid for the allies in the war might have resulted in development of her harbors, construction of huge air bases, greater modernization of her farming, and introduction of industries and skills convertible to peace time production.

But, on the surface at least, Irish opinion today stands as squarely behind De Valera's neutrality decision as it did before the defeat of Germany became a certainty, altho thousands of Irishmen left the soil to take jobs in British industry or to serve in the empire's fighting forces.

Eire lacked established industries at the beginning of the war which might have given her a highly profitable export trade while living in security as a non-participant, as did Sweden, Spain, Switzerland, Portugal, and Turkey.

The country's total trade, both imports and exports, fell from $280,000,000 in 1939 to $232,000,000 in 1944 in spite of rising prices.

The war also cut Eire's imports of coal, forcing her to fall back on smoky, unsatisfactory peat. New manufactured goods, especially industrial and agricultural machinery, virtually were eliminated from the list of imports. Tea and sugar remain strictly rationed.

But the typical Irish reaction is that, if there were shortages, there were also no bombs; if some arteries of trade died, many young Irishmen lived. The ample food supply is another compensating factor.

Side by side with this evidence of well being, however, ragged urchins still beg for pennies. Altho unemployment has been cut almost in half in three years—partly thru migration to British war industries and partly thru the expansion of Eire's own army to three times its normal size—approximately 1 per cent of Eire's population remains unemployed. Government assistance for a single man out of work is fixed at $2.50 a week. Also, the government plans to reduce the army to its pre-war level, and Britain's own demobilization program probably means that Irish war time labor will be replaced by British Tommies.

Some steps have been taken against such contingencies. Plans for road building and a bog reclaiming project have been drafted. Eire's equivalent of the United States civilian conservation corps may be extended. The state commission is considering setting up new industries.

Perhaps the highest hopes of all, however, are pinned upon the possibility of a swift increase in the tourist trade—primarily from the United States—as one of the few countries in Europe where living conditions have been untouched by war.

Already Irish eyes are smiling in welcome to America's khaki clad and unofficial ambassadors of good will.

Armed only with gum and good wishes, GIs are arriving in limited numbers in an effort to recapture memories carried to America by many of their ancestors. The invasion is being met by Irish hospitality and a determination to erase any "misunderstanding" in America about where stood the Irish heart during the war.

Two such tourists were Father James F. [Jimmy] Bradley of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Lt. George A. Wallace of the Bronx.

Hungry after a 14 hour trip from tightly rationed England, they approached a headwaiter of a restaurant just about to close.

"Can't give you much at this hour," apologized the waiter, "but we'll try to fix you up a bite."

Out came a huge platter of sliced, cold chicken and roast ham, mounds of crisp French fried potatoes, fresh melons, and rich ice cream.

"And how do you like Dublin?" queried the waiter.

A thousand times—and no Irish blarney, either—that question was asked in the next few days by both stranger and friend. It was followed by invitations to dinner, golf, horseback riding, beach parties, teas, and parties at home.

Father Jimmy and George talked with Irish politicians and soldiers, with David Grey, the American ambassador, with song writers, and with storekeepers, housewives, and horsemen.

Beneath the obviously sincere friendship of their hosts they found an equally apparent anxiety over how Eire and the Irish people are regarded in the United States as a result of their war time neutrality. They know the answer may well shape Eire's economic and political future.

As for Irish politics, realization of a United Ireland appears no closer today than it was when the Free State was born in 1922, yet it remains the driving ambition of the De Valera government. The people now hope it can be obtained thru negotiation and compromise rather than blood and bullets.

De Valera, himself, declines to be quoted, but is known to be privately advocating a plan which would involve a transfer of populations.

Under this proposal, those unwilling to pledge allegiance to the state would be moved from Northern Ireland [Ulster] to other parts of Britain in exchange for an equal number of persons of Irish Catholic descent who wish to become subjects.

Privately, De Valera has said that Eire would finance material losses which might be suffered by those involved in the transfer. Thus far, however, the plan has found little support either in British quarters or among those in Northern Ireland who would be shifted.

The war itself gave Britain a potent argument for retention of Northern Ireland as necessary to its defenses.

Altho there never has been official confirmation, sources in Dublin professing authoritative information say that after the United States entered the war she offered to support Eire's effort to end the partition if Eire would join the allies.

History alone can judge the wisdom of De Valera's decision for neutrality.

Editorial of the Day

TIME TO TELL
[Wall Street Journal]

Shortly after Pearl Harbor a Washington writer spoke of that disaster as the result of a "miscalculation." This man is generally credited with possessing excellent channels of information during the Presidency of Mr. Roosevelt. Furthermore he knows the meaning of words. And he did not speak of "surprise" but "miscalculation."

In the midst of the war a British official in making some impromptu remarks spoke of the United States having "provoked" attack by Japan. That significant reference has never been further explained.

When Mr. Truman during the 1944 campaign accused Adm. Kimmel and Gen. Short of blame for Pearl Harbor, Adm. Kimmel publicly denied his assertions in good strong language.

There has never been an explanation, or indeed any serious attempt at one, of why a message warning the commanders at Pearl Harbor of the possibility of attack, which might have been transmitted almost instantly by wireless, actually was sent by the slower cable and did not reach them until after the attack had taken place.

One could make quite a list of queer and unexplained circumstances and a full and candid explanation is due the American people. Now that the war is over, it is the duty of congress to make the story public.

Elliott Roosevelt now says he considered his $200,000 debt squared when his creditor accepted $4,000. We suspect the New Deal got some of its budget balancing ideas from him.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

FATIGUE MAY LEAD TO COLLAPSE

FATIGUE in the strict sense is difficult to define because it is related to so many physical and psychological factors. It may be mild or so severe that the victim is unable to continue with ordinary tasks, let alone his main occupation. Gilbreth describes it in all of its phases, saying: "Fatigue is marked by a decrease in power to work, a decrease in pleasure taken in work, and a decrease in the enjoyment of the hours spent away from work."

The average person usually lives and labors well below his peak capacity and seldom encounters exhaustion. The exceptional individual pushes himself to the point of lassitude but, by maintaining a certain degree of general hygiene, is capable of withstanding the strain. Under unfavorable circumstances, such as an inadequate dietary intake or insanitary conditions, a different situation may exist. This is undoubtedly what confronted many of our boys who were captured by the enemy. Under forced labor, exhaustive states were probably common. Tales of this mode of life are now being told.

Reduced efficiency is one of the early signs. To the industrial worker this also means proneness to accidents. Powerful incentives such as prestige, pride, etc., help to counteract these features but ultimately health may be impaired. The effect on the nervous system, weight, and heart are well known. Many are unable to sleep in spite of their weariness.

Now and then, peculiar nervous phenomena, accompanied by a disturbance in the muscular system, can result from marked weakness caused by overexertion. Nielson cites the case of a 42 year old business executive who also held a political position. His entire spare time was given to lodge organizations. He seemed indefatigable and managed on only five or six hours of sleep. He took part in every phase of social life, drinking when necessary and eating irregularly.

On one occasion he attended a picnic and indulged in a game of baseball with his usual vigor. By the seventh inning he could not stand and was forced to admit complete physical defeat. That night he slept fitfully. On awakening his muscles were extremely tender. Days passed but the aching continued and he grew pale and thin. His appearance six weeks later was that of a person completely worn out. Twitchings, so commonly seen after excess exertion, were present. His muscles were wasted and he had little strength.

Only after prolonged rest, with the aid of sedatives and large doses of vitamins, did he show signs of improvement. Spasms in the calves, thighs, and arms persisted for some time. Eventually he came back but even after a period of a year he had less endurance than before the attack.

This is an example of utter exhaustion of the nervous and muscular tissues. Many suffer unnecessarily because they drive themselves beyond their limits. We humans have progressed considerably but unfortunately we have not been able to find a substitute for rest.

TWO FEVERS

D. J. writes: Are tularemia and Rocky Mountain fever the same?

REPLY

Rocky Mountain spotted fever resembles a severe influenza, associated with a skin rash. The usual mode of transmission is thru the bite of a tick. In tularemia, an ulcer forms at the site where the organisms enter, causing a glandular enlargement in various parts of the body. Man may become infected directly from a diseased animal or via insects such as ticks, flies, etc.

RIGID TOES

T. Y. writes: I suffer with cramps in my left foot. The big toe separates from the next one and is immovable for a few minutes. What causes this?

REPLY

The contraction of certain groups of muscles results in this peculiar spreading of the digits. Cramping may be associated with circulatory disturbances, stretching, over-exertion, or irritation from nearby infectious processes.

HENPECKED?

M. M. M. writes: How can a married man of 44 overcome fear?

REPLY

Don't do anything rash but begin to assert your rights. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a list of books on mental hygiene. Reading some of these volumes may help you to overcome your timidity.

SALT SUBSTITUTE

T. Y. writes: Is there any substitute for salt, when this element must be eliminated from the diet?

REPLY

There are various brands of potassium chloride on the market. If seasoning is required, one of these compounds may be employed.

PUFFY JAWS

R. O. writes: Why do my jaws swell after using condiments on my food?

REPLY

In your case, these products may be irritating. Allergy should be investigated.

A CURIO

F. W. writes: Are infants ever born with teeth?

REPLY

It has happened but the phenomenon is rare.

BLADDER ULCER

D. K. writes: What is a Holland ulcer?

REPLY

I believe you refer to Hunner's ulcer, which attacks the bladder, and may be observed in cystitis.

DOING HIS OWN HANDICAPPING

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Space for letters is obviously limited. Incoming mail far exceeds it. If a letter is not printed attribute it to lack of room. Address letters to Voice of the People, THE TRIBUNE.

THEY WANTED A HARD PEACE, TOO

East Chicago, Ind., Oct. 7—I have just completed re-reading my grandfather's history of the 112th Illinois volunteer infantry, in which are related his experiences in seven different southern prison camps. "Indescribable cruelties" writes the author. During my childhood I visited the arsenal at Rock Island and I remember that most of the stones in its cemetery are for Confederate soldiers. I would like you all to consider this letter which is to my father, who was a lieutenant, in the 53d United States infantry, serving below Vicksburg:

"Cambridge, Ill., April 28, 1865

"My Darling Boy:

"I sit down this evening to write you a few lines to let you know we are all well. Sarah has a very bad cold. And I am not very well. I hope you will excuse me for not writing sooner. You know I cannot write when there is company here. Six weeks today since father came here and we have either been away or had company here all the time. O how I have enjoyed that six weeks, could you have been here too my cup of joy would have been clear full. You need not think I forgot you because I did not write. We were at Mercer one week and at Uncle Stewart's a week. We had a splendid visit there. They all went with us from house to house.

"We all took dinner at Alexander's and were having a good time over the surrender of Lee's army and all were at Mac's when Mary came and said Lincoln had been assassinated. What a contrast in our feelings! Sarah Ann's folks and Alexander's went home to get the news. We soon got a paper with the truth. There seemed to be a veil over everything. I felt so.

"I feel as tho Providence knew what was best. Perhaps Lincoln would have been too easy with those rebel leaders. And I do hope that Johnson will treat them as they deserve. I did think that Grant did wrong in paroling Lee and letting those officers go unpunished. And now what an awful thing Sherman has done. The report is today that Grant has relieved him of his command. I can hardly wait until I get the particulars. It does seem as tho Sherman was too noble a man to spoil it all.

"A dispatch came last night that they had shot Booth. They found him in a barn and burned the barn and shot him. Mr. Baker preached Mr. Lincoln's funeral sermon last Sabbath. I never heard him preach with so much energy before. He compared Lincoln and Johnson to Moses and Joshua. You know, for a small offense, Moses was not permitted to enter the Land of Canaan, and Lincoln was not permitted to enjoy freedom and peace after he had been the means of bringing it about. What a pity he ever went to the theater.

"Mr. Baker proved by half a dozen places in the Bible that it is just that those rebel leaders should be punished by death. I wish you could have heard him. A flag was hung over the pulpit—draped in mourning—and another over the stand in front of the pulpit and a large picture of Lincoln hung behind Mr. Baker. The Sabbath before we had a very good sermon by Mr. Moffat in Freedland on the same subject.

"I was in hopes we could send you some money when father came home, but only drew two months' pay and it took $160 to get him a suit of clothes and bring him home. He went to Chicago for pay but could not get any and was obliged to borrow $75 of Gaines to go back to parole camp at Annapolis.

"Your Loving Mother."

Eighty years have gone by since those words were written. They both lie in the cemetery at Cambridge, Illinois. My son, a Flying Fortress pilot, lies in the cemetery at Cambridge, England. Over 25 years have passed since the other war. I don't believe the Doorn resident had any more to do with nazism than our democracy has to do with communism. Our sparing his head did not have any effect on this latter war, one way or another.

We have learned to appraise Grant and Lincoln's way not only as right but as most liable to stop future wars. How happy I am that Lee was not hanged, or that noble gentleman Thomas Stonewall Jackson's grave desecrated.

I even rejoice that we spared that blackguard Forrest. And our sons went to a camp named after him in this war. I believe it was good for their souls, tho. A sort of example.

NO BONUS FOR OFFICERS

Chicago, Oct. 5—It should be brought home to both state and federal lawmakers that officers should be excluded from payment of any bonus. One of the greatest injustices of this war was the denial of accrued terminal leave by enlisted personnel and its accrual by officers. I feel that I have the right to make this observation since I served as an officer and received these benefits.

IDLE ARMY DOCTORS

Chicago, Sept. 29—My husband is one of those forgotten men—a physician in the army [overseas 30 months]. I'd like to quote from a letter I received today:

"I am quite unhappy about the possibilities of my early return home. We had a meeting tonight of officers of the depot and the C. O. told us we were frozen until Nov. 1 at least. My personal opinion is that the colonel does not want to be bothered changing personnel at this time when the depot is busy." [They are processing enlisted men to be sent home.] "It is so ironic that there are a large number of doctors and dentists sitting around waiting, with nothing to do, because they are low point men and cannot leave the theater until the high point officers have been sent home, and we are 'frozen' in our jobs.

"We sing the following to the tune of 'Lili Marlene':

'Dear Mr. Truman, let the boys go home.
We's captured Naples and liberated Rome.
We've overcome the 'master race,'
And now we'd like some shipping space.
O let the boys go home.
Let the boys at home see Rome!'"

Incidentally, my husband is 42.

POLITICS IN THE SCHOOLS

Chicago, Sept. 25—How much longer are the parents of Chicago's public school children going to stand for the system of education our children are forced to accept?

Future competition is going to be keen, and the young people entering the commercial fields will require a good sound education in order to survive. Our children are not getting a fair start, and it is high time the politicians are ejected from our school system, and those who are interested in adequately teaching our youth put in their place.

Seventh grade pupils are just learning fractions, from a pamphlet that dealers in educational books never heard of. It was copyrighted in 1939, and a review of publishers does not reflect the name of the publisher. [Smells like graft somewhere].

Our children should have had fractions in fifth grade, and if they are this far behind now, what in the world will they be by the time they are thru high school?

The parent - teacher associations wash their hands of this vital problem. Let's have a parents' organization that is interested in producing educated children.

RACE PREJUDICE ON SHIPBOARD

Chicago, Sept. 28—I have just read a letter in the Voice of the People in which the writer claims the Seafarers International union [AFL] sends out mixed Negro and white crews, while the National Maritime union [CIO] is restricted to white sailors. He also states that President Truman's order to the SIU to refrain from discriminating against the Negro was communist inspired by some "landlocked sailors."

This condition may apply to the Great Lakes but, on the west coast I was a crew member of an oil tanker in San Pedro harbor in July, 1944, when there was a Negro radio operator on board, placed there by the war shipping administration, and the SIU crew refused to sign articles for the voyage or even move the ship away from the dock until the Negro was taken off.

I have seen many NMU ships with mixed crews. There is no doubt in my mind that Truman's order was meant for the real merchant marine and not the fresh water variety.

ROBERT CHAMPNESS

DENTISTRY AT HOME

Chicago, Oct. 1—There is virtually any service "as near as your phone"—but not a "portable dentist!"

Only a small power unit is needed to provide bedside dental care. True, no home service could be as complete as office attention, but simple fillings and extractions in the home for shut-ins could eliminate a source of great discomfort and inconvenience for those confined. If dentists would organize a home service unit, it seems to me a profitable, and most important, a humanitarian service would be established.

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE

Chicago, Oct. 9—Can a man who is not a citizen of this country get the state old age pension? He has lived here more than 30 years.

G. S.

Amendments effective July 24, 1945, ease the residence and citizenship requirements and increase the maximum payment. The act as amended grants old age assistance to citizens or persons who have resided 25 years in the United States and who are 65 years old; who have resided in Illinois one year; are not supported by public institutions; have not given away their assets to increase their need; have no children able to support them, and have not purchased full care in private institutions. Assistance will not exceed $45 per month.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WHERE THEY REALLY SWEAT IT OUT

AHWAZ, Iran, Oct. 1—Have you ever heard of the Persian gulf command? Well, officially it ceased operations in June, 1945, its task completed and 30,000 weary GIs thought they were going to get out of this desert with its 180 degree temperature and back to the good old United States.

The agreement with the Iranian government called for all American troops to be out of Iran within 6 months after VE Day, but today is Oct. 1 and there are still close to 6,000 troops here and "higher headquarters" has announced that 2,600 will be kept here indefinitely even tho the Iranian government has twice reminded the United States of its agreement.

What are we doing? Nothing. All the work being done is that of "helping each other that we may live" such as water, laundry, bakery, etc. "Higher brass" have men stationed all over Persia as "security" for our assets, these "assets" being mud and brick barracks so far from civilization that even the Persians don't want them. The British knock theirs down with a bulldozer, move out, and write them off as "expendable."

Men declared "surplus" from their organizations and presuming to go home are placed in a casual pool, reassigned all over Persia to do unfamiliar work. Right now 200 GIs and 1,500 Iranian laborers, at 30 rials a day, are tearing down 4,800 box cars for scrap, as they can never be used in the States.

Every general or colonel arriving home from the PGC announce for public consumption that the "troops will be home by November" but still troopships with 1,400 capacity are leaving here with but 400 troops aboard. The rest are "essential."

We want the public to know that double the money being spent to maintain this farce could be saved by sending the troops home for discharge or reassignment and writing this "white elephant" off as expendable.

A GI SWEATING IT OUT IN IRAN

WHY ALL THE RED TAPE?

Chicago, Oct. 8—In talking with some boys on their way to Fort Sheridan [which the army calls a "separation center"], I found that they docked from the South Pacific at San Francisco; were then shipped to New York; thence to Fort Sheridan to be discharged.

In the last war a so-called "separation center" consisted of the soldier's record, some forms for discharge, a table on which to write and plenty of ink. In World War I. our outfit of 5,000 men in infantry officers' school at Camp Gordon, Ga., was on the way home in three weeks after the war ended.

The present system not only lacks sense, but is apparently a means of stalling the liquidation of the army. The morale of a peace time army is no better than an army of unemployed, and that observation is based on experience.

Friend of the YANKS

[The Friend of the Yanks will answer questions of service men, veterans, and their dependents by mail if stamped envelope is sent to 435 N. Michigan av. The Tribune's veterans' bureau, 1 S. Dearborn st., Superior 0200, gives personal interviews.]

J. V. asks: "What is a partial disability pension and how does it differ from a total disability pension? Do they continue for life?"

It is assumed that a man's ability to engage in normal activity is 100 per cent. One unable to engage in normal activity because of disease or injury then is considered to be partly disabled. The percentage of disability is determined by examiners for the veterans administration and may range from 10 to 90 per cent. If a veteran is unable to engage in any activity he may be presumed to be totally disabled. Pensions in either case are payable only so long as the disability lasts and will be discontinued if the veteran recovers fully. Where a veteran is rated totally and permanently disabled it is presumed his condition never will be improved thruout life.

E. S. writes: "The government agency for which I worked prior to induction has been abolished. Will I be entitled to a federal job upon discharge?"

The agency which has taken over that which formerly employed you must find a job for you. If none has taken over, then civil service will place you on a reëmployment list for first consideration when there is an opening for a person of your qualifications.

TRIBUNE INDEX MARKS 5 YEARS OF AIDING PUBLIC

Fingertip Reference Key Helps Researchers

The Tribune Index, fingertip reference key to contents of this newspaper, had a birthday yesterday. It marked its fifth anniversary.

In all, approximately 12 years of issues have been indexed since the project was started in 1940. Periods indexed are:

1847-'61 [With gaps because many newspaper files were lost in the great fire of 1871.]

1910-'11. [To Aug. 1, 1911.]

1940-'45. [From Oct. 13, 1940, to date and continuing.]

Time Saver for Public

In its brief existence the Index already has saved countless hours of research and incalculable effort in hunting reference and subject material. Not only Tribune departments but the public also has been the beneficiary thru great saving of time and effort. Many persons have been saved much expense.

In quick tracing of news items, statements, editorials, and other features, the Index has helped writers and business persons, politicians and lawyers, educators and students. Some examples follow:

David H. Donald of the University of Illinois history department was hunting material for a biography of W. H. Herndon, Lincoln's law partner. The Index record of 1858-'60 yielded dates on valuable items. Prof. Donald then wrote: "I am very grateful to you. The notes you have furnished will save me a considerable amount of time."

1880-'81 Articles Traced

C. M. Destler of Cornell university faculty sought matter on Henry Demarest Lloyd, Tribune staff writer of the '70s and '80s. The 1880-'81 Index provided many dates on his articles signed HDL.

An advertising man preparing a Memorial day speech wanted facts on origin of the holiday. The Index came up with a May 9, 1945, editorial which included that information.

A Northwestern university student asked for editorials on the Chicago public school system as a source of material for use in a 15,000 word thesis. The Index supplied him with dates of several written on that subject.

A reader recently phoned The Tribune in search of a news story she read several months before about Yanks entering Hamelin, Germany, the city of Pied Piper fame. The Index showed the story had been printed on April 8.

Listed by Name or Subject

The Index record is a compilation of entries and respective dates of publication under names of persons or general subjects involved. Entries are concise identifications of news stories, editorials, articles, and other features.

Entries are added in an accumulative fashion under each respective subject. The record is further enriched by application of cross-index technique. In short, the same article may be indexed under several subjects which may be related.

The alternative, in the absence of an index record, often is a tedious search, from page to page and edition to edition, that may require hours, days, and even weeks. Usually dates of items can be produced by the Index in seconds or minutes.

The Index project is supplementary to The Tribune's reference system of news clippings of its editions for use of the editorial staff.

Affected During War

The Index did not escape the tribulations of war. Personnel associated in the work became reduced to a minimum. Consequently part of the original indexing program was suspended. But the essential part of the work has been kept up, and plans are now under way to speed up the indexing of old issues.

Indexing of the two star final edition is up to date and continuing. This issue also is microfilmed daily. The microfilm print and the Index constitute the permanent reference and historical record of The Tribune.

[Inquiries by mail for aid from the Index record should be accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope. Inquiries may be sent to Tribune Index, Room 2317, Tribune Tower, Chicago 11, Ill.]

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

Oct. 14—Colonies Declare Rights

ALMOST two years before the Declaration of Independence was drawn, delegates from the American colonies prepared a noble document which has come to be known as the Declaration of Rights. This was adopted at the first Continental congress on Oct. 14, 1774, in Philadelphia, Pa. The congress met to take counsel on the common grievances of the colonies and to draft, if possible, some common plan of action.

The Declaration of Rights asserted in its introduction that the acts of the English parliament were depriving the colonists of rights which, as Englishmen, they had every reason to expect would be recognized. Resolutions specified the rights which had been violated.

"The foundation of English liberty, and of all free government, is a right in the people to participate in their legislative council," said one resolution, referring to the fact that the colonies had no representatives in parliament.

Other resolutions declared the colonists were entitled to "life, liberty, and property," the benefits of the common law of England, and the "privilege of being tried by their peers of the vicinage." A resolution asserted also that "they [the colonists] have a right peaceably to assemble, consider of their grievances, and petition the king."

The congress maintained it was "indispensably necessary to good government that the constituent branches of the legislature be independent of each other" and that the exercise of legislative power in several colonies by a council appointed by the king was "unconstitutional, dangerous, and destructive to the freedom of American legislation."

When this document and other papers of the congress were laid before the English parliament in 1775, William Pitt declared that for "solidity of reason, force of sagacity, and wisdom of conclusion under a complication of difficult circumstances, no nation or body of men can stand in preference to the general congress at Philadelphia."

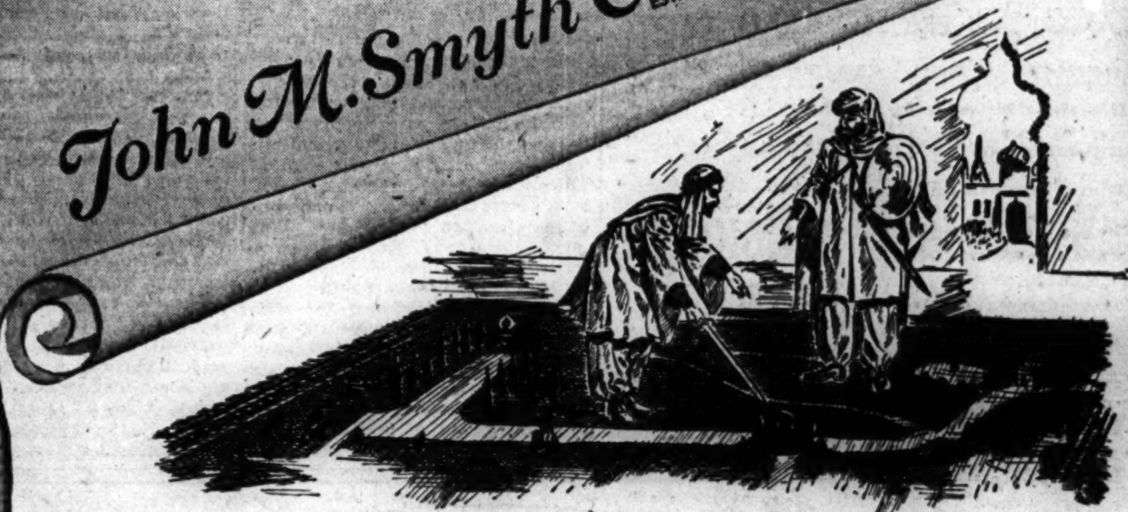
John M. Smyth Company ESTABLISHED 1867



Because They Missed Their Gardens in Stormy Weather

. . . the kings of ancient Persia ordered colossal carpets made as exact replicas of those beloved gardens. They could then defy unpleasant weather by transferring the royal festivities to the palace, where these marvelous carpets faithfully reproduced every terrace, flower-bed, pathway of colored tile, fountain, tree and brook. They were woven with an exquisite intricacy of detail, their silken textures richly highlighted with threads of gold, silver and precious stones. One of these fabulous palace carpets, 106 feet square, fell into the hands of the conquering Arabs in 637 A.D. They decided it was much too valuable to go to any one person, and so it was cut into segments and divided as booty among the soldiers.

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE

'CARMEN' GIVEN OLD DISTINCTION BY SWARTHOUT

Brilliance Enhanced by Effective Costumes

BY CLAUDIA CASSIDY

Gladys Swarthout's "Carmen" and Zinka Milanov's first local appearance as "Tosca" kept the Chicago Opera busy at the Civic Opera house yesterday, with Fausto Cleva in the pit for both performances.

Miss Swarthout has polished her gypsy trollop to a dark brilliance set off to perfection by some of the most effective costumes yet devised for the role, and she has restored much of its distinction by scorning the deep rooted "Carmen" clichés for a characterization of penetrating intelligence, acutely aware of Bizet's wonderfully wrought score.

She was met on her own terms by Richard Bonelli's Escamillo, Giovanni Martinelli's Don José, and Mr. Cleva's conducting, altho the maestro's ambitions for his orchestra were sometimes beyond its attainments. Mr. Bonelli did his best work in seasons as Escamillo, his lyric baritone regaining much of its misplaced luster in the "Toreador's Song," which ran off like silk.

Plaudits for Martinelli

Mr. Martinelli's Don José was an astonishing job for a man who will be 60 years old next week. It was a bit convex of figure, but it had style, dramatic drive, and a high B flat that made some of us wonder who could beat it today, except the reincarnation of the Martinelli of 20 years ago.

Unhappily for the rest of the performance, Mr. Cleva, who is so sensitive to orchestral nuance, apparently is a little deaf when it comes to singing. Elvira Helal's Micaela was as provincial and unevenly sung as her earlier Gilda. However, such is one of the major injustices of opera, that no matter how badly the Micaela of the evening sings the third act prayer, it is Escamillo's hat that gets a hole shot in it.

Some crucial staging was badly bungled in that third act, tho otherwise the direction held such interesting novelties as a sidewalk café outside the cigaret factory and blue notepaper for Don José's mamma. The singing in minor roles and, with rare exceptions, by the chorus, was below standard. The ballet? Well, maybe I'm wrong. Maybe opera ballet isn't supposed to be good.

Claque Cheers Lustily

Substitute boorishness for sinister elegance and you get the kind of "Tosca" inflicted on last night's audience, which included a peripatetic gentleman with a camera who photographed Mme. Milanov in a succession of histrionic poses from the left, while the ubiquitous [this season] claque cheered lustily from the rear right.

As for Milanov's Tosca, write it off as an error. She is a charming artist with a voice exquisitely suited to many roles, and a lovely smile that was her major contribution to Puccini's first act. But she has no conception of Tosca's distinction, her soprano lacks the true Italian fire that can make the music incandescent, and her idea of acting melodrama would send a theaterwise audience into polite hysterics.

Record for Kissing

Alexander Sved's Scarpia, resembles a decadent vulture, which is the right idea, and is sung in a cluster of keys, which isn't. In former seasons he acted the role as if he understood its suavely lethal implications, but last night he was merely crude.

Armand Tokatyan cut a fine figure as Cavaradossi, the most interrupted painter in the history of mural art, and he sang well within his vocal limitations. He also set a new record for first act kissing of the heroine. You could have timed some of the kisses by a stopwatch, and they, justifiably, attracted more attention than the singing.

Vittorio Trevisan emerged from semi-retirement to give us another welcome glimpse of his sacristan, a perfect performance reminiscent of a richer day when the Chicago Opera "Tosca" was one of the peaks of the repertory—and they didn't miscall it "La Tosca," either.

'LA BOHEME' WINS PLAUDITS AS GIVEN BY W-G-N ARTISTS

That every one loves a love story was proved again last evening when 4,500 persons roundly applauded Puccini's heady, romantic opera, "La Boheme," on the third seasonal broadcast of the Chicago Theater of the Air in the Masonic temple. Packed into an hour of exciting music and stirring story, the opera was heard over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.

Marion Claire, leading W-G-N soprano, who made her Chicago debut in 1928 in the role of the sad little seamstress, Mimi, sang it once more with ease and expressiveness. Richard Tucker, tenor, who supported Miss Claire last year on the Chicago Theater of the Air as the poet, Rudolph, again brought brilliance of voice and long acquaintanceship to the role.

The mellow baritone of Bruce Foote was admirable for Marcello, the painter, and Penny Perry was a delightful Musetta, the typical Bohemian light of love.

The opera, first produced in 1896 under the direction of Arturo Toscanini, lost none of its nuances under the baton of Henry Weber, director of the W-G-N Symphony orchestra. The W-G-N ensemble furnished a harmonic and poignant background. Jack La Frandre, W-G-N writer and producer, was in charge of the production.

TRIBUNE STORY OF 18 YEARS AGO FORESAW A-BOMB

Feature by McCutcheon Had Other Wonders

Present day world interest in atomic power yesterday recalled to Tribune readers of years ago what many of them termed the strangely prophetic description of the utilization of such energy contained in a fiction picture serial published in this newspaper 18 years ago.

The feature, "The Master of the World," was written and illustrated by John T. McCutcheon, famous cartoonist. It first appeared Nov. 6, 1927, and ran for 52 weeks on page one of the Sunday edition.

Talks to Mars on Cosmic Rays

In the story, McCutcheon whimsically related the adventures of Paul Rayburn, a fictitious hero and chemist who learned how to talk to Mars over the cosmic rays.

The Martians, the tale relates, had long been attempting to communicate with the earth to impart scientific secrets a million years in advance of any accomplishment on this planet.

They inform Rayburn that Martians solved the problem of utilizing atomic power 600,000 years ago. They give him the atomic secret and also instruct him how to get power from the earth's revolutions, divert the flow of warm ocean currents to distribute the earth's heat evenly, and how to extract fuel, food, and light from the atmosphere.

Reads Minds Like a Book

In addition, Rayburn also is taught how to communicate thought waves over vast distances, read minds like a book, turn the homeliest woman into a rare beauty, transmute metals, and restore youth to old age.

Because the young scientist is thought to have lost his mind, his employer discharges him. Without funds, he wonders how he will continue his experiments. But the Martians tell him not to worry. The solution to his poverty comes in a cosmic ray message which enables him to transform his gold ring into platinum.

By pyramiding several successive transmutations of gold into the rarer metal, Rayburn earns sufficient money to tide him over his financial difficulties and to startle the world when he announces his discovery.

Cracks Atom's Secret

Rayburn finally cracks the secret of the atom under the guidance of his Martian mentors, and the President of the United States proclaims him to be master of the world. The President then urged him to use his power for the benefit of mankind.

Rayburn, of course, readily consents because he is a hero with a kind heart and no desire to become rich.

He develops a wingless airplane and numerous other inventions hitherto undreamed of on this globe.

In the final instalment of the story he convinces every one of his power by showing a motion picture that reveals the earth floating in space. The movie, he explains, is being sent from Mars and is being projected by a camera with no film.

Moreover, Rayburn points out, the picture shows the side of the moon never before seen from the earth. Faced by such incontestable proof, the last of his skeptics is silenced and the story ends.

AMVETS DEMAND INQUIRY ON SLOW ARMY RELEASES

Members of American Veterans of World War II. adopted a resolution last night requesting President Truman "to appoint a commission to inquire why men in service are not discharged more quickly.

"It is possible," one delegate said, "that the officers of general rank are attempting to retain men so they can keep their temporary commissions."

The group, meeting in the Stevens hotel, resolved also that enlisted men should be included as judges on courts martial; that age limitations in the educational provisions of the GI bill of rights be eliminated, and that AMVET should not become involved in discussions of labor and political issues.

Gov. Green will speak and officers will be elected at the closing sessions today.

'High and Low' Bandits Hold Up Motor Dealers

Edward Zubok and Edward Simmons, owners of the Modern Motor company at 3717 N. Western av., reported yesterday to the police that they were robbed of $500 by two gunmen whom they described as a "high and low" team. One robber was about six feet tall. His companion was a mere five feet.

SCIENTISTS FEAR THOUSAND-FOLD MIGHTIER A-BOMB

Warn Against Keeping Secret from World

Los Alamos, N. M., Oct. 13 (AP)—Foreseeing atomic bombs "thousands of times more powerful" than those dropped on Japan, 400 scientists who developed the weapon at the government's laboratory asserted in a statement today that to try to keep it from the rest of the world "will lead to an unending war more savage than the last."

The statement, made public by Dr. Robert R. Wilson, member of the executive council, on behalf of the Association of Los Alamos scientists, said:

It is certain that nations other than the United States, Great Britain, and Canada by research can produce atomic power.

U. S. Considered Vulnerable

This nation's highly concentrated industrial centers make it particularly vulnerable to such a weapon.

Counter-measures would be "extremely difficult and uncertain" because of "the concentrated form of destructive energy" and "the large number of possible methods of delivery."

Advantage would lie with the aggressor. "A single heavy attack, lasting a matter of minutes, might destroy the ability of a nation to defend itself further."

The bomb is "a deadly challenge to civilization itself."

"The use of atomic energy must be controled by a world authority."

Control Suggestions Opposed

The statement disapproved suggestions that the United States, Britain, and Canada assume unilateral control over development of atomic power.

"We are convinced," the statement continued, "that we must coöperate with the rest of the world in the future development of atomic power, and the use of atomic energy as a weapon must be controled by a world authority."

Expressing belief that international control is technically feasible, the scientists said "abolition of secrecy in national and international relations may be necessary," providing free access to "all laboratories, industries, and military installations."

"Drastic Solution" Urged

"The actualities of the situation require a drastic solution and the atomic bomb is a sufficiently revolutionary force to impel us to such a solution," the statement said.

"It was our hope in developing the bomb that it would be a great force for world coöperation and peace. . . .

"Effective action is impossible not only when other nations have atomic bombs but even when programs for their manufacture are under way. Lack of decision within even a few months will be preparing the world for unprecedented destruction, not only of other countries but our own as well."

JOHN MARSHALL SCHOOL SEEKING FUND OF $200,000

Alumni and students of the John Marshall Law school, 315 S. Plymouth ct., are engaged in a campaign to raise a $200,000 endowment, it was announced yesterday by Dean Noble W. Lee.

The school receives no support from municipal, state, or federal funds, Dean Lee pointed out, and is operated for men and women who are compelled to earn their livelihood while getting a legal education.

The school was established in 1899 and opened with only three students, two of them unable to pay tuition. The school thrived and to date has graduated more than 2,500 students who have served in countless capacities as judiciary, municipal, state, and federal leaders, as well as executives in industrial fields.

Missouri Seaman Is 8th of His Family in Service

Emmett C. Hawn, 18, of St. Genevieve, Mo., a member of Company 1090, 27th regiment, at the Great Lakes Naval Training center, is the eighth member of his family to enter military service. He has three brothers in the army, two in the navy, one in the coast guard, and a sister is an army nurse.

HUSBAND SEEKS SUPPORT, SAYS WIFE TOOK CASH

In a suit for separate maintenance filed yesterday in Superior court, Frank Switlik, 44, of 3044 Dickins av., charged that he found a note from his wife, Helen, 37, when he returned from a hospital last Sept. 5. It read: "I'm getting a divorce. Helen."

The house furnishings were gone, he charged thru Atty. Sarah S. Rogers, and he learned later his wife had withdrawn their $3,300 joint bank account, had taken $1,200 realized from the sale of their summer home, and had taken the title to his car.

The suit was taken immediately before Judge John P. McGoorty who issued an injunction restraining Mrs. Switlik from disposing of the assets pending settlement of the suit. Switlik later underwent an operation and still is in Passavant hospital.

ANTI-FREEZE BLAZE BURNS BOY, 7

Gerald Pope, 7, of 1163 N. La Salle st., was burned seriously yesterday when he dropped a lighted match into a can of anti-freeze fluid found in the alley near his home. He was taken to Children's Memorial hospital.

61 Farm Boys and Girls to Get I. C. 4-H Awards

Sixty-one farm boys and girls from territory adjoining the Illinois Central tracks will be awarded prizes, totaling $1,700 in the railroad's 1945 4-H leadership contest, P. R. Farlow, general agricultural agent for the company, announced yesterday. The awards have been made annually by the railroad since 1923 and total to date approximately 1,300.

SURFACE LINES' PLAN TO BUY NEW STOCK ASSAILED

Depletion of Reserves Is Fear of Transit Board

The Chicago Metropolitan Transit authority objected yesterday to plans of surface lines trustees to buy 600 street cars and 675 buses in the next two or three years. Purchases of rolling stock on that scale, the traction commissioners held, wouldn't leave enough funds for subway and elevated improvements.

The authority filed in federal District court a suggestion that the surface lines' renewal and depreciation reserves fund be maintained at a 12 million dollar minimum until the street car and elevated systems can be merged under public ownership.

Size of Fund Is Issue

The equipment then is to be modernized over a 10 year period, but Chairman Harrington said the issue was whether the authority would "have a working modernization fund when we take over." A year ago city officials suggested that 250 street cars and 465 trolley buses would be enough for the initial order. The trustees, operating under the bankruptcy control of Judge Michael L. Igoe in federal District court, have asked permission to increase the expenditures for the first three years from 12½ to 22 million dollars.

Harrington and other commissioners, meeting yesterday, took two steps to speed up the public ownership preliminaries.

They approved an agreement under which representatives of a majority of the elevated security holders, eligible under court rules to receive part of the sales price, have agreed that the public ownership offer is satisfactory. A similar agreement recently was received from the surface lines' first mortgage bondholders. The elevated purchase plan will be submitted to Judge Igoe tomorrow.

Waiver Resolution to Council

The city council was asked to waive any claims against the elevated and street car systems as part of the purchase plan worked out to satisfy the securities and exchange commission. Such a resolution will be presented to the council Tuesday.

The public authority is to pay $12,162,500 for the rapid transit lines if the program finally is completed, but the amount going to the favored bondholders has been increased from $14,250,000 to approximately $15,000,000. One means thru which this will be accomplished is that the elevated lines can retain net earnings to the date of actual transfer of properties to the authority. Likewise, the surface lines are to be bought for 75 million dollars, but the bondholders will get $88,100,850, including the city's waiver of its claim to escrowed compensation funds.

Distribution of Sale Proceeds

After Judge Igoe disposes of claims by security groups, which will receive nothing under the plan, the court must certify that the price is fair and two-thirds of each participating group must accept if public ownership is to be achieved. The Illinois Supreme court also must approve the authority and its plan.

The sale proceeds are to be distributed among the elevated security issues as follows:

	Outstanding issue	P'centage of total	Payment $1,000 bond
Union elev. rr. 5% 1st mortgold bonds...	$3,802,000	10.4394	$411.86
Union Consolidated elev. rr. divisional 1st mortgage 5% gold bonds, series A	407,000	1.1175	411.86
Northwestern elev. rr. 1st mortgage 5% gold bonds ..	9,439,000	25.9173	411.86
Metropolitan west side elev. 1st mortgage 4% 40 year gold bonds ..	9,999,808	22,3778	335.67
Metropolitan west side extension mortgage 4% 37 yr. gold bonds	4,432,000	9.9179	335.67
Chicago Rapid Transit 1st refunding mortgage gold bonds, series A 6%	8,033,400	13.2347	247.12

Assert 90 Millions Ready

The authority, created thru the coöperation of state and city officials, has been told that investment bankers, with slight reservations, are ready to lend 90 million dollars to make the purchase and set up a working cash fund.

The commissioners debated yesterday, with a finial decision deferred, whether they will accumulate enough surplus funds to buy elevated, subway, and street car rolling stock with the sale of equipment trust certificates.

Two Labor Law Clinics to Be Held in Milwaukee

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 13 [Special]—Two labor law clinics will be held by the Milwaukee Bar association at the Hotel Pfister on Oct. 22 and 24. On Oct. 22, from 4 to 6 p. m., the speakers will be Prof. Nathan P. Feinsinger of the University of Wisconsin, on leave with the national war labor board, and Philip Marshall, former vice chairman of the regional war labor board, Chicago. The Wisconsin employment peace act will be discussed by Lawrence E. Gooding, board chairman, on Oct. 22.

15 BARBER SHOP QUARTETS SING AT MANITOWOC

Manitowoc, Wis., Oct. 13 [Special]—Twelve hundred persons turned out to hear 15 barber shop quartets give out with close harmony last night at Lincoln High school auditorium.

The program was sponsored by the local chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quarter Singing in America, Inc. The vocalists came from Wisconsin cities, Chicago, and Grand Rapids, Mich.

Among the quartets participating were two world's champions, the Harmony Halls of Grand Rapids and the Chicago Misfits. Wisconsin entrants included Green Bay's Harmony Limited, the Madison Cardinals, Sheboygan's Original Discords, Appleton's Gruesome Double Twosome, the Manitowoc Intercity Four, Milwaukee's Hi-Los, and the Cream City Four, Oshkosh's B'Gosh, Menasha's Paper City Four, Racine Bell City Four, Wauwatosa's Mellow Fellows, and Appleton's Four Keynoters.

2 'LOVERS' LANE' BANDITS SLAY YANK IN RACINE

Racine, Wis., Oct. 13 [Special]—Two Negroes were named in murder warrants here today as a result of the lovers' lane slaying of Corp. Charles J. De Luca, 24, of Racine, a guard at the United States disciplinary barracks in Milwaukee.

De Luca was fatally stabbed at 2 a. m. today in South Shore park when he leaped from his automobile to struggle with two Negroes who had ordered him and his companion, Charlotte Nelson, 21, of Racine, to surrender their purses.

Those accused of murder were Clarence Bernette, 26, and Chester Wright, 24, who have been living in a rooming house at 2110 Mead st. A third warrant charged Hanson Scott Jr., a Negro, with being an accessory after the fact.

Sheriff Robert J. Matheson said that Bernette and Wright arrived at their rooming house about 3:30 a. m. today and left a short time later, accompanied by Scott. They drove away in a 1936 brown Dodge sedan, he said. Police thruout the middle west were asked to watch for the car.

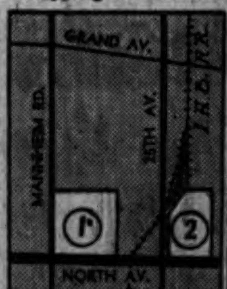
'DRIVE-IN CITY' TO BE BUILT IN WEST SUBURBS

North Av. Project Cost to Total 2½ Million

BY AL CHASE
[Real Estate Editor]

Construction of a 2½ million dollar suburban shopping and amusement center and permanent exposition, interrupted by the war, will be started as quickly as possible at the northeast corner of North and 25th avs., Melrose Park, it was announced yesterday. This project, largest of its kind in the suburban area and eventually to cover 91 acres, will be known as "Drive-In City."



1. Buick plant. 2. New development.

It is sponsored by the H. & E. Balaban corporation, formed by Harry and Elmer Balaban, brothers of Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures, Inc. The H. & E. corporation operates a chain of Chicago movie theaters.

Plan Permanent Exposition

One of the war's first construction casualties, it will be one of the first large business projects to take advantage of removal of federal restrictions effective tomorrow and will proceed on an even more ambitious scale than originally planned.

Besides its amusement and shopping sections, which will cover the south half of the big tract, the Balaban brothers are planning a permanent exposition of automobiles, food products, building materials, and home equipment, to be developed later on the north section. General Motors, General Foods, and other big corporations are to be invited to contribute exhibits.

A 1,500 car drive-in movie theater, second in the Chicago area, will be the first unit in the project to be built, it was said. It is hoped to have this ready for motorists by early next summer.

Other amusement centers contemplated are a 900 seat year-round enclosed movie theater, a bowling center, a night club. Several types of restaurants also are included.

Plenty of Space for Shoppers

The principal shopping facility will be a department store with 120,000 square feet of selling space on one floor. Leasing negotiations are under way with a big national department store chain. A large super-market will be leased to a big chain organization.

Another large building will house a "five and ten" store, eight other miscellaneous shops, and a drug store.

Also planned for the development are a free supervised recreation park for children, a clinic building for suburban doctors and dentists, a drive-in restaurant with a milk bar and a dairy unit where food will be served car occupants, a combined florist shop and tea room, and a combination bus terminal, gas, and service station.

Parking to Be Keynote

Plenty of parking will be a functional keynote to the project. Each business unit will have its own parking space, plus overflow areas. Altogether, there will be room for 2,500 cars, exclusive of the drive-in theater.

The project is at the junction of several fast growing communities, besides being within convenient access for residents of Oak Park, River Forest, Maywood, Riverside, La Grange, Elmhurst, and Elmwood Park. The north half of the project is within the city limits of Franklin Park.

"A family will be able to spend a day and evening without leaving the area," said Elmer Balaban. "Play facilities for children will be provided so that parents can shop without distractions. There will be broad promenades, adequate outdoor seating, colored lighting, and a public address system for music or announcements. On stormy or hot sunny days shoppers can walk from one store to another under canopies. All stores will be air conditioned."

Have Option on Property

The Balaban brothers obtained an option on the property just after the war started, good for one year after hostilities ceased. They have taken up the option and have purchased the land from Mrs. Sophie Buschel, represented by Ray McCallum, broker. Philip Levit, representative of the Balabans, will be in charge of the big shopping and amusement center.

The property, fronting about 1,700 feet on North av., is bounded on the north by Armitage av. and by 19th av. on the east. It is one half mile east of the Buick aviation plant.

How suburban shopping-amusement center at northeast corner of North and 25th avs., Melrose Park, will look when completed: 1. Future permanent exhibition area. 2. Drive-in theater. 3. Kiddies' playground. 4. Restaurant and night club. 5. Bowling alleys. 6. Shops building. 7. Super-market. 8. Year round theater. 9. Florist shop and tearoom. 10. Clinic. 11. Department store. 12. Bus terminal, gas and service station. 13. Drive-in milk bar.

REALTOR GROUP TO OBSERVE ITS 1ST ANNIVERSARY

One of Chicago's most active small associations of realtors, the Chicago Brokers' group, this week will observe its first anniversary. Without by-laws, officers, or dues, the organization's 10 members meet every two weeks in the Attic club in the Field building to exchange ideas and data on prospective sales.

Leonard Downie

This informal collaboration resulted in the first year in sales totaling more than 30 million dollars, said Leonard Downie, former business manager of the Chicago Real Estate board, who recently opened his own office in the Conway building, specializing in commercial and investment properties.

The other members are David L. Cella of Lang, Weise & Cella; H. A. Davis of C. Wallace Johnson, Inc.; Arthur Draper Jr. of Draper & Kramer, Inc.; Ward Farnsworth of Ward Farnsworth & Co.; Jack Hartray of Albert H. Wetten & Co.; Louis Manierre of Dibblea & Manierre; Frank O'Brien of McKey & Poague, Inc.; Frank Slosson of Frank S. Slosson & Co., and Oliver S. Turner of Sudler & Co.

Each member was said to have had a minimum of 20 years' experience in real estate, and several with more than 25 years. All members devote at least 80 per cent of their time selling properties in the Chicago area.

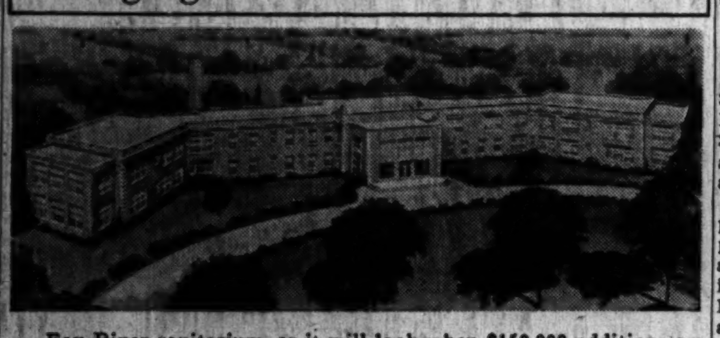
Enlarging West Suburban Sanitarium



Fox River sanitarium, as it will look when $150,000 additions are completed. Leo S. Hirschfeld is architect.

12 COMPANIES TO SPEND MORE THAN 2 MILLIONS

Twelve companies in the Central Manufacturing district have begun improvement or expansion programs totaling $2,125,000 and increasing floor space by 760,000 square feet, it was learned yesterday.

The largest outlay is by Lafayette Steel company, which is spending $440,000 in extending its warehouse facilities. Columbia Pipe and Supply company is building a new plant at the northeast corner of S. Racine av. and W. Pershing rd., to cost $325,000. It will contain 127,500 square feet of floor space.

Fort Wayne Corrugated Paper company will spend $290,000 in building an addition to include 48,000 square feet of space. The F. & F. Laboratories will add 48,000 square feet to the plant at the southeast corner of S. St. Louis av. and W. 48th av. at a cost of $270,000. A. Epstein was engineer for all.

Seek Funds to Triple Size of Fox River Sanitarium

The Chicago Consumptive Aid society yesterday began a campaign to obtain funds for additions to the Fox River sanitarium, between Batavia and Geneva. Two new wings, a reception vestibule, and an enlargement of the kitchen and dining rooms are planned at a cost of $150,000. Work will start next spring fom plans by Leo S. Hirschfeld, architect. The present capacity of the sanitarium will be tripled, it was said.

Lawrence-Drake Corner Purchased for $65,000

The northwest corner of Lawrence and Drake avs., improved with stores and flats, was sold yesterday by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company to the Lawrence-Drake Building corporation, of which Maurice H. Kamm is president, for $65,000. C. Robert Lazerus, president of the Mortgage corporation, was sole broker.

CHICAGO AREA'S BUILDING TOPS 11 MILLION TOTAL

September building in the Chicago metropolitan area was the second highest of any month since October, 1943. Permits were issued for buildings costing $11,794,646, compared with $8,277,430 a year ago, $12,983,041 in August, 1945, and $10,456,993 in July. The total for the third quarter of 1945 was $35,234,680, almost equal to the whole first six months of 1945, which was $36,509,411.

The heavy home building volume was appraised by the Bell Savings and Loan association as the beginning of a big building boom, rather than a temporary flareup.

Indiana Towns Lead

Permits were issued in the metropolitan area for 928 home units, costing $5,088,049, compared with 577 and $2,117,209 a year ago and 1,154, valued at $6,012,350, in August, 1945. The construction of housing accounted for about 5 million dollars of the September all-building total and was about 3 millions above September of last year.

Northern Indiana cities were among the leaders in September home building. Hammond was first with 55 homes, costing $317,000, and Gary third with 26 and $110,000. Evergreen Park, southwest side suburb, was second with 31 homes, costing $192,000.

Activity in Broadview

Broadview was fourth with 19 homes at $114,000. La Grange Park had 17, $145,000; Niles, 16, $97,000; Lombard, 13, $93,000; Park Ridge, 11, $93,000, and Glenview, 11, $78,000. Arlington Heights, Cicero, and Dolton each reported 10 homes, and Skokie nine.

Permits for homes in the higher price bracket are beginning to appear, the Bell survey said. The average values ranged from approximately $4,200 in Gary to $8,500 in La Grange Park and Park Ridge and $10,000 in Skokie.

Realty Miscellany

James C. Thompson, former manager of the Civic Opera building, has been appointed agent for the 28 story 201 North Wells Street building by its new owners, General Finance corporation interests. Thompson will have associated with him A. J. Lewis and John W. Arthur, rental manager of the Civic Opera building. Roy West, resident manager for several years, will be retained. The building is to be renamed soon, said Thompson.

The 309 Jackson corporation has obtained a $1,350,000 first mortgage for 15 years at a split rate of 4½ and 4 per cent interest on the 22 story Jackson-Franklin building, southwest corner of Jackson blvd. and Franklin st. The loan was arranged with F. Z. Gifford, vice president of Republic Realty Mortgage corporation, Chicago correspondent of the Travelers Insurance company. Oliver S. Turner of Sudler & Co. represented the borrower.

Small Units Planned

East Delaware Apartments to Be Remodeled

Purchase yesterday of the six story apartment building at 217-23 E. Delaware pl. by a syndicate headed by George S. Lurie of George S. Lurie company, disclosed plans for remodeling the property into small units.

The 11 large apartments [nine containing 8 rooms and 3 baths] will be rebuilt into 30 small suites of living room, kitchen, and one or two bedrooms. Electric stoves will be installed in the kitchens, and air conditioning units for bedrooms and the new type fluorescent bulbs are under consideration, said Leo S. Hirschfeld, architect.

Tenants will be notified this week to vacate within six months and the $125,000 modernization program will begin May 1 with completion set for Oct. 1 renting, it was said.

The Lurie syndicate bought the building, fronting 100 feet on Delaware with a depth of 110 feet, for $116,500 from American National Bank and Trust company, trustee for the wives of J. W. Horwitch and his three brothers. Hyland J. Paullin was attorney for Lurie.

The Horwitch brothers, three of whom operate the Martha Maid Manufacturing company, bought the building in 1943 from Floyd L. Bateman for $87,500, thru Ralph H. Jackson and Ascher Goldfine, brokers.

The 20 room stone front mansion at 1450 N. Dearborn st. will be rebuilt into nine small apartments. For many years it was the home of the late John P. Wilson of the law firm of Wilson & McIlvaine, and later the residence of Charles Y. Freeman, chairman of Commonwealth Edison company. The 1450 Dearborn company bought it from Norman J. Staller for $26,500 cash. Albert H. Wetten & Co. represented the seller and Cook & Jackson the buyer.

V.I.P.s AGAIN ARE JUST FOLKS IN AIR LINES' BOOK

'Very Important' Loses Its Priority

The V. I. P.s are giving the air lines back to the American public tonight and the public is responding with enthusiasm to the first chance in four years of planning to go places by plane without the risk of being bumped by a military brass hat or war agency big shot.

V. I. P. stands for very important person. The term came into general use in air transport because of the war-imposed necessity of scheduling passages on a priority basis. If you had an A-1, A-2, or A-3 priority, you were pretty certain to be flown on thru to your destination. And to get such a priority, you had to be a V. I. P.

Bumps for Ordinary Folk

If you weren't a V. I. P., if you were just an ordinary traveler, you might get on a plane at the last minute if you were lucky, but the chances were that you would be bumped—displaced—at the first stop by some one with a priority.

The V. I. P.s are going out of the picture now. Since Sept. 15, only A-1 priorities, the highest, have been recognized by the air lines. These, too, will be dropped, starting at midnight tonight, when it will be a case of first come, first served, and no bumping en route. Once you get a reservation, you're sure of getting on your plane, and sure of reaching your destination on it.

Rush Startles Air Lines

The public response in a rush for reservations has been so eager that some of the big air lines were startled. United Air Lines reported it has been flooded with telephone calls. Transcontinental & Western Air's telephone traffic has increased 400 per cent, a telephone company check showed.

The result is that 50 to 80 per cent of available space has been sold out for two weeks in advance. Northwest Air Lines has bookings at the higher figure as have most of the other large companies.

One stimulant has been the air travel rates which on a competitive basis are lower than the cost of railroad fare and lower berth.

A table of comparative fares by air and by Pullman, excluding meals, follows:

Chicago to—	Air	Rail
Boston, Mass.	$39.65	$41.63
Detroit, Mich.	11.45	12.36
New Orleans, La.	45.40	38.87
New York	32.85	39.63
Reno, Nev.	78.25	83.44
San Francisco, Cal.	85.45	91.43
St. Louis, Mo.	11.70	12.88
St. Paul, Minn.	14.65	16.03
Washington, D. C.	27.25	31.70

The air lines for the time being will rely on the two-motored planes that have been in general use, but are expecting deliveries of converted army four-motored planes carrying 44 and 56 passengers in December and of new four-motored planes in early spring.

Clothing Drive Opened to Aid Destitute Jews

Chicago chapters of the American Jewish congress and the American Federation of Polish Jews yesterday began a campaign to collect 200,000 pounds of clothing for destitute Jews still held in concentration camps in Germany and for impoverished Jews in Poland.

Palo Alto, Cal., Oct. 13 (AP)—Jackson H. Ralston, 88, arbitrator on many international questions, died today at his home here. He retired from active practice of law in 1924 and came to Palo Alto. In recent years he worked on a new edition of his book, "International Arbitration from Athens to Locarno."

DE VALERA TO GO TO ULSTER FOR MACRORY RITES

ARMAGH, Northern Ireland, Oct. 13 (AP)—Catholics thruout Northern Ireland [Ulster] and Eire tonight mourned the death of Cardinal Joseph Macrory, 84, archbishop of Armagh and primate of all Ireland, who died at his home here early this morning. The primate had been ill only four hours. He had appeared in good health yesterday and had visited Dublin earlier in the week.

Prime Minister De Valera will cross the border from Eire into Northern Ireland for the first time in 17 years to attend the cardinal's funeral, scheduled for Wednesday. Dublin canceled all musical and sports events as the populace paid tribute to the memory of the cardinal—long a crusader against "pagan" pleasures. Tomorrow his body will lie in state in St. Patrick's cathedral here.

[The death of Cardinal Macrory left only 38 cardinals in the Sacred college, which can have a maximum of 70. The membership of the college now consists of 24 Italians, four Frenchmen, two Germans, and one each from the United States, Belgium, Spain, Poland, Canada, Syria, Argentina, and Portugal.]

Hotel Death of Soldier's Wife Laid to Alcoholism

Lawrenceville, Ill., Oct. 13 (AP)—Death of Mrs. Blanche Campbell, 24, wife of a soldier overseas, in a hotel room here this week, was attributed to "acute alcoholism" in a verdict announced today by Coroner H. B. Sisk. He said the verdict was based on tests by a University of Illinois analyst who reported contents of the women's stomach was 10.1 per cent alcohol.

Edward G. Gustafson

Services for Edward G. Gustafson, 60, treasurer of the Independent Pneumatic Tube company, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in the chapel at 332 Downer pl., Aurora. Gustafson died Friday in his apartment in the Lake Shore Drive hotel, 181 Lake Shore dr. He had lived in Aurora until four years ago. He started with the Independent Pneumatic Tube company in 1903, served as treasurer for 30 years, and was named to the board of directors in March, 1944. His widow, Elsie, survives.

BERMES—Pfc. George W. Bermes, U. S. M. C. In loving memory of my beloved and only son, who made the supreme sacrifice at Guadalcanal Oct. 14, 1942.
The dearest lad the world could hold;
A cherished smile and a heart of gold.
Those who knew him all will know
How much I lost three years ago.
LOVING MOTHER, MADLYN BERMES.

CAHILL—Catherine Cahill. A loving tribute to our dear mother on her birthday, Oct. 13. Requiem high mass sung at St. Malachy's church.
There came a time to all of us,
When, from our loved one, we had to part.
But precious memories lingered on Forever in the heart.
DAUGHTERS AND SON.

DUNSCOMB—Alice Dunscomb, 1940. A tribute of love to my dear mother, whose loving memory never fades but grows fonder day by day. DAUGHTER MYRTLE.

FINN—Second Lt. Francis W. Finn, navigator, U. S. A. A. F., 25th birthday, Oct. 14.
I can't say happy birthday, son,
Because you've gone away,
But God will love and keep you
Till we meet again some day.
BUD, GRACE, JACKIE, MOM.

GENNUSA—Rose B. Gennusa. In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister, who passed away two years ago today.
No one knows the silent heartache,
Only those who have lost can tell
Of the grief that's borne in silence
For the one we loved so well.
LOVING MOTHER, FATHER, SISTER, AND BROTHERS.

GIROUX—S/Sgt. William J. Giroux, U. S. A. In loving memory of our dear son and brother, who was killed in Germany, Oct. 14, 1944.

HALL—George G. Hall. In memory of our father, who passed away 17 years ago today. RAYMOND AND MAE.

HOFFMANN—Mrs. Marie Hoffmann, 1918. In loving memory of our dear mother.
God called you and you went away.
You bid no one a last farewell.
You said good-by to none.
Your loving heart had ceased to beat,
Before we knew it you were gone.
You did not fail to do your best.
Your heart was true and tender.
You worked hard for those you left.
Dearest mother, we do remember.
YOUR LOVING DAUGHTERS, CLARA, MARGARET, AND ELIZABETH.

IMAGINE US!

YOU CAN DO IT, TOO, IN 2 TO 3 HOURS AT HOME!

$1.25 plus tax

Isn't it wonderful! Isn't it fun! Everyone's talking about the lovely, lasting waves and softly curling ringlets you get with a Toni home permanent. So easy to do, so inexpensive.

You can give yourself a wonderfully successful Toni permanent—or help your chum with hers—and you'll have a beautiful wave that lasts and lasts! And think of the comfort. And the time you save!

You'll love the looks and feel of your Toni wave! Hair is softer, lovely and easy to manage, for this is a creme cold wave—with an amazing creme waving lotion that imparts luxurious beauty to the hair!

The Toni Wave Kit is complete, contains all the curlers, waving lotion and neutralizer you'll need for a glorious wave! Toni preparations are like those used in beauty salon-type permanents costing up to $15 and more, are laboratory-tested. Wonderful even for baby-fine hair!

So get your Toni Kits . . . today! And if you aren't absolutely pleased with the results, Toni will refund the full purchase price!

HERE'S ALL YOU DO!

1. Shampoo hair, dab on Toni creme waving lotion, roll up on Toni curlers.

2. After 2 to 3 hours, apply Toni neutralizer solution to curls.

3. Remove curlers, and there's your permanent! Lovely, long-lasting!

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

New York, Oct. 13—Michigan sent its young football men on a man's errand this afternoon in Yankee stadium, but before Army's national champions proved their experience and skill with a 28 to 7 victory, 70,000 fans thrilled to the Wolverines' battle against the Cadets' power and speed. For in winning their 12th consecutive game and their third this campaign, Army had to go all out all the way.

Army's stars were its 1944 All-America players, who last December led in a victory over Navy to climax a championship campaign. Glenn Davis and Felix [Doc] Blanchard. Today Blanchard ran off Michigan's left tackle 69 yards for Army's second touchdown in the second quarter. Davis sprinted 70 yards around Michigan's left flank for the final score in the last period.

Without either one of these superb backs, Michigan might well have contained the Cadet attack and conceivably have turned the football trick of the year.

Michigan Never Gives Up

This was no parade for Army and the score belies the fierceness of the competition. Michigan, trailing 14 to 0, at the start of the second half, took the kickoff and drove 75 yards to the Cadet goal. In possession again, the Wolverines were checked by a fumble on a march for the tying touchdown.

From this point there was no doubt of the final result, but Michigan's youngsters fought to the end and actually made six first downs in the last 15 minutes to one for Army.

Army's veterans truly were forced to the limit. In evidence, consider that Blanchard and Davis carried the ball 40 times from scrimmage. The crashing thrusts of Blanchard, who hit from tackle to tackle and never was completely stopped, were complementary to Davis' sweeping sprints. Blanchard carried the ball 21 times for 179 yards. Davis carried 19 times and covered 191 yards. In addition, Glenn completed three of five passes for 47 yards.

Army's Attack Double Barreled

Blanchard's power thru the line forced Michigan to bunch its defense and thus become vulnerable to wide plays. The weakness was apparent but the Wolverines had no choice. Thus Army, in its initial attack, used no deception and Davis and Tom McWilliams alternated in wide runs after taking deep laterals from Arnold Tucker, the Cadet quarter back of the T formation.

Michigan, on the other hand, made the most of deception against the Army defense which never was changed. And the thousands today saw the slickest back field maneuvers, spin plays, double laterals, and reverses possible to plan.

Michigan's stalwarts were Capt. Joe Ponsetto and Center Harold Watts, 60 minute men who bulwarked the line and steadied the attack. At the kick-off Michigan had Jack Weisenberger at full back in place of Dan Dworsky, a surprise

India Races Go Big Time; Even Dope the Horses

BOMBAY, India, Oct. 13 [Reuters]—Winners found doped, favorites given mysterious drugs and betting coups totalling thousands of dollars were the highlights of the fashionable Poona racing season which ended today.

The Royal Wesetern India Turf club, one of the wealthiest in the world, which owns the tracks at Poona and Bombay, decided something was going on and the stewards, led by Victor Sasson, the cotton magnate, undertook an investigation.

Two outstanding trainers had their licenses suspended altho they denied that they were in any way responsible for drugging the horses.

OHIO STATE TRIUMPHS, 12 TO 0, OVER WISCONSIN BEFORE 69,235

BY EDWARD BURNS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Columbus, O., Oct. 13 — Ohio State's always powerful Buckeyes, who never have beaten Wisconsin's Badgers more than 13 points and only twice by that margin, this afternoon held to the conservative tradition by defeating the stubborn young men from Madison by the mild count of 12 to 0. A crowd of 69,235 saw the contest played under ideal weather conditions.

Let it not be said, however, the 1944 undefeated Big Nine champions softened their shots in this second 1945 Western conference victory for the Buckeyes. True, they thwarted themselves on occasion, thrice being set back by holding and illegal motion penalties when en route to what seemed certain touchdowns. Twice holding penalties nullified advances to the Wisconsin 2 yard line.

On another occasion the Buckeyes went to the Badger 5 yard line, only to be set back because a player illegally was in motion. In still another time the Buckeyes were thwarted by Don Kindt's goal line interception of an Ohio State pass. In none of these instances did the Buckeyes bounce right back for their two scoring processes.

Buckeyes Score in 2d Period

The champions' first touchdown was not accomplished until the contest had progressed to within one minute and 42 seconds of the end of the second period. At this juncture Tom Watson completed the last 10 yards of a 61 yard progression when he took a pass from Dick Fisher and stepped over the goal line for the first points of the day. Jack Lininger failed to add the point from placement.

The second touchdown was a 78 yard enterprise, following the Wisconsin kickoff at the start of the second half. The advance was made by Ohio State's veteran back, Fisher, late of the navy air force; Paul Sarringhaus, late of the army; Robin Priday, a 61 mission air force veteran, and Ollie Cline of last year's championship back field. Priday called the shots and the others executed the 78 yards of totting, topped off when Sarringhaus went over from the 5 yard line, standing up. Lininger's toe again failed to add the point. This final touchdown was produced when the third period was 4 minutes and 19 seconds old.

Badger Offense Clicks in Fourth

The Badgers, expected by some to fade as the afternoon's pounding progressed, made their best offensive showing on two widely separated onslaughts in the fourth period when they were supposed to be exhausted. In the final period

Indiana Runs Up 54-14 Score on Nebraska

BY CHARLES BARTLETT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 13—Indiana's Hoosiers, winners of two Western conference football games and grateful for a draw with Northwestern, today continued their progress toward an undefeated season [they hope] by smashing Nebraska's young and willing Huskers, 54 to 14, before a homecoming audience of 20,000 lured by the gorgeous Injun summer weather which flooded Memorial stadium.

In many respects, this 10th meeting between the Hoosiers and Huskers, in which the former took a 5 to 3 victory edge with their fifth consecutive triumph, was a perfunctory sort of a duel. Yet it proved two points. One was that Indiana will be right ready to meet their remaining conference opponents — Iowa, Minnesota, and Purdue. The other was the assiduity of a bunch of teen aged lads and twentyish war veterans who obviously are determined to carry on the traditions of such famed Nebraska greats as Ed Weir, George Sauer, Charley Brock, Lloyd Cardwell, and Sam Francis.

Penalties Slow Up Hoosiers

So much for the first Nebraskans to score on the Hoosiers in the last two years of their feud. From there on, it is a necessity to warn Clem Crowe of Iowa, Bernie Beirman of Minnesota, and Cecil Isbell of Purdue that Indiana will be a rough team with which to deal in their subsequent meetings. The Hoosiers'

IOWA FAILS TO HALT CANFIELD AS PURDUE ROLLS TO 40-0 VICTORY

BY IRVING VAUGHAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 13—Purdue's unbeaten Boilermakers took time out for a bit of practice today but nevertheless applied themselves to their serious work long enough to pile up a 40 to 0 beating for an Iowa squad that was completely outclassed.

The Boilermakers took command at the outset of their homecoming battle before 20,000 and continued to crack the whip to the finish, the late phases of their touchdown marches being entrusted to the skill of third and fourth stringers.

It was Purdue's fourth victory and the second in Western conference competition.

Canfield a Problem

The Hawkeyes had to wait only for about four minutes to learn that they had a problem on their hands and that no small part of the problem was Half Back Bill Canfield. Before the West Lafayette youth made up his mind to knock off for the day he galloped all over the premises, his activity netting the Boilermakers' first three touchdowns. And he made one other trip across the goal but the officials ruled it illegal.

Altho the Iowans hung up 12 first downs, only one shy of the Purdue total, they were never a serious threat. There were only two spots along the 60 minute battle—one at the very finish—where they were in a position to break across their foes' goal. The class of the defense sustained against them at all times is visibly demonstrated by the figures on yardage. They were held to 83 yards on the ground, a seemingly small advance when compared to the 323 yards amassed by the Boilermaker ball carriers.

131 Yards in 13 Tries

The effective work that Canfield crammed into the first two quarters is shown by the 13 ball lugging jobs in which he participated. He showed a net gain of 131 yards, once going nonstop for 41 yards to one of his three touchdowns and once 10 yards to another. He scored the third simply by standing in the end zone and grabbing a pass sailed by Freshman Bob Demoss. Next to Canfield in yardage was Full Back Ed Cody, who in 14 attempts splashed thru for 73 yards.

After receiving the kick-off the Hawkeyes were forced to punt and the Boilermakers promptly revealed that they didn't intend to fool around, at least not until they had stored up some points. They

Gophers Win After Soldier Scare, 14 to 0

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 13 [Special]—Minnesota's football team found Fort Warren of Cheyenne, Wyo., a stubborn squad as the Gophers scored their third straight victory of the season, 14 to 0, this afternoon. Full Back Hockey Mealey scored at the opening of the second quarter and Half Back Tommy Cates culminted a fourth quarter drive for the only touchdowns.

The Broncos, aided by the best end play Gophers have faced in years, put up a rugged defense that held Minnesota in check most of the time. These ends, Ken Whitney and Mac Speedie, also were tough on offense, but the Broncos failed to score after threatening in the third period.

Minnesota had two long drives nullified by penalties in the first quarter, but then scored in the second after a drive from their own 29 yard line. Red Williams and Mealey did most of the ground gaining in that drive and Mealey powered the final 2 yards on fourth down for the score.

The second half was nip and tuck all the way with the Broncos traveling to the Minnesota 20 before an intercepted pass cut off the threat. Minnesota roared right back, however, to clinch the contest with Cates scoring the final touchdown after another long drive. Lineups:

HUSKIES UPSET COUGARS, 6-0, IN LAST 2 MINUTES

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 13 (AP)—Scoring a touchdown in the last two minutes of play, the Washington Huskies upset Washington State college 6 to 0 in a Pacific Coast conference game today before 34,000.

Gordon Hungar, Washington quarter back, won the game when he intercepted a Washington State pass on his own 43 and a moment later broke away on a 41 yard run to the Cougar goal line. Wally Dash missed the try for the extra point.

BY ARCH WARD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 13—Notre Dame today stunned Dartmouth with a touchdown on the first play of the game and from that point coasted to a 34 to 0 victory for its third straight triumph of the season.

Fritz Alexander, Negro center from Gary's Roosevelt High school, kicked off for Dartmouth and Philip Colella, who raced 76 yards for a touchdown on the opening play of the Illinois game, returned 15 yards to Notre Dame's 31.

Quarter Back Frank Dancewicz, on the first play, faded back, surveyed the field, and whipped a forward pass to Colella, who was rushing down field at full speed. He was behind Dartmouth's left half back, Eugene Howard, who prepped at Winnetka's New Trier High, before any one on the Dartmouth team sensed danger. He caught the ball at his finger tips and sped on with nothing between him and the goal except green turf and bright sunshine.

And That Was That

Steve Krivik, a discharged war hero, drop kicked the extra point and Dartmouth was beaten before the contest had hardly begun.

Notre Dame used its first string lineup only 15 minutes. The traffic between the bench and midfield was heavier at times than in the sixth game of the world series when the Cubs and Tigers broke a record for personnel. The Irish used 50 players.

While the Irish managed to hold down the score by employing second and third string talent most of the way, there never was a time when Dartmouth was any match for any of the Notre Dame combinations. The Irish had overwhelming superiority along the line. The forwards were off their marks with tremendous speed and precision and were forever breaking into the Dartmouth back field to trap runners behind the line of scrimmage.

They Are All Sharp

It made little difference whether Notre Dame operated with its regular back field—Dancewicz, Colella, Frank Ruggerio, and Terry Brennan—or with George Ratterman, Bill Zehler, John Panelli, and Elmer Angsman. One was about as effective as the other. To this galaxy add Joe Gasparella, Bill Gompers, Emil Slovak, and John Agnone. You may as well memorize their names, because you are going to read and hear a lot about them in the weeks ahead.

Notre Dame made 19 first downs to Dartmouth's seven and piled up 334 yards by rushing to the Big Green's 90. Those figures tell the story of the relative strength of the two

Hometown Pals Welcome Grimm with Big Parade

Union, Mo., Oct. 13 (AP)—The vanquished came home to a victor's welcome today as his fellow Missourians opened their hearts to Charley Grimm, manager of the Chicago Cubs, National league champions.

Grimm pranced down the main street on his own horse to the approving cheers of several thousand citizens in a parade headed by the high school band and featuring the Union Saddle club.

Following the parade, headline event of Charley Grimm day, the chamber of commerce presented the Chicago manager, who lives on a near-by farm in the winter, with a set of sterling silver for himself and his wife.

Grimm, short on words for one of the few times in his career, told the memorial auditorium crowd, "I'm sure glad to be home again. I hope that I can find a first-rate ball player around here to take back with me next year."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 13—Marquette university dealt Kansas State's Big Six representatives a 55 to 13 drubbing tonight, the most lopsided score of the 10 year football series.

The victory was clinched in the first quarter when the Hilltoppers scored three touchdowns as the veterans, Johnny Rudan, Paul Copoulos, and Bob Lodde, aided by a pair of Chicago youngsters, Bill Hickey and Joe Gagliardo of St. Ignatius High school, ripped a weak State line to pieces and recorded the touchdowns.

Rudan added two more before the game, played in a light rain, was finished while Bob Quinsey of Flint, Mich.; Robert Wessenberg of Neenah, Wis., and Dennis Pantzlaff of Bonduel, Wis., accounted for the other four.

Big Third Period

Marquette scored once in the second quarter, three times in the third, and once in the last. The visitors got their first one in the second period and their last just a few seconds before the final gun.

State made 12 first downs, only three less than Marquette, but the Kansas double wing back system was easy for the Hilltoppers to stop. The crowd was estimated at 9,000.

Marquette received the opening kickoff and marched to its first touchdown in 12 plays, a 58 yard drive in which Hickey and Rudan were the whole show. Rudan scored on a 17 yard off tackle smash and bob Dams kicked the extra point.

The Wildcats, aided by a 35 yard run by Grimes, came right back to the Marquette 27, but a fumble was recovered by Scherer and Rudan set up the second touchdown with a 44 yard run. Half Back Copoulos made the touchdown and Dams kicked the point. The third score was made by Bob Lodde, with a minute to go on a 7 yard line smash after Full Back Pantzlaff had set it up.

Quinsey Scores One

A poor Kansas State punt resulted in the Hilltoppers' only touchdown early in the second quarter, Quarter Back Karl Plath of Elgin providing most of the punch from the Wildcat 32 to the 2 from where Quinsey scored over left guard.

Midway in the period Kansas State opened its pass attack and Grimes pitched one to Dick Hood for a first down on the Marquette 38, then another to Dale Tolin to the 20. A forward and a lateral, Dick Harris to Grimes to Ross Estes, gave the Wildcats their score.

Rudan scored twice before the third quater was five minutes old, the first time on a 55 yard run on a pass interception and the other on a short line smash. Two minutes later Bob Wessenberg scored on a pass from Plath.

The Hilltoppers continued as the last quarter opened and climaxed a 97 yard drive with Pantzlaff scoring from the 5. The Wildcats' second touchdown drive started on their 30, and they scored on two long pass plays. Grimes, a freshman from Manhattan, Kas., stood head and shoulders above his teammates in their vain attempt to stop the Hilltop march.

lines. The Irish also excelled in the air, altho they tried only four passes, two of which clicked for a total gain of 84 yards as compared with Dartmouth's 19.

To give you some idea of the fancy stepping of the Irish backs, let's look at the individual statistics. Zehler averaged 12 yards in his seven trips with the ball. Brennan gained 37 yards in three efforts for a slightly better average. Angsman averaged seven in three attempts and Ruggerio six in seven. Agnone was the most active of the Irish ball carriers. He had 12 chances and turned in an average of 5 yards.

They Needed Some Protection

Dartmouth had two or three backs who could have gone places behind the Notre Dame line, but they had little chance to shine when their forwards were unable to hold off the South Bend tacklers. It was an Irishman, mind you, who had the best average for the Big Green. His name was Sullivan and he averaged 8 yards in his two trips. The busiest of the Dartmouth backs was another Irishman named O'Brien. He lugged the ball nine times for a total of 14 yards. Meryll Frost, who was severely burned in an air crash while serving with the army air corps in Europe, gained 14 yards in five efforts.

Soon after Notre Dame sprang Colella loose for the first touchdown, Dancewicz, whose accurate pass largely was responsible for the score, shot an aerial to Bob Skoglund, one of the few lettermen on the squad, and the former Loyola prep star crossed the Dartmouth goal standing up. The play began on the 15 yard line, to where it had been advanced mainly by the hard running of Brennan and Colella.

Irish March to Score

Notre Dame traveled 89 yards for its third touchdown which came early in the second quarter. Dartmouth, unable to gain, punted out of bounds on Notre Dame's 11. Colella cracked thru right tackle for a first down on the 21. Ruggerio moved the ball to his 37. Zehler, who replaced Colella, and Ruggerio added another first down at midfield. Angsman, substitute for Brennan, went thru center for 10. Ruggerio was away for seven off right tackle. Angsman made it a first down on Dartmouth's 24. Zehler darted outside his right tackle, sidesteppd Frost, Dartmouth's defending back, who was left sprawled on the ground, and legged it to the goal. Krivik dropkicked the extra point to make the score 20 to 0.

Notre Dame's fourth touchdown was made in the third quarter after an exchange of punts left the ball in possession of the Irish on the Green's 38 yard line.

Slovak made three thru center and Agnone got seven off right tackle. Slovak banged thru the middle for a first down on the 21. Krivik sliced off tackle, as they say in Bush Creek, Ia., for 6 and two plays later went thru his left guard for the score. He drop kicked the point.

Clark Recovers Fumble

The final touchdown was set up when Oswald Clark, Notre Dame's left end, recovered Deutsch's fumble on the Dartmouth 15. Joe Yonto, who was operating at full back for the Irish, gained five and Agnone made a first down on the 5. Line punges by Yonto and Agnone moved the ball 1 yard from the goal. Yonto stepped thru center for the touchdown. Skoglund's place kick was blocked, but he picked up the ball and ran around his left end for the extra point.

Army Powerhouse Defeats Stubborn Wolverines, 28-7

which gave the Wolverines aid from its best punters. Dworsky played his part later as did Pete Elliott and Henry Fonde. These sprinters, and Walt Teninga, who opened at left half, were exceptional against a defense which always was a step faster than Michigan's blockers.

Penalties Hurt Both Teams

Each team was assessed only one 15 yard penalty and both were barriers to touchdowns. In the first quarter Davis caught a long pass from Tucker over Teninga's head for a 61 yard gain and apparent touchdown which was called back when Army held. The penalty put the ball on Army's 24 yard line.

In the second period of a scoreless game, Fonde carried Elliott's lateral 16 yards for th first down on the Cadet 10, but the Wolverines held on the play and were back on Army's 36. On fourth down—two plays later—Weisenberger was downed on Army's 33 yard line.

The Cadets then marched 67 yards in 13 plays for the first touchdown of the afternoon. McWilliams, Blanchard, and Davis smashed Michigan's line in succession for first down on Army's 46. Davis was stopped without a gain but handed the ball on the next play to Herschel Fuson who lateraled to Blanchard. The burly full back was trapped on Michigan's 43 yard line.

Army Rolls for Score

Blanchard hammered center for 2 yards and Davis sprinted around defensive left end for 8 more. McWilliams was stopped with a gain of 2 yards but Blanchard's two successive plays gained 8 yards. Davis then sprinted around the Wolverines' left end for 10 yards. Blanchard crashed over guard for 2 yards and McWilliams, swinging wide around Michigan's right end, scored. Dick Walterhouse placekicked the first of his four conversions and Army led, 7 to 0.

Michigan received and on fourth down Teninga kicked out on Army's 31 yard line. On the first Cadet scrimmage, Blanchard struck outside Michigan's left tackle, cut back over the middle of the secondary, and ran 69 yards to the goal. It was a perfect play. No Michigan man was on his feet as Blanchard charged the last 30 yards. After the conversion, Army led, 14 to 0, and this was the score at the intermission.

The Wolverines, who had lost the toss at the start of the game, chose to receive to open play in the third period. Army defended the north goal. Bob Nussbaumer took Blanchard's kick-off in the end zone and returned to his 25 yard line. Ten plays later Art Renner caught Teninga's pass in the Cadet end zone to score. Here was Michigan's high tide of performance and the drive went like this:

After Nussbaumer was stopped b. Army's line, Weisenburger, at full back, spun thru guard for 5 yards. Teninga then sprinted around Army's left end for 30 yards and a first down on the Cadet 40. Weisenburger plunged for 2 and then Fonde turned Army's left flank for 5 more. On a spin, Teninga faked and held the ball, ripping thru guard for 18 yards. It was first down on Army's 15.

Weisenburger got 5 yards in two line plays. Teninga was held to a yard at Army's right end. On fourth down, Teninga passed and altho the ball was deflected by a lineman, it was caught by Renner in the end zone. Ponsetto kicked the point and Michigan trailed, 14 to 7.

Fumbles and an Interception

Army's counter-attack was stopped after nine consecutive plays when Bob Derleth recovered Tucker's fumble on Michigan's 26 yard line. After the punt by Weisenburger, Army started again from its 40. This time, with only two minutes of the third period remaining, Ponsetto intercepted Davis' pass on Michigan's 33 yard stripe. The advantage was immediately nullified when Elliot fumbled and Blanchard recovered on the Wolverine's 31.

Davis swung around Michigan's left end for 15 yards, McWilliams turned right end for 15 yards more and on the last scrimmage play of the third quarter Blanchard drove thru the line to score. Army led, 21 to 7.

In the last period, Michigan, altho definitely beaten, rallied to mark up two first downs and advance 35 yards to Army's 30 where Elliott's low pass to Len Ford on fourth down ended the assault.

Then came Davis and there Davis went on the first play. He outran all opponents straight across the gridiron and turned down the east side line to cover 70 yards for the final touchdown of the game.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 13 [Special]—Michigan State's surprise eleven displayed an unexpected brand of football today and upset Pittsburgh, 12 to 7. A crowd of 15,000 watched the Spartans monopolize play thruout the afternoon with the exception of a few brief moments in the fourth quarter.

Michigar State lost little time in starting its offensive rolling. Steve Contos recovered Mike Roussos' fumble on the Pitt 26 yard line on the second series of plays in the opening quarter. The Spartans moved the ball to the Pitt 17 before the Panther line could stop the drive.

Pittsburgh was unable to dent the Spartan defense and kicked to the Michigan State 41. Russ Reader whipped a pass to Nick Ziegler, who fell on the Pitt 38. Reader then dropped back and shot a long pass to Contos, who was brought down on the Pitt 4. Three plays later Contos went over to give Michigan State its first touchdown.

Tino Barbas intercepted a Pitt pass near midfield late in the first quarter to set up Michigan State's second touchdown, returning the ball to the Pitt 22.

In the second period Contos swept around left end for 12 yards and a first down. After two line plays gained 4 yards, Reader shot a pass to Contos, who was forced out of bounds on the 3. Jack Breslin scored Michigan State's second touchdown around left end. again failed to kick the extra point.

Jimmy Robinson made the outstanding play of the afternoon with a sensational 87 yard run in the final quarter.

BOILERMAKERS BURY HAWKEYES BY 40-0 SCORE

began on Iowa's 39, where Canfield was dropped after capturing the punt. Canfield reeled off 10 yards, Cody scooted over his right end to the 15 yard line, and after a 5 yard contribution by Alan Dale, Canfield zigzagged his way over the goal, Tom Hughes kicking the extra point.

Canfield Does It Again

The kickoff after the touchdown plunked against an unsuspecting Hawkeye and Purdue recovered the ball on its own 49 yard line. Canfield and Cody took turns in a drive that, after getting within a foot of the goal, was slowed down by a penalty hung on the Boilermakers for having a back in motion. Just for that the Boilermakers took to the air, Bob Demos pitching a pass to Canfield, who was in the end zone when he made the catch. Hughes again kicked the placement.

A few minutes after the second quarter had gotten under way, a fumble was recovered for the Boilermakers by Marvin Crowe on Iowa's 42 yard line. On the next play Canfield burst thru the Iowa wall and hiked unmolested to the goal, but it did not count. The play was called back and a 15 yard penalty was hung on the Boilermakers. But a moment or so later Canfield emerged from a convention of Hawkeyes and went tearing 41 yards down field for the third touchdown. Hughes' kick made it 21 to 0.

Hawks Bid in Third

It was early in the third quarter that the Hawks made their first visit deep into the Boilermakers' territory. Cody fumbled after the kickoff and Bill Kay captured the ball for Iowa on the 28 yard line. A couple of short gains by Louis Boda and a pass tossed by Jerry Niles to Dick Meyer boosted the Iowans to a spot 11 yards from the Boilermaker goal but on the next play Paul Golden was nailed by Hughes for a three yard loss. Then the Hawks tried to pass but it didn't work and they lost the ball on downs.

Just as the third period was about to end, the nimble Canfield scampered for 29 yards, putting the Boilermakers on Iowa's 41 yard line. As soon as the final period opened, Canfield staged another little act that put him on the 24 yard line. Three plunges by Cody and a five yard dash by Canfield gave the Boilermakers a first down on the 11 yard line. Two more thrusts by Cody carried it over, Hughes kicking the extra point for the fourth time.

Purdue Freshmen March

With the all-freshman back field in action halfway thru the last quarter, the Boilermakers marched from midfield, where an Iowa punt went out of bounds, to their fifth touchdown. The big item in the drive was an Ernest Dobrzyskowski thrust that carried to the 13 yard line where additional distress in the shape of a five yard penalty hit the Iowans. Norbert Adams shot thru from there for the six points but Hughes in his fifth attempt at conversion missed connections.

With only a few minutes of play remaining a pass by Niles was intercepted by Jack Fredericks, who stepped up to the Iowa 38 yard line before being nabbed. After a one yard gain by Jack Scrafield, Dobrzykowski plummeted thru the Iowa wall and just as the Hawks were swarming on him he flipped a lateral to Raymond Gunkel who was almost over the goal before the Hawks noticed that he was missing. Hughes failed to kick the point.

In the last minute of play Niles passed to Nelson Smith for 24 yards and then passed to Obern Simons to put the Hawks on the 12 yard line. But two more pass attempts failed as did a run by Simons as the game ended.

SPOTTING THE PINS

BY JAMES SEGRETI

TWINKLE WATTS, 11 year old ice skating and bowling star, will oppose three of the nation's leading women bowlers in Cascade center Wednesday night. . . . Miss Watts, who recently defeated Hank Marino in Milwaukee with a 592 total, will meet Mrs. Hank Wilman in her first match. . . . Then she will appear against Dorothy Miller and Betty McCarthy. . . . Joe Wilman has chosen Dearborn-Jackson recreation as his home alleys for the nontitle match with champion Buddy Bomar Nov. 17 and 18. . . . They will roll four seven game blocks, the first two at Dearborn-Jackson and the second pair at Bomar's home alleys, Faetz recreation.

The first of a series of Saturday night handicap tournaments was held in Howard Bowl last night. . . . The sweepers, consisting of three games across six alleys, begin at 4 o'clock and terminate at 4 a. m. Sunday. . . . Entries are pouring in for the Classic Super Sweeper to be held in Pla-Mor Nov. 10 and 11, according to Secretary Eddie Krems. . . . The Cook County Moose Traveling Bowling league moves to Bowl-Mor recreation in Brookfield today. . . . Suburban Lodge No. 1599 is host for the day. . . . South Highland No. 920 leads the league with 11 victories and one defeat.

Plan 76 Alley Center for Northwest Side

Louis P. Petersen and several associates plan a 76 alley establishment on Chicago's northwest side, which will be the largest in the world. . . . The huge building also will have facilities for other sports events, including boxing and basketball. . . . Jimmy Kintz, army lieutenant, who starred in the Randolph and Windy City leagues, will be discharged soon. . . . Entries close Oct. 22 for the 2d annual Individual Classic in Bowlway recreation, Elgin, Ill., Oct. 27 and 28 and Nov. 3 and 4. . . . Louis Miller of the Barrington Major league rolled a 300 game on the Ten Pin alleys in Barrington last Friday night.

Keeley Half and Half, leader in the North End Traveling league, meets the Baby Ruth quintet in Bowling Lanes tomorrow night. . . . Other matches will bring together Schamberger-Schlitz and Maister Brau, at Stack in Ryan recreation; Congress Arcade and Edelweiss in Samuelson's arcade; Williams Jewelry and Marigold Arcade at the latter alleys and Gold Crown and Kay Daumits in Faetz recreation. . . . Keeley Half and Half has won 15 and lost 3. . . . Schamberger-Schlitz and the Baby Ruths are tied for second, each with 13 victories and 5 defeats. . . . The annual North End Sweeper will be held today at 8 p. m. on the Faetz alleys.

Bill Herrmann topped the second night of bowling in the Chicago Rapid Transit league with 608. . . . He also had high game of 237, beating out Ralph Whitelaw, who had 228, and Walter Trimble, 225. . . . Resumption of the ABC tournament, which starts March 14 in Buffalo, automatically revives the ABC 10 year high average battle. . . . Four Chicago bowlers—Ad Carlson, Paul Krumske, Joe Wilman, and Dick Winsberg—occupy places among the top 20 based on the last consecutive ABC events. . . . Jim McMillan of Champaign has issued the final call for entries in his Individual Sweeper Oct. 27 and 28. . . . So has Pat Harkins of Bloomington, whose meet will be held Oct. 28 at Bloomington.

Jap Prison Couldn't Dim Skill of Jack Printz

Jack Printz hasn't lost his bowling touch. . . . The Chicago star, recently liberated from a Jap prison camp, arrived here and rolled a 609 series in his first effort in more than two years. . . . The Kieckhefer Alley-Kote quintet will seek to strengthen its lead in the Junior Classic league against Globe Life Insurance in Beverly recreation, next Saturday night.

Entries for the 42d annual Chicago Bowling association tournament have been mailed by Secretary Roy Davis. . . . The team event this year will be held in Cascade center and the doubles and singles tournaments in Rose Bowl. . . . It also will be conducted on a handicap basis. . . . The team meet will start Dec. 1 and the doubles and singles Dec. 8. . . . Entries will close Nov. 1.

BY EDWARD PRELL

The Bears won their first National Football league victory last year on Oct. 15. They can beat this record by 24 hours for 1945 by beating the Cardinals this afternoon on Wrigley field's greens in Chicago's first league game of the season.

A year ago their opponents were the combined Cardinal and Pittsburgh Steeler teams. The Cards are going it alone this season and already have lost their first three contests. The Bears are twice beaten and fairly quaking at the thought they will be the means of the Cardinals breaking a 29 game league losing streak.

Promised good weather is expected to bring out 25,000 fans, most of whom will be curious concerning reports that the injury riddled Bears may not even be able to field 11 able bodied athletes. It isn't that bad, but the Bears are at an all time low ebb in physical power. At least a dozen of their players are injured, some so badly they'll not be able to play today.

Cards' Hopes High

The Cards, tho wondering if the Bears aren't trying to build them up for a letdown, have been acting all week as tho believing this is the game in which their prolonged suffering will come to an end. They have the tools to do it—a squad in far better condition than the Bears—and one whose line, man for man, has an edge.

Each team has a flock of players who have returned from the wars. The No. 1 Cardinal in this category is Paul Christman, the great prewar passer at the University of Missouri. He is the key man of the Cardinal attack, just as is Sid Luckman for the Bears. The Cards have switched this season to the T formation made famous by the Bears.

The Cards' running backs are former stars of rival league teams—Left Half Back Leo Cantor, once of the New York Giants, and Frank Seno, left half, recently acquired from the Washington Redskins. The Cardinals have four full backs and Walter Rankin, 200 pounder from Texas Tech, will start at that position. He will have help from Frank Balazs, former University of Iowa and Green Bay players; Bus Mertes, University of Iowa and Iowa Preflight, and Al Drulis from Temple. Christmam is backed up at quarter back by Vince Oliver, ex-Indiana university. Johnny Knolla is the No. 2 left half, and Bill Reynolds of Mississippi ranks next to Seno at right half.

Billy Dewell, pre-war end, will start on the left side, backed up by Jim Poole, former Giant wingman. Cactus Face Duggan, a veteran, and Ralph Foster, giant rookie from Oklahoma Aggies, are the left tackles. Right guards are Conway Baker and 235 pound Vic Obeck. The new center is Clifton Speegle, 1945 College All-Star from Oklahoma, who has the spot pending Marshall Foch Robnett's complete recovery from a leg injury.

Joe Kuharich, one time Notre Dame star, who directed the Cards' attack from a guard position a few seasons ago, is making his post-war debut at right guard, backed up by Gordon Wilson, a 235 pound Texan. Chet Bulger, Bob Zimny of Indiana, and 235 pound Bob Eckl from Wisconsin, are the right tackles. Veteran Ed Rucinski; Joe Carter, Clint Wager, and John Durko, a newcomer from the Eagles, are the right ends. Rucinski yesterday reconsidered his decision to retire.

Bears Shift Line

Because of injuries, the Bears will be forced to make shifts in the line. Al Hoptowit is listed for duty at right guard on the offense, left guard on the defense, and as a helper for Lee Artoe at right tackle. Abe Croft, a right end who has been injured, will operate from left end. Connie Mack Berry, normally a left end, will play on the other side because of Capt. George Wilson's loss by injury.

The league's hot spot today will be Green Bay, where the defending champion Packers will try to hurl back the challenge of the Cleveland Rams. Each is unbeaten and the winner will take command in the western division. A year ago the Rams came close to beating the Packers in Green Bay. They have been greatly strengthened since then and are no worse than an even bet to win.

The Philadelphia Eagles, eastern favorites, come into the west, meeting the Lions in Detroit. The Boston Yanks and New York Giants clash in Yankee stadium in another attractive game. Last Sunday the Yanks whipped the Washington Redskins and the Giants routed the Pittsburgh Steelers. The Steelers play the Redskins today in Pittsburgh.

Sports on the Production Line

BY WILLIAM BAYLISS

EQUALLING the record which the plant's basketball teams set last winter, the American Gear and Manufacturing company representatives won three industrial softball titles during the recent season and added another championship in independent competition for good measure.

The American Gear men's team won championships in both the Clearing Industrial district and West Suburban Industrial leagues, while the girls won the Clearing Industrial women's crown. In independent competition, the men's team won the second half title and then swept the four game post-season play-offs in the North Town league.

The Gears won 29 straight games in the Clearing district competition, took 13 out of 14 in the West Suburban league and 25 of 30 in the North Town season. Swede Roos, Dick Triptow and Elmer Gainer, all of whom also played on the American Gears basketball team, compiled batting averages around the .400 level for the season.

Champion Motorola Girls Get Some Post-Season Rewards

Members of the Motorola Radio girls' softball team, champions of the feminine division of the Chicago Affiliated Industrial Recreation association league this summer, reaped some post-season benefits Wednesday night, when they were guests of the Galvin Manufacturing company plant's athletic department at a victory banquet.

The Motorola girls, who finished in first place in both halves of the C. A. I. R. A. league season, received trophies and sports jackets, in addition to a lot of praise. In addition to the 15 players, guests at the party included Frank O'Brien, vice president of the Galvin company; Frank [Spike] Kurek, team manager, and Jim Cusentino, athletic director.

Illinois Tool Works Golfers Win C. A. I. R. A. Tournament

The Chicago Affiliated Industrial Recreation association ended its first summer athletic program a week ago with its team championship golf tournament at the Nordic Hills Country club. Seven of the eight plants making up the organization entered their top four golfers, with the Illinois Tool Works foursome winning the championship, to add to its league trophy just acquired in men's softball.

The I. T. W. foursome had a gross score of 333, the members and their individual contributions being Emil Koe, 81; Vic Kopang, 81; Harry La Veau, 81, and Art Froehlich, 90. Motorola Radio was second, a foursome made up of Wally Murdock, Ed Deneen, Lyn Day and Roy Gould having an aggregate of 342. Other teams competing represented J. P. Seeburg corporation, Danly Machine, Rauland corporation, Webster-Chicago and National Mineral. The eighth member of the association, the Haber company, did not have a team. The low individual scorer was R. Heinlen of National Mineral, who shot a 76.

Directors of the C. A. I. R. A. will meet this week to plan the organization's winter sports schedule. Basketball and table tennis programs seem assured and there may be additional activities.

Jeffery Named Commissioner of National Conference

Gordon Jeffery of Toledo, O., Lucas county clerk of courts and for 10 years Toledo recreation commissioner, has been appointed acting commissioner of the new National Industrial Athletic conference for one year. Schedules for basketball and bowling for this winter were drawn up at a recent meeting in Detroit, with American Gear of Chicago, Allis-Chalmers of Milwaukee, P. R. Mallory company of Indianapolis, Dow Chemical of Midland, Mich., and Goodyear of Akron, O., active participants. Briggs Body Works of Detroit, sixth member of the conference, will compete on a nonleague basis this winter.

Rauland, Seeburg Meet with Bowling League Lead at Stake

Leadership in the Division Street Y. M. C. A. Industrial Bowling league will be at stake Tuesday night when the Rauland corporation and J. P. Seeburg corporation teams meet. The Raulands' lead was cut to two games last week when that team lost two to Phoenix Dye Works, while the Seeburgs were winning three from Thordarson Electric. George Nelson of Lion Manufacturing has moved into first place in the individual standings with an average of 185.

The first place congestion in the Chicago Association of Commerce Industrial Bowling league, which a week ago had five teams tied for first place, has been lessened somewhat. After Thursday's session Illinois Bell Telephone and Verson Allsteel Press were on top. Verson rolled a new league season high game, 1,082, and series, 2,988.

BUCKEYES WHIP BADGERS, 12-0, BEFORE 69,235

the lads from Madison advanced to the Buckeyes' 17 yard. In the first three periods they never approached any such proximity to the pay off stripe.

The first Badger advance to the Buckeye 17 was the result of a 59 yard sprint by Kindt, who seemed on the way to a touchdown until Fisher separated two blockers and nailed him. The second approach to the 17 yard line was effected for the most part by a 41 yard pass by Dan Orlick to Vern Klinzing ruled complete because of interference.

Both advances to those 17 yard maximums bogged down grievously, the first when Jerry Thompson was trapped on a pass play and dumped back to the 35 yard line, the second when the Badgers lost the ball on downs.

Buckeyes Make 18 First Downs

The statistics scarcely were consistent to a 12 to 0 ball game. Ohio State made 18 first downs, gained a net 280 yards from rushing and 101 yards from passing. The Badgers made seven first downs, four from rushing and three from passing and gained 87 yards from passing. The Buckeyes completed five of 11 passes attempted, the Badgers four of the dozen they tried. Each team had one pass intercepted. The Buckeyes fumbled four times, but lost the ball only once. The Badgers did not fumble.

The victory was the 12th in a row for the Buckeyes. Statistics:

All-Star Game Holds Soccer Interest Today

BY OFFSIDE

Soccer moves into the all-star field today when a picked team from the Chicago National league meets the Eintrachts of Long Island, N. Y., national amateur champions, in Sparta stadium, 21st st. and Kostner av., at 3 o'clock.

The Eintrachts will be seeking to duplicate the feat of the Hispanos in whipping Chicago's best. The invaders, who have fielded the same lineup in every game for three years, have twice won the national amateur title and three times taken first place in New York's fast German-American league.

The New Yorkers lack weight, but are famous for their speed and ball control. Last season they scored the amazing total of 118 goals in 22 league contests. Only the Brooklyn Wanderers, a professional team, succeeded in defeating them. That setback came in a national open match.

Two games will precede the all-star contest. In the curtain raiser at 12:30 p. m., the Juvenile All-Stars will face the Chicago Hornets, and at 1:30 p. m. the Major League All-Stars play the First Division All-Stars.

Following are the lineups:

Eintrachts		All-Stars
Koegler	G. K.	Stein [Hakoah]
Schumacher	R. B.	Schroeder [Swedes]
Tellini	L. B.	Schaaf [Schwabens]
T. Antretter	R. H.	Dawson [Vikings]
McGregor	C. H.	Torres [Necaxa]
S. Antretter	L. H.	Robb [Rangers]
Valle	O. R.	List [Vikings]
Baldwin	I. R.	Nemchik [Vikings]
Graewe	C. F.	Lehman [Hakoahs]
Latsch	I. L.	Matevich [Slovaks]
Miether	O. L.	Wolf [Sparta]

Substitutes: Eintrachts—Fassnacht, Held. Chicago—McDermott [Vikings]; Marchiori [Italians]; Vanek [Sparta]; Jordan [Schwabens]; Csonka [Schwabens].

Managers: Vincent Henberger [Eintracht]; Harry Field [Hakoah] [Chicago].

major fault, notably among the reserves who romped thru most of the latter half, was a propensity for incurring penalties.

The scoring parade found practically everybody in the Hoosier lineup going over in a rudimentary session which gave almost all of the local boys a chance to celebrate before the homecomers. Ben Raimondi, the Indiana quarter back, started the show with a first quarter 40 yard dash to the Husker 5. Dick Deranek scored standing up on the next play.

Nebraska, paced by Mack Robinson, then began a drive which ended on the Indiana 36 yard mark when Mack's fumble was recovered by Bill Armstrong, one of the two Evansville boys who contributed 18 points to the Indiana total. Bill's brother, Charley, the former air force captain, added six on placements to his kin's two touchdowns.

The Hoosiers Get Going

The first quarter ended in a 6 to 0 score, much to the astonishment of the homecomers. The home boys soon adjusted that by scoring 21 points in the second period. After an attempted punt by Nebraska's Charley Story was partially blocked, George Taliaferro, the Gary Negro, who was the hero of the Indiana conquest of Michigan, went 14 yards off the Nebraska right tackle. Then Pete Pihos the old Austin High school end, playing full back, drove over for the second score.

Raimondi then hurled two touchdown passes to Mel Groomes, Trenton, N. J., Negro half back, and Bob Ravensberg, Bellevue, Ky., end. The second half kickoff gave Bob Miller, former Taft High school star from Chicago, a chance to take the ball for a 95 yard touchdown scamper. After that, the homecomers just sat back. Their smugness was ruffled when Ed Gradoville, one of the three letter men Nebraska brought along, led a charge which wound up with him firing a 9 yard pass to 17 year old Paul Kipper for the Huskers' first touchdown.

Huskers Make Costly Fumble

Jack Adams, Muncie Negro back, intercepted a Nebraska pass which led to the first touchdown by Bill Armstrong. Nick Sebek then recovered a fumble by Gradoville and set up a 19 yard dash by Bill for his second score of the doings. Tom Schwartz made the last Indiana touchdown after Don Sailors, Nebraska freshman end, had intercepted Bob Miller's pass on the Indiana 31 yard stripe. Sailors then caught a flip from Bill Sloan which carried the ball to the Hoosiers' 10 yard mark, whereat Gradoville shot a touchdown pass to Story.

CRUSADERS BEAT NORTH CENTRAL ELEVEN, 33 TO 0

Valparaiso, Ind., Oct. 13 [Special]—Valparaiso university's Crusaders today won their third straight football game of the season, defeating North Central college, 33 to 0, at Brown field.

Harvey Freeland sparked the Valpo attack with two touchdown tosses and a 27 yard touchdown run. Harry Hines and Joe Larocca each scored twice, both running for a touchdown and each scoring again on passes from Freeland.

Late in the third quarter with Valpo leading 20 to 0, the Crusaders crossed the goal line three times on the same series of downs, but the first two attempts were called back because of penalties.

HUNTERS MOAN; DUCKS REFUSE TO BE TARGETS

BY BEN MARKLAND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Peoria, Ill., Ill., Oct. 13—Disappointed duck hunters slogged out of the Illinois river valley today after one of the poorest waterfowl inaugurals of the last decade. Fair hunting was reported from two river areas—the Clear lake district north of Liverpool and the Crane lake evirons 10 miles south of Bath. From all other areas the reports were as dark as slough water.

Frank Bellorse Jr., game technician of the Illinois natural history survey, tallied hunters' luck, in person and by telephone, his checking including private clubs and day shooting resorts from Henry south to Merdosia. A few hunters bagged the limit of 10 ducks in the Liverpool and Bath areas, but in vast stretches of the river on each side of those two areas there were few targets flying.

The Ducks Leave Early

Bellrose estimated there were 150,000 ducks in the valley two weeks ago, about 80,000 early this week, and only about 30,00 0for today's opening shoot. Of these 30,000, about one-third were in the Clear and Crane lake areas. Controled water levels and summer plantings of natural duck feeds were credited for holding the ducks in these favored areas.

Slough hunters bagged most of the ducks taken today, with pintails, teal, widgeon, and mallards the most common species. Open water hunters were encouraged by the fact that 3,000 to 5,00 bluebill, canvasback,and blackjack ducks have arrived in the last three days.

Rain Destroys Food Supply.

The early departure of the puddle ducks which were here two weeks ago, is blamed on the fact that the natural supply of millet, smartweed and nut grasses is low because of the excessive spring and summer rains which flooded their growing areas. With little available feed, the birds migrated to Arkansas and the gulf states.

The weather also was unfavorable for hunting, with fair skies, and afternoon temperature of 70 degrees, and little wind. During the warm afternoon period the birds refused to fly from open waters, which are inaccessible to the hunters.

If the mallards arrive on their normal schedule, hunting should improve in the next three weeks. The first major flight usually arrives from the north between Oct. 25 and Nov. 5. The shortage of natural feeds should not force the mallards south, inasmuch as these favored birds will be feeding in the river valley cornfields, gleaning the grain left by mechanical corn pickers.

OAK PARK DEALS 21 TO 19 DEFEAT TO NEW TRIER

Don Henkle's Kicking Is Big Factor

New Trier, 1944 football champion of the Suburban league, yesterday put up a game display before a home crowd as it started defense of its title, but the Terriers were unable to cope with the kicking toe of Oak Park's Don Henkle, reserve full back, who three times made good on attempts at the point after touchdown as the Villagers gained a 21 to 19 victory.

The game was one of the most closely contested league meetings in recent seasons as the title holding Winnetka eleven fought to defeat a strong Oak Park team which has lost only two games in its series with the Terriers.

Bob Kritzer Scores

Oak Park took the lead in the first quarter when Bob Kritzer crossed from the two yard line and Henkle made good on the first of his extra point kicks. This gave the Villagers a 7 to 0 advantage which held up only momentarily. The Terriers wasted no time in tying the score as Roger Drew sprinted 20 yards for a touchdown after gathering a seven yard pass from Jack Lockyer, Drew adding the point.

It was 7 to 7 at the end of the quarter, but in the second period New Trier took charge with Drew inching over from the 1 yard line and Cliff Stowers, a right half back, following Drew's efforts with a 44 yard run for another touchdown. Meanwhile, the Villagers had edged in a touchdown by Kutzer and Henkle had added the point, leaving them behind, 19 to 14, at the intermission.

After a scoreless third period, Bob Handke threw a 15 yard pass to Pierre Peloquin, who ran 30 yards for the winning points. Henkle's extra point made it 21 to 19.

Proviso Beats Morton

In a second Suburban league meeting in Maywood, Proviso beat Morton, 13 to 6, with a last quarter rally after the score had been tied at 6 to 6. Proviso scored first when Mel Pfeifer plunged across, but George Behnke's 32 yard run tied it. The winning touchdown came when Bob Caselli ran to the 16 and lateraled to Howard Justus, who scored.

Evanston came from behind to defeat Waukegan, 14 to 7, in Waukegan, after Waukegan led, 7 to 0, at the half. Bill Biggs and Bob Shasberger scored for the Wildkits and Sonny Gordon made the losers' touchdown. Lineups:

Fenwick Bids for 3d Victory of Year Today

Fenwick's Friars, paced by Roger Brown and Dick Martin, two of the better half backs in the Catholic league, today will be seeking their third south section victory when they meet Joliet Catholic in Fenwick park.

The Friars, who this season are given an equal chance to capture a south section title to place alongside the north section crown won in 1944, already have passed two obstacles. They defeated Mount Carmel, 7 to 0, on a wet field in the league opener. Last week, they had little trouble in dealing St. Rita 38 to 7 defeat. By comparison, Mount Carmel defeated Joliet Catholic, 19 to 0.

St. Rita Meets Caravan

Elsewhere in the south section, St. Rita plays Mount Carmel in 83d-Yates stadium, with the eleven coached by Earl Walsh rated a slight favorite. In the third game a Leo eleven that was rated just about the best in the league on a preseason basis will meet De La Salle in Shewbridge field. The Lions will be attempting to get back in the race after a 9 to 0 reversal by St. George of Evanston in the Lions' opener. The Dragons from Evanston, meanwhile, will have a week of rest.

Weber Meets St. Philip

In the north section the defending league champion, Weber, meets St. Philip in St. Philip stadium. Weber beat Holy Trinity, 41 to 0, while St. Philip lost to St. Ignatius, 7 to 6, last week. This week the Gaels are expected to rebound and may cause trouble for the Red Horde.

St. Ignatius meets Holy Trinity in Key Branch stadium, St. Patrick plays De Paul in Lane Tech stadium, and St. Mel plays at Loyola to round out the section and league schedules.

MARK UP FIFTEEN YARDS FOR NEW TRIER!

Latin School Wins, 14 to 13; Third Victory

The Chicago Latin eleven kept its Private School league record intact yesterday morning with a 14 to 13 decision over Luther institute on the Latin field. Emil Iverson's plunge for the extra point in the second quarter was the margin of victory.

Latin's first touchdown, in the first few minutes of play, was the result of a 25 yard forward pass from Iverson to Wendell Hall. Iverson then passed to Jay Schiller for the point. The second period score was produced by the indefatigable Iverson, who went across on a 12 yard line smash.

Pahr Plunges Across

Joe Pahr plunged from the 1 yard line for Luther's first touchdown in the second quarter. Bob Mudinger ran for the second score in the third quarter and also kicked the extra point.

After suffering two league defeats, Todd school of Woodstock shut out Wheaton academy in Wheaton, 12 in 0, in another Private league game. Bob Fitch sparked a ground drive in the first quarter that advanced the ball to the 2 yard line, from where Sergei Lenorman powered 't over the goal. Ted McKee ran 24 yards for the other touchdown in the second quarter.

North Park Wins

Bruce Johnson and Johnny Ward scored two touchdowns apiece as North Park academy rolled up a 24 to 7 victory over North Shore in Winnetka. It was the first success in three starts for North Park and the second loss in three for North Shore.

Bob Damon scored two touchdowns and Alan Kanter and Dick Bickle each scored once as Francis Parker beat Harvard, 24 to 0, on Latin field in the fourth league game. Lineups:

100,000 WILL SEE SOCCER GAME IN RUSSIA TODAY

MOSCOW, Oct. 13 (AP)—The largest crowd ever to witness a soccer football game in the U. S. S. R.—more than 100,000 fans—is expected to attend tomorrow's championship game between the Dynamo and Central House Red army teams. While excited crowds milled about Dynamo stadium in Moscow clamoring for tickets, officials said some 80,000 tickets already have been sold and predicted other thousands will be seated around the field.

Yale Beaten by Columbia Rally, 27 to 13

New York, Oct. 13 (AP)—Coming back in the second half after spotting Yale 13 points in the first two periods, Columbia's unbeaten Lions defeated the Bulldogs, 27 to 13, today with Half Back Gene Rossides throwing two touchdown passes.

Rossides' important passes came in the third period and both landed in the arms of Les Thompson, Columbia end who added some fancy stepping to the scoring plays that traveled 62 and 21 yards.

The Lions struck twice more by land to win their third start of the season before 30,000 and a Rossides pass set up one of these scores.

LONGSHOTS WIN AS HAWTHORNE MEETING ENDS

A daily double worth $505.20 and a series of victories by longshots combined yesterday to bring Hawthorne's 32 day meeting to a sucessful conclusion.

Racing interest in the Chicago area will shift to Sportsman's Park tomorrow for a 30 day meeting. Twelve days of the meeting will be turned over to charity. The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., will sponsor six of the charity days, Nov. 5 thru Nov. 10. John L. Keeshin, president and general manager of the National Jackey club, has announced that the minimum purse for the Sportsman's meeting will be $1,500.

Meeting Mutuels Total $32,709,724

Yesterday's attendance at Hawthorne was 19,349 bringing the meeting's total to 394,219. This is under the 467,009 for last year's 34 day meeting, but the wagering was in excess of the 1944 figures. Yesterday's wagering amounted to $1,590,193, second highest of the meeting, and brought the season's total to $32,709,724. The total handle for 1944 was $31,461,162. Hawthorne's average for the 32 day meeting was $1,022,178.

Long priced horses started their parade to the winner's circle in the first race yesterday when W. Gher's Compatriot triumphed, paying its backers $26.60. Mrs. Monte Weil's Joe Spagat won the second race at $66.80 and the two were responsible for the $505.20 daily double.

She Didn't Does It Again

M. H. Vanberg's She Didn't did it again yesterday. Thursday she won at 66 to 1, but her backers had to be content with $52.20 yesterday, when the long shot came home first in the fourth race.

The Au Revoir handicap was taken by Hyman Friedberg's Harriet Sue, which had been away back in her recent starts. She rewarded at $21.40 for each $2 ticket.

Wallflower Returns $12.80

The day of upsets reached a surprising climax when Ralph W. McIlvain's Wallflower won the 16th running of the $10,000 Illinois Owners' handicap. Assigned only 103 pounds against the older horses, the 3 year old filly attracted little support and paid $12.80, $6 and $4.80 in the mutuels. She finished three lengths in advance of Mrs. Clyde Troutt's Take Wing, which returned $4.80 and $4. Mrs. F. M. Harris' Diderod was third and paid $7.40 to show.

Declaration of Ruth Sidell's Burgoo Maid [she started in the sixth race and failed to place] left 11 in the starting field and Wallflower's share amounted to $8,550. She was ridden by Freddie Smith and never was in danger after jumping into an early lead the first time the field passed the stands.

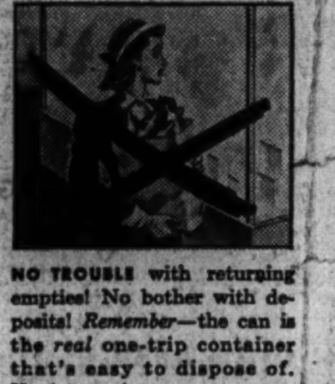
"BRING CANNED BEER BACK, TOO," says returned veteran



NO TROUBLE with returning empties! No bother with deposits! Remember—the can is the real one-trip container that's easy to dispose of. You're sure it never enters any home but yours. Only the can offers you so many advantages.

IN BETWEEN MUNCHES on cheese sandwich, Ex-corporal Steve Wygant, New York veteran, trades battle tales with buddy, Ex-pfc. Hugo Huettl, in Steve's apartment.

Says Wygant, "What we need with these sandwiches is some of that canned beer... remember that Thanksgiving Day in London in '43? The canned beer we had then was a touch of 'home' from home. Sure, I'm glad to be back and working again. But Gosh! Get that canned beer back, too. I sure miss it."

With slackening demands from the Armed Services, we'll all be able to enjoy beer in cans—SOON!

Enjoy beer whose original fine flavor is fully protected from the danger of light. Have more space in refrigerator, too . . . canned beer saves space. Stays cool longer. No breakage!

IT WON'T BE LONG NOW!

LANE TECH AND SENN BATTLE TO 7 TO 7 DEADLOCK

Tilden Routs Du Sable Eleven, 44 to 6

Lane Tech's aspirations for a second north section City league football title were jolted yesterday as Senn's Bulldogs battled the Indians to a 7 to 7 tie in Lane Tech stadium. Lane has won two games in league competition and Senn has won two and lost one.

The scoring came in the second period. Lane tallied first when Ray Seyferlich, right end, took a 20 yard pass from Bill Sturtevant and ran 30 yards. Chet Hulbert kicked the point. Senn tied it when Bill Swanson crossed from the 8 yard line and Joe Levert made the point.

Tilden Routs Du Sable, 44-6

Tilden Tech continued unchecked in the central section by defeating Du Sable, 44 to 6, last night in Shewbridge field. Two Blue Devil veterans, Mike Swistowicz and Bill Gay, paced the attack. Swistowicz scored three touchdowns and Gay made two.

Lindblom remained tied with Tilden for the central section lead as it scored a 26 to 6 victory over Farragut last night in Shewbridge field. It was the fourth victory for Lindblom.

Harrison and Austin remained tied for the west section lead as each was victorious. Harrison won its third straight by defeating Kelvyn Park, 26 to 0, in Key Branch stadium, while Austin routed Tuley, 39 to 0, in Hanson park.

Nunzio Mugavero scored two Harrison touchdowns, while Jack Golden scored the first and Al Brosky made the last. The Austin eleven, which likewise has three victories in section play, divided its scoring. Touchdowns were registered by Bruce Morrice, Frank Rylowitz, Red Gentry, Jim Frank, and Rocco Mavigliano, who crossed the goal line twice.

Hyde Park Beats Bowen

Two south section elevens sustained their first league defeats as Hyde Park beat Bowen, 14 to 6, in 83d-Yates stadium.

Jim Fuchs passed to Sherwin Janouwsky to give Hyde Park the lead in the first period. In the second quarter, Bob Allweiss took a pass from Shelly Grafman and ran 20 yards for a second touchdown. In the same period Bob Salata plunged 2 yards to score for Bowen.

South Shore scored its touchdown on a third quarter pass from Bernie Citron to Joe Hoffman, who ran 12 yards to tally. Lineups:

Joyce, Barnum Meet Is Top Stadium Bout

BY FRANK MASTRO

Willie Joyce of Gary, Ind., third ranking contender for a shot at the world lightweight championship, and Elmer Ray of Hastings, Fla., seventh leading challenger for Joe Louis' title, will share headline honors in the first show of the indoor season in Chicago Stadium Friday night. Joyce is paired with Joey Barnum, rising young fighter from Los Angeles, and Ray is matched with Hubert Hood, former Chicagoland Golden Gloves heavyweight winner, in bouts of 10 rounds.

A third event, also 10 rounds, will bring together Bill McDowell, Dallas welterweight, who defeated Fritzie Zivic two months ago, and George Costner of Cincinnati.

Buddy Walker, Columbus, O., heavyweight, and Clayton Worlds will be opponents in a fourth match of 10 rounds, while a special four round event will bring into action Gene Roberts, 1943 Chicagoland Golden Gloves bantamweight finalist, and Joey Palmo of Cincinnati.

Joyce, who stopped Danny Bartfield in the sixth round of a main event in Madison Square garden last month, will be making his first Chicago start since he lost to Willie Pep, New York recognized featherweight ruler, in Comiskey park last year. In subsequent appearances Willie conquered Ike Williams, National Boxing association 135 pound champion, and Bobby Ruffin, among others.

York Eleven Tops Downers Grove, 31 to 0

York High school's football team yesterday won its fourth straight game as it routed Downers Grove, 31 to 0, in a West Suburban league game in Elmhurst.

Two of the York touchdowns were provided by Art Johnston, who tallied on a 3 yard plunge in the first period and a 2 yard smash in the third. Henry Tiedemann made the longest run of the game when he dashed 60 yards in the third period. Other touchdowns were scored by Paul Schultz and Henry Cheeney.

Riverside won its first league game in three starts by defeating Hinsdale, 26 to 6, on the Hinsdale field. The victors were paced by Bob Ritzman, who took a 40 yard pass from Stan Brenton for one touchdown and added another on a 4 yard plunge. Hinsdale's touchdown came when Tim Sotola took Connie Creed's 50 yard pass and ran 20 yards.

La Grange, defending champion, playing at home, beat Maine, 20 to 7, on touchdown runs by Jack Prather, John Saban, and Dick Simon. Joe Mihelcich scored the Maine touchdown. Lineups:

Trippi, Aided by Senators, Joins Family

Clearwater, Fla., Oct. 13 (AP)—Former Sgt. Charlie Trippi enjoyed civilian status today as Georgia's Democratic senators Russell and George announced in Washington that they had talked with Secretary of War Patterson about the football player's discharge from the air forces prior to his release yesterday.

The former back field star at the University of Georgia joined his wife and 7 months' old daughter for a short vacation before returning to the university within a few days.

Newspapers Charge Politics

Trippi's discharge, on a surplus and hradship basis, brought charges from Tampa newspapers of political intervention by Georgia's senators.

The Tampa Tribune asserted that football circles understood "highest political pressure was brought to the star's release," while the Tampa Times charged "powerful Georgia politicians, who want a Rose Bowl team this year — not next" with bringing pressure on the war department.

In Washington, Russell, commenting that he did seek Trippi's release, declared: "I was glad to try to help Sgt. Trippi get a discharge from the army as I have tried to help thousands of other boys.

In Service Three Years

"Trippi has been in the service nearly three years and if he had not been the star player of the third air force football team his discharge would not have been mentioned."

Sen. George added, "Trippi's discharge was fully justified and anybody would agree who was familiar with the circumstances.

The football star has a dependent father and mother, as well as his wife and child. Trippi left the university after his sophomore year, starring in Georgia's victory over UCLA in the Rose Bowl in 1943.

MARTIN, DROLL TOP MARIGOLD BOUTS TONIGHT

Tony [Cianciola] Martin, Milwaukee middleweight challenger, is ready for his first appearance since being discharged from the coast guard in the eight round bout against Benny Droll of Peoria, an army dischargee, in Marigold Gardens tomorrow night. Tony, who is 28 years old, has not fought since defeating Waddell Washington in Lynn, Mass., on Jan. 24 of this year. Five round supporting matches will bring together William Johnson, south side middleweight, and Jack Hill of Bloomington, Ill., and Roy Lewis, Muncie, Ind., junior welterweight, and Jimmy Martin.

HENRY KAISER: A GIANT BUILT BY WAR MONEY

On His Own Now in a New Conflict

(Legends that have grown up around Henry J. Kaiser suggest he is a mixture of Henry Ford and Paul Bunyan. Some persons regard his reputation as the product of California exuberance and New Deal publicity In an effort to separate the fact and fiction about Kaiser, The Tribune sent a staff reporter to California. This is the first of his articles.)

BY FRANK STURDY
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 13—A new conflict is opening for Henry Kaiser, who thrived in the public imagination during the war as a sort of Horatio Alger production genius.

Henry J. Kaiser

This west coast dealer in big business has held government war contracts totaling several billions of dollars. Kaiser and his associates built ships, made steel, paved highways, constructed airports, built fortifications, laid pipe lines, made magnesium, and built oil refineries. They had many jobs in the United States, and in such far flung places as Alaska, arctic Canada, and Hawaii. They did monumental construction work in the Pacific islands both before and after the outbreak of the war.

Financed by Government

Their employers have been agencies of the army, navy, and maritime commission. Their work has been done in large measure with government money. The government invested hundreds of millions of dollars in war plants which Kaiser and his group operated.

Kaiser is beyond question the most colorful figure in American industry at the moment. He has the qualities of a super-salesman raised to a power almost unapproached, according to his employes, who say those exposed to his drive find his ideas irresistible.

He combines with this unique faculty an unusual quirk: In his speeches, public statements, and publicity releases, his aims somehow become identical with liberty, justice, and the social advancement of the American people. Ergo, what is good for Kaiser is good for the people, and those who oppose Kaiser oppose the good of the nation.

Unorthodox in Methods

He is unorthodox in his business methods and has been highly successful in competing with others in the construction business, his early environment. He runs his own affairs with a strong hand, is a somewhat remote dictator in his own realm, and has been accused of various powerhouse tactics including labor and materials hoarding and snitching of experts from competi-

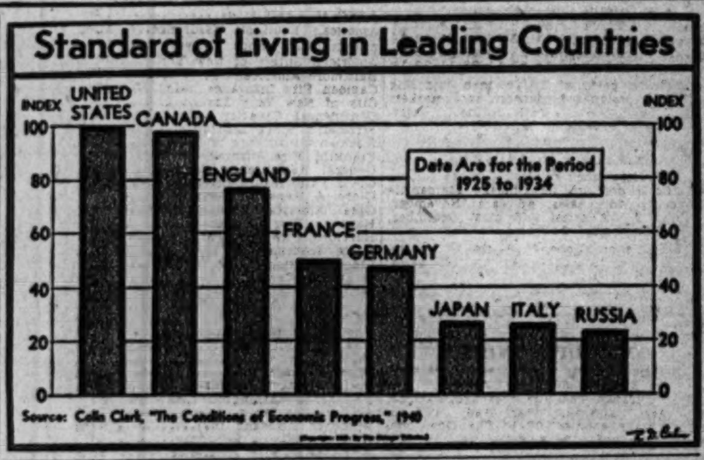
Standard of Living in Leading Countries



Wheat Future Price Rises to 20 Year Peak

The December wheat future touched a 20 year peak yesterday at $1.78⅝ a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade and closed at $1.78¼. All deliveries of rye, oats, and barley except December oats advanced to new seasonal peaks.

Rye and oats trading was active with rye closing 2¼ to 3⅜ cents higher, and oats 1⅛ to 1½. Wheat futures were ⅛ to ⅜ cent higher, corn unchanged to ¼ higher with December at the ceiling price, and barley ⅝ to ¾ higher.

Cash Rye Above December

Strength in Winnipeg where the near-by deliveries of rye went to a new seasonal high and continued strength in cash rye in Minneapolis provided the background for the buying of that grain and many stop loss orders were uncovered on the way up. No. 1 and No. 2 cash rye at Minneapolis were quoted at 12 to 15 cents above December, altho the post-harvest movement of that grain is well underway.

Brokers said these premiums for cash rye at this season are abnormal and that there is little prospect of any grain deliveries on future contracts unless the situation changes materially.

Buying of wheat futures to remove hedges against sales of cash grain to the government and against flour sales helped the upturn in that grain.

Prices Hold at Ceilings

Government purchases of 2¾ million bushels of cash wheat in the last few days and intimations of more buying kept cash prices at ceiling levels. Minneapolis reported maximum prices were bid for spring wheat for shipment from the country by Dec. 31.

Buying of oats futures was general and more than offset profit taking. Oats are the only grain under government control selling below ceiling prices and this was said to have much influence on sentiment.

THIRD QUARTER REPORTS

Industrial corporation reports for the quarter ended Sept. 30, to be published during the next few weeks will be of unusual interest because they will cover a period in which war contracts were canceled on a vast scale. During this period reconversion of war industries to a peace time basis was under way but in many instances normal products were not ready for the market.

Termination of billions of dollars of unfilled orders caused declines in sales billed for the quarter by war contractors, offset to some extent by increased sales in normal commercial channels. Many contractors, of course, will have large claims on the government for uncompleted work, but accountants believe that generally such claims will not be reflected in sales or gross revenues until settlements have been made with contracting agencies. Similarly, subcontractors are unlikely to include such claims in third quarter business prior to reaching settlements with prime contractors.

The September quarter may mark the year's low point in gross revenues because termination claims will be settled in increasing numbers from now on and sales of civilian goods will expand as reconversion and pricing obstacles are removed.

Declines in war contractors' sales during the second half year may not have corresponding effects on profits because of tax cushions. On the other hand, reconversion expenses, unless charged to reserves previously set up, will make inroads on current earnings. Such expenses are excluded from the costs which can be charged to the government in settlement of war contracts.

Otherwise, the contract settlement act provides that in fixing fair compensation for termination claims not settled by agreement the following items may be taken into account:

1. Direct and indirect manufacturing and other costs reasonably necessary and properly allocable to the terminated portion of the contract.
2. Reasonable costs of settling termination claims of subcontractors; accounting, legal, and other claims incident to contract settlement, and interest on termination claims.
3. Expenses of removing, preserving, and disposing of termination inventories.
4. Reasonable allowance for profit on preparations made and work done for the terminated portion.
5. The contract price and all amounts otherwise paid or payable under the contract.

Browbeating of Growers by A.&P. Denied

BY LEWIS HUNT
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Danville, Ill., Oct. 13—Government charges that the New York Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company acquired country-wide control of fruit and vegetable prices by browbeating producers were denied by 30 defense witnesses this week before Judge Walter C. Lindley in United States District court. Besides company officers, they included representatives of growers' coöperative groups and one government specialist, whose appearance took the prosecution by surprise.

It was the 19th week of the anti-trust trial of A. & P. and 28 officers and subsidiaries on criminal information. Next week may be the last for taking evidence because Judge Lindley has set hearing of the 10 year old case of Activated Sludge, Inc., against the sanitary district of Chicago for Oct. 22. He has said he does not wish to postpone it, but has not said definitely that he would not do so if the A. & P. defense seemed to deserve more time.

Defend Commission House

Witnesses last week attempted to refute accusations against the Atlantic Commission company, the A. & P.'s intermediary that buys fresh fruits and vegetables and distributes them to the retail chain. The defense contends this combined operation, termed vertical integration, is the center of the government case. A government verdict, company lawyers asserted, would provide an instrument for attacking businesses of all kinds which operate as processors, wholesalers, and retailers under one management.

All the charges against the commission company, which included accusations of having promoted coöperatives to get price preference, price fixing by agreement, and market manipulation by price setting, were denied by Harvey A. Baum, vice president and general manager.

He said the only time price fixing was discussed was in 1934. Henry P. Wehman, treasurer, who kept the minutes, said the discussion was confined to the administration's new measures and that Baum said the company "would go along with any sound efforts to stabilize markets."

Witness Disturbs Prosecution

The witness who caused consternation at the prosecution's table was Joseph B. White, who said he has charge of buying fruits and vegetables under various government programs to support prices by removing surpluses. A. & P. and various other chains helped out, he said.

Government attorneys said they could not recall that they had presented evidence against "promotional drives."

Three retail competitors of the A. & P. were called to refute government charges that it used unfair practices to exterminate rivals. One of them, Franklin J. Lunding of Highland Park, president of the Jewel Tea company, said his chain had expanded among A. & P. supermarkets in Chicago.

FULL FREEDOM ON BARGAINING RECOMMENDED

Avoid Federal Aid, Group Urges

Labor and management should have the fullest possible freedom and responsibility for working out their own collective bargaining agreements with a minimum of govevrnment intervention, a special labor committee appointed by the Twentieth Century fund recommended yesterday.

The committee, which has been making a long term survey of collective bargaining practices, is headed by William H. Davis, former chairman of the war labor board, and the membership includes Howard Coonley, former president of the National Association of Manufacturers, official representatives of the AFL and CIO, labor economists, government officials, and representatives of the public.

Termed Aid to Self Discipline

"The more employers and employes depend on bargaining by equal parties to achieve a practical compromise on wages, hours, and work conditions, the more firmly rooted become the self discipline and the obligations to find the solutions among themselves rather than to ask for solution ready made," the group said.

As specific machinery to aid in carrying out these general principles, the committe suggested that voluntary mediation boards, composed equally of management, labor, and public representatives be established within every sizable industrial community.

To supplement these community boards, which would deal with all industries in a given community, the committee advised that each of the larger industries thruout the country may take some action. It suggested a second type of voluntary mediation board, composed of management and labor representatives, to be established within each industry.

Urges Groups Within Industry

The committee also recommended that "employers within an industry associate themselves into organizations designed to negotiate with unions, not to combat them."

"In the absence of a prototype of the British arrangement for employer bargaining, or pending its establishment, the committee therefore recommends the formation of a national management-union council on collective abrgaining," it said.

"The council constantly would examine bargaining agreements and methods in order to serve as a central clearing house for disseminating practices found especially efficient in pushing production, making jobs more secure, and promoting a spirit of collaboration between management and unions."

Glore Bids on Pullman Stock; Two Interested in Buick Plant

Plans Public Offer

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 13 [Special]—An underwriting syndicate, headed by the Chicago investment banking house of Glore, Forgan & Co., today submitted to the United States District court a bid for the Pullman company, sleeping car subsidiary of Pullman, Inc.

The bid was made for the entire capital stock of the company at a price which would be in excess of the value of its assets above liabilities and would be determined by certified accountants.

If acquired, the stock would be sold to the public at the purchase price plus a "customary underwriters' commission." The present business of the company would be continued under an entirely new management, no members having any connection with Pullman, Inc.

Choice Offered in Decree

Under a decree finding the parent Pullman in violation of the anti-trust laws, the court on May 8, 1944, directed that it dispose of either the sleeping car business or Pullman-Standard Manufacturing company, which produces railway cars. The company chose to sell the sleeper subsidiary.

Pullman, Inc., has submitted plans under which railroads may acquire the business to be severed, but the only bid prior to today was by Otis & Co., Cleveland banking house. Its recent proposal to buy physical assets of the company for a price estimated at 75 million dollars is scheduled for court consideration Nov. 5.

[In Pittsburgh, Pa., Chairman W. F. Rockwell of Standard Steel Spring company said his Michigan-Pennsylvania group would make an offer before Nov. 5 which would involve no public financing. "Our attorneys are working on it with Pullman," he said.]

Program May Be Canceled.

The court, which last March 22 gave Pullman, Inc., one year to formulate a disposal plan, took no immediate action on the Glore, Forgan offer.

The offer contains a stipulation that it can be terminated up to 24 hours of its completion if underwriters who have agreed to purchase 50 per cent or more of the Pullman shares deem it "inadvisable" to offer the stock to the public.

Westinghouse, I. H. C.

International Harvester company and Westinghouse Electric corporation are two companies considering purchase or lease of the Melrose Park plant operated by Buick division of General Motors corporation in manufacturing aviation engines during the war, it was learned yesterday.

Fowler McCormick, International Harvester president, inspected the plant recently with other company officials, and already has bought several pieces of machinery from the plant, it was said.

Would Mark Chicago Debut

Westinghouse officials also have inspected the plant, and Westinghouse was reported to be closer to acquiring the facilities than Harvester. If Westinghouse should take over the plant, recently declared surplus and offered for sale or lease by the Reconstruction Finance corporation, it would mark the company's entry into the Chicago area.

Oldest major electrical equipment maker in the United States and one of the largest, Westinghouse and its subsidiaries own and operate more than 20 manufacturing plants in eight states, with the principal works located in the Pittsburgh, Pa., district.

Concentrated in Chicago

Operations of Harvester, truck and farm machinery manufacturer, are concentrated principally in Chicago, with some plants in other states. The company plans to add a line of farm refrigerators when conditions permit.

The Buick plant, built at a cost of more than 125 million dollars, covers approximately 135 acres. Its buildings contain more than 2 million feet of floor space. General Motors has not expressed interest in its acquisition.

INDUSTRY ASKS CHANGED POLICY ON PAY, PRICES

The Illinois Manufacturers' association yesterday demanded the government abandon its "pjolitical adjustment" of wages and prices. A resolution adopted by its directors and forwarded to President Truman and other government officials charged government wage and price policies menace industry and threaten to destroy jobs of many industrial workers.

It also said the government's proposals for settlement of the oil industry labor dispute is encouraging high wage rates which will result in increased production costs. It said marginal producers cannot operate under inflated labor costs as long as prices are held down.

FASHION OF '90S IN CORPORATE RULE REMAINS

New York Direct Chicago Plants

BY THOMAS FURLONG

Corporate practices fashionable in the 1890s and early 1900s remain controling influences in the affairs of many of the large business enterprises whose operations are national in scope.

Edward L. Ryerson

Following the example of the railroads, it was common practice in that earlier period to direct from New York enterprises whose main operations were carried on hundreds of miles away. Altho the bankruptcies and receiverships of the 1930s modified this practice in the railroad industry there has been slight change in many of the country's large industrial corporations.

Straw Bosses Defer to East

Then, as now, directors were chosen from the ranks of New York bankers, investment and insurance men, lawyers, and others. Operations in other parts of the country were left in charge of straw bosses of limited authority who deferred decisions on all important questions, including labor matters, to the "home" office.

What little change in these practices has been brought about by the passage of time and remaking of the industrial map of the country is illustrated by the present setup of some of the large manufacturing companies.

HENRY KAISER: A GIANT BUILT BY WAR MONEY

Now He's on His Own; Nation Still Watches

Because Kaiser has received perhaps as much publicity as all the other big war goods producers together, hundreds of thousands of people who have never seen him think and speak of him as Henry, and something like 250,000 who were employed in his war plants and shipyards have a highly personal interest in his future. Most of them left his pay roll when government contracts were canceled.

The west's "Big Man," as he was described recently by a newspaper, has a variety of projects planned for the salvation of his industrial empire. These projects include a low cost automobile to be produced at the former Ford bomber plant at Willow Run, Mich., under lease from the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Holds West Is "Victimized"

This, however, does not solve the problem of west coast employment or further the industrial interest of the west, which Kaiser maintains with support from a large segment of western business has been victimized for decades by "industrial interests" in the east and "monopolies" that prevented westerners from getting goods at lower prices that might have been made possible had the eastern interests not discouraged or prevented the establishing of local industries.

Kaiser's other post-war projects, a washing machine, a dish washer, a helicopter, and low cost houses, among those he has publicized, are in a nebulous state of planning for promotion, according to his employes, who say the time since the end of the war has been insufficient for much accomplishment even by the mercurial Kaiser, but at the same time say somewhat plaintively they would like to know what the "Old Man's" plans are, so they can get to work.

Buy 5 Million in Stock

The metamorphosis of Kaiser from pre-war contractor thru war time production miracle man to post-war merchandiser is clearly indicated in his financing plans for his automobile. He and his associate, Joseph W. Frazer, have purchased 5 million dollars of stock in their Kaiser-Frazer corporation, which will manufacture two automobiles, the Kaiser and the Frazer.

Stock to a total of 17 million dollars has been sold to the public, which will thus share Kaiser's risk in his venture into the automobile field, strewn with the corpses of 30 years competition from which General Motors, Ford, and Chrysler, have emerged as the dominating factors with announced intentions of remaining in business.

This is the first time he has financed any of his enterprises publicly. All his other interests are held in closed corporations owned by his family and working associates. His ship yards and other war time projects were either built and owned by government agencies, or were built with money lent him by the RFC, with his investment of personal funds comparatively small. The government took the principal financial risk, and Kaiser's profits in ship building and other war enterprises went into his closed corporations. The public had a share only in that taxpayers provided the government's money.

Fees to Pay Off RFC Loan

Kaiser has been astute in arranging the affairs of his solely owned companies, as in the case of the Fontana steel mill, a 111 million dollar plant for which the RFC lent Kaiser the money. He plans to use profits from ship building fees to pay off the loan, and has pledged all profits to the RFC for that purpose. Had the war gone on long enough, these profits would have retired the loan and Kaiser would have had a steel plant paid for largely with money that otherwise would have gone to the public treasury in taxes on his personal income.

Fontana is Kaiser's largest personal venture, and his future is inextricably tied to it. It is the touchstone of his feud with "monopolists" and "eastern industrialists," a lever in his west coast industrial program. Erected in farming country about 60 miles east of Los Angeles, Fontana is less than half the size of the 200 million dollar Geneva plant at Provo, Utah, also put up with RFC funds and operated by the United States Steel corporation without fee.

Future in Doubt

The future of these mills is now on the block. Both cost far more than they would have under ordinary conditions, because they were put up at war time speed and rates, and neither is equipped to supply civilian market needs economically, because they were designed for narrow war requirements.

If they are to be operated privately for profit, their capital structure must be written down extensively, meaning the government stands to take a loss. After some initial negotiations with the government concerning Geneva, United States Steel's president announced recently his company would drop all thought of operating the plant. This came on the heels of statements from government officials suggesting some kind of western syndicate be organized to take it over, rather than have it go to a group representing "further concentration of economic power."

Kaiser's associates of his pre-war dam and bridge building days have not followed him into his new ventures. That group, first organized to build Boulder dam, was known as the Six Companies.

Publicity Goes to Kaiser

Practically all the publicity over the years of the operations of the six companies has gone to Kaiser, a natural result of their peculiar organization at first.

He was the front man and maneuverer, the enthusiast who pounced on one big job after another, who found his metier in arranging deals and making them work as often as possible in new ways, with bigger and better equipment, always ready to try his own or any one else's new idea for moving sand, gravel, and earth quicker than it had ever been done before.

FASHION OF '90s IN CORPORATION POLICY REMAINS

cago area and the railroads its principal outlet, the American Brake Shoe company maintains its "home" office at 230 Park avenue, New York, where its directors, mostly New Yorkers, hold their meetings.

Only one Chicagoan, Edward L. Ryerson, is a member of the company's board of 12 directors. Five of the directors reside in the immediate New York area, two in New Jersey, one in Philadelphia, two in Pittsburgh, and one in Milwaukee.

Only Sales Officers in Chicago.

Chicago offices of the company are "sales" offices. General and divisional sales offices are located at 332 S. Michigan av. and two divisions have sales offices at 2019 S. Michigan.

Chicago factories include the American Forge plants at 2621 S. Hoyne av. and 1220 W. 119th st. and the brake shoe and castings plant at 4544 W. 26th st.

In Chicago Heights is located the largest in floor area of the company's factories, the American Manganese Steel plant. Other corporation units are the Clearing plant of the National Bearing division, the Chicago plant of the Ramapo Ajax division, and the Melrose Park brake shoe and castings plant.

Half of Sales to Railroads

About half the company's sales in normal times are made to the railroad industry of which Chicago is the center. Principal products are brake shoes and parts, car wheels, car and engine bearings, track fixtures, and accessories, including frogs, switches, and crossings. Among other products are automobile and industrial brake linings, air compressors, auto lifts, forgings for varied uses, and paint spray equipment.

The company has 59 plants in all, of which the Chicago group is by far the most important. In New York, where no manufacturing is carried on, the policies of the company are shaped, the directors meet, and top officials live.

• We have available for distribution a summary of a study prepared by the Committee for Economic Development which shows what each major manufacturing industry itself estimates in regard to—

(1) Volume of sales for the first full peace-time year after reconversion as compared with 1939. (In the case of the 19 major manufacturing industries the study indicates that 1947 volume may exceed 1939 by from 25% to 75%).

(2) The problems now facing each of these industries as controlled by:—accumulated demand for their products; reconversion; adequacy of supplies; cancellation of contracts; release of government-owned goods; effect of foreign trade; effect of accumulated savings; new products; continuance of war controls; and disposal of government plants and machinery.

Copy of this summary will be furnished without charge or obligation. Ask for Circular T-14.

PROFITS have come TOO EASILY!
That certain industries would profit from the post-war boom demand for goods has long been all too obvious. Little skill was needed to select these particular companies as good investments—but, as always, THE OBVIOUS HAS BEEN OVERDONE! Some of these obvious situations have proved much too popular, and have jumped too high in price. Simultaneously, other stocks, temporarily less favorably situated, have been neglected, and are too low in price.
YES, THE TRUE BULL MARKET HAS BARELY STARTED
But this is no time for indiscriminate buying. Many stocks should actually be sold at these levels—others should be held or bought regardless of interim declines in the general market.
But the real secret of profits from now on will be to take the steps that may well give your POSTWAR CAPITAL APPRECIATION PROGRAM a flying start. You are sure to gain advantages if you promptly square your present holdings with the now virtually completed Gartley Basic Postwar List, centered in the 25 industries sure to benefit from the coming peace boom. Best of all, you will avoid the current confusion of mind and moreover you will enter the postwar future with a strong, carefully considered investment program. Especially important to you are the:
25 low and moderate-priced issues
10 outstanding growth situations
10 low-priced speculations that have qualified under the stern pre-V-J Day sifting of 2000 individual issues by the Gartley analytical staff under the personal direction of Mr. H. M. Gartley.
These outstanding stocks will be made available to you during the following—

EARLY SHOWING OF 1946 HUDSON CARS EXPECTED

Management of Hudson Motor Car company, whose facilities assure minimum dependence on outside suppliers, expects early showings of 1946 models, George H. Pratt, general sales manager, said yesterday. Hudson plants are geared for capacity production, he said.

The 36 year old automobile company was one of the first to begin post-war production, Pratt said. Hudson has expanded its distributor-dealer organization in its bid for heavy sales.

Improvements in exterior and interior styling, mechanical efficiency, and ease of operation, were reported.

New models will be offered in two "style lines," the super-series and the commodore series, each with six or eight cylinder engines. Immediate production schedules call for four door sedans powered by six cylinders, to be followed by broughams and club coupes. Three passenger coupes and convertibles will be added as rapidly as demand for first production models permits.

Pratt said it is hoped convertibles will be built within 60 days, and eight cylinder cars in both series as rapidly as possible. In addition to passenger models, immediate output will be started on cab pickups as a means of meeting urgent demand for commercial vehicles of ¾ ton capacity.

Mechanical improvements include better steering, a stronger frame, wheels that give a wider tire grip on the road, and shock absorbers that soften the impacts on roads.

Major mechanical features will be retained, including the drive master, which does away with clutch and gear lever operation in forward driving, and the double safe hydraulic brakes, which provide an emergency braking system.

PEOPLE AND EVENTS

W. Alton Jones, president of Cities Service company, yesterday named A. P. Frame vice president in charge of manufacturing of Petroleum Advisers, Inc., the technical and coordinating unit for the company's petroleum and natural gas pipe line subsidiaries. Frame formerly was director of the refining division of the petroleum administration for war.

Col. Samuel W. Smither, director of procurement in the Chicago quartermaster depot, was awarded the legion of merit by the war department for exceptionally meritorious performance of duty. Brig. Gen. J. E. Barzynski presented the award.

The Chicago wine industry will give a luncheon in the Stevens hotel next Wednesday in observance of National Wine week. The event is being revived after a war time suspension.

Jack Gordon, former vice president and director of Goldblatt Brothers, has purchased the Gordon Clothing company, 6433 S. Halsted st. The men's, women's, and children's apparel store has been operating in the Englewood district for 15 years. Gordon, associated with Goldblatt for 16 years, recently resigned.

Chris A. Wasem has resigned as vice president of the Blatz Brewing company. He had been with Blatz since 1936 and a vice president since 1942.

Walter J. Zahn of Oak Park has become manager of the Chicago package division of Oakite Products, Inc.

Donald O. Waterbury, recently released from the army, was elected assistant vice president of the Harris Trust and Savings bank.

PREPARE STRONG BID FOR CEILING PRICE ON HOUSES

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13 (AP)—Despite reported administration opposition, a strong recommendation for price ceilings on houses was being prepared today by the chiefs of four government agencies.

Slated to reach Reconversion Director Snyder early next week, the program calls for ceilings on all new houses and ceilings on old houses if they have changed hands since Jan. 1, 1943. The recommendations were drawn up by John C. Collet, stabilization director; Price Administrator Bowles; National Housing Administrator Blandford, and Chairman Eccles of the federal reserve board.

Reports have circulated that Snyder and President Truman are opposed to ceilings on housing, but proponents of the plan say both have an open mind on the subject. The building industry already has protested against ceilings. They say price controls would stifle construction.

Army Releases Surplus Goods Worth 154 Million

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13 (AP)—The army engineer corps today reported the release in August of 154 million dollars' worth of surplus material in the United States.

TWO U. S. PIPE LINES' GROSS PROFITS SET AT 135 MILLION DOLLARS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 13 (AP)—The Big Inch and Little Inch pipe lines, built by the government at a cost of 142 million dollars, had gross profits of 135 million on their operations up to last June 30, two senate committees reported today.

The special committee investigating petroleum resources and the surplus property military subcommittee, both headed by Sen. O'Mahoney [D., Wyo.], obtained the figures from the Reconstruction Finance corporation. RFC also figured its net outlay under the petroleum subsidy program totaled 207 millions.

The senate report announced that hearings will be begun on disposal of government owned petroleum facilities as soon as W. Alton Jones, Cities Service company president and head of an industry committee, returns from London, where he was an American adviser in negotiating a new petroleum treaty with Britain. Some interests oppose selling the lines.

N. A. M. OFFICIAL ASSAILS PATENT LICENSING BILLS

Compulsory licensing of patents would endanger American supremacy in invention and technological progress, R. J. Dearborn, chairman of the patents committee of the National Association of Manufacturers, said yesterday. He expressed opposition to several patent license bills pending in congress.

"This country's growth to the status of the world's greatest industrial nation has been due largely to its patent system," he said. "Compulsory licensing of patents would strike at the very fundamentals of the system. By forcing an inventor to give up his exclusive rights before he has an opportunity to reap any reward, the full incentive which the patent system is intended to give would be largely removed."

Chicago Bank Clearings Decrease to 433 Millions

Chicago bank clearings last week were 433 million dollars, compared with $489,800,000 in the preceding week and $458,600,000 a year ago, the Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday. The figures:

	Clearings	Balances
Monday	$ 67,500,000	$ 5,600,000
Tuesday	77,400,000	10,100,000
Wednesday	79,000,000	83,000,000
Thursday	81,500,000	11,100,000
Friday	Columbus Day
Saturday	127,600,000	13,600,000

Meat Production Decrease Contrary to Normal Trend

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON

Meat production in the United States has dropped far below normal for October, and even below the most pessimistic forecasts by some live stock interests who had asserted there was no basis for earlier semi-official Washington predictions that meat rationing would end by Oct. 1. Many factors are cutting production at a time of normal seasonal increases.

Farmers are keeping cattle and hogs for heavy feeding of soft corn. Fewer hogs are on farms than last year and owners are planning to build up their weight before marketing, a practice which takes extra weeks. Weather has been good for field feeding. Combining of soybeans has started. A comparatively small supply of cattle is on feed. Fewer lambs are on feed than for many years. Farmers hope that price lids will be raised, and are holding back stock on prospects of income tax reductions after Jan. 1.

In the first two full weeks of this month the stock yards received 256,000 cattle, hogs, sheep, and lambs, one of the smallest totals for that period on record. A year ago 325,300 arrived, and in 1935, a low production period, 348,200 were received.

Farm leaders were said to be watching labor's struggle for higher wages for a basis on which to demand higher ceilings.

Pressure against price ceilings last week was the strongest the trade has experienced since the limits were placed on cattle and hogs. The slight increase of 10 cents to $14.85 a hundred pounds in the hog limit did not bring more volume or ease pressure on the price line. The whole market rose to the new ceiling and remained there.

DEAR BILL:
Just last week I got the surprise of my life. As you know I have been spending much time and energy in attempting to invest the money Uncle Joe left to Mary. Prices seemed high compared to those quoted a few years ago so I have been hesitating. I had plans prepared for a building on a lot we own on Sherwin-av., but when the architect totaled the bids from the various contractors I almost passed out. It convinced me the cost of reproduction of any bldg. now available for purchase would be so extremely high that the present prices quoted are really cheap. Now that I am sure that present construction prices, what with increases in labor and material, will never be lower, I am going to call SCHOENLANK & KIRSCHNER at SHE. 8820 to make an appointment to buy the 27 apartment building they are offering for sale that will net the owner 10% on the investment equity after paying all expenses including interest and principal. Our Cubs lost, but they have given us a fine baseball season anyway. See you soon. CHARLIE.
P. S.: I suggest you, too, consult

"I'VE SEEN NOTHING AS FINE AS YOUR HIGHLANDS SITES"

So declared an attorney as he recently concluded the purchase of a 78'x134' high, rolling site on Crabtree Lane on Northbrook Highlands, and had us arrange for the preparation of his Colonial house plans for building and delivery this next Summer.

You too will agree when you see the circular drives, the sparkling white new houses, each different, from $10,500 to $15,000, which were had for $1,000 cash above the cost of the lots; when you read the careful protective restrictions; and when you learn the astonishingly low prices for the high values provided.

We supply you site, construction, and financing—all or part, as you desire.

Tool and Die Shops
Light Production Shops

The Chicago office of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation now has large quantities of unused machine tools in the original crates to be sold at greatly reduced prices.

These various war-scarce machine tools have been declared surplus as a result of cancellations of war contracts.

This equipment should be of particular interest to tool and die shops and light production shops and may help solve many reconversion problems for a great many companies.

The descriptions, quantities and prices on these surplus machine tools are as follows:

QUANTITY.	DESCRIPTION.	PRICE.
122	Buffer & Polisher-Pedestal Type Two Wheel, size 12"x3"x1¼", Constant Speed Motor AC 5 HP, 220V 3 PH 60 Cy 1750 RPM	$170.00

INJUN SUMMER

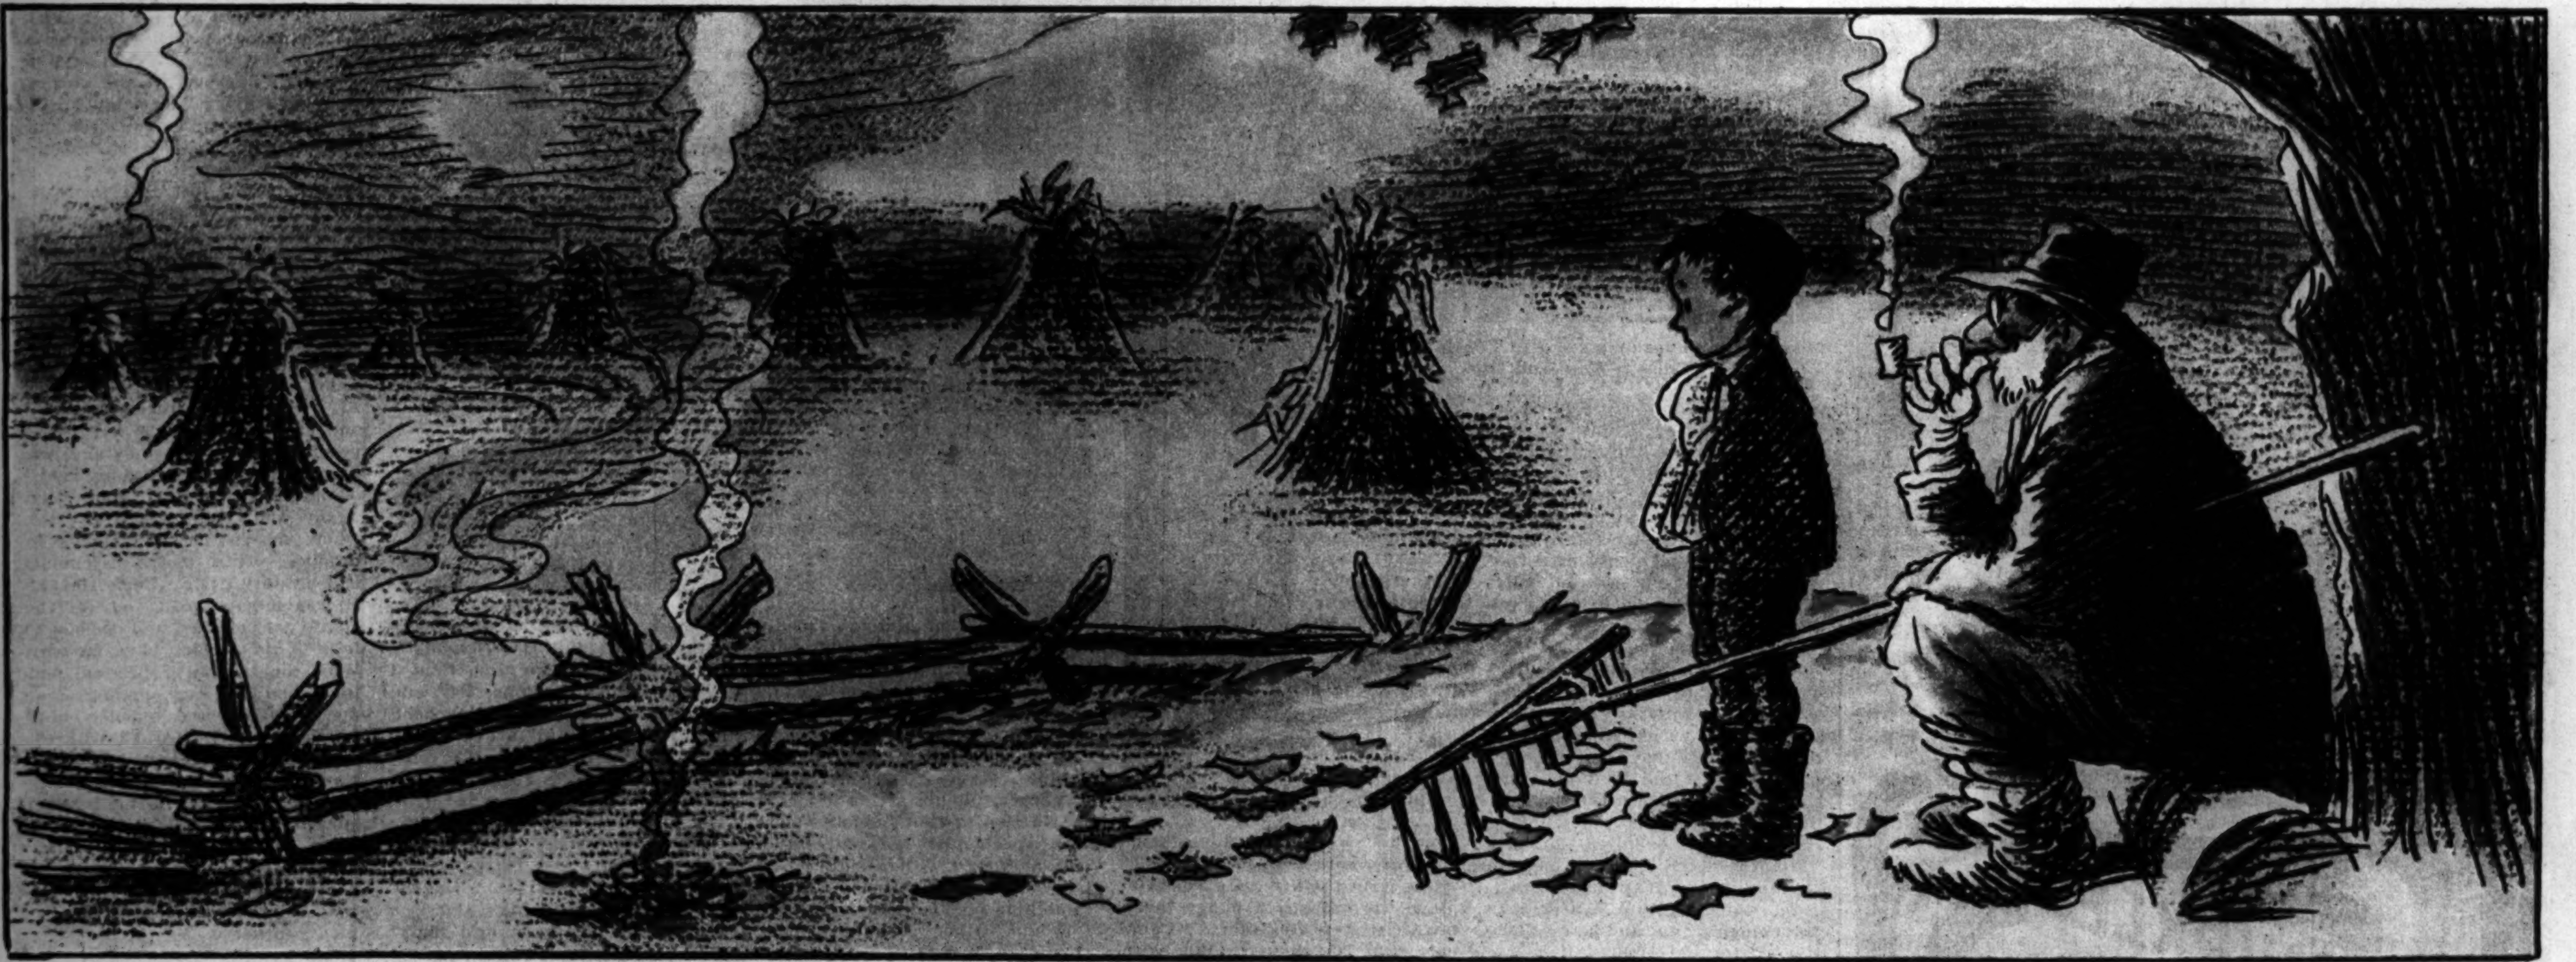
(Copyright: 1912: By John T. McCutcheon. Reprinted here by general request. The original of this cartoon hangs in the museum of the Chicago Historical society.)

Yep, sonny, this is sure enough Injun summer. Don't know what that is, I reckon, do you?

Well, that's when all the homesick Injuns come back to play. You know, a long time ago, long afore yer granddaddy was born even, there used to be heaps of Injuns around here—thousands—millions, I reckon, far as that's concerned. Reg'lar sure 'nough Injuns—none o' yer cigar store Injuns, not much. They wuz all around here—right here where you're standin'.

Don't be skeered—hain't none around here now, leastways no live ones. They been gone this many a year.

They all went away and died, so they ain't no more left.



But every year, 'long about now, they all come back, leastways their sperrits do. They're here now. You can see 'em off across the fields. Look real hard. See that kind o' hazy, misty look out yonder? Well, them's Injuns—Injun sperrits marchin' along an' dancin' in the sunlight. That's what makes that kind o' haze that's everywhere—it's jest the sperrits of the Injuns all come back. They're all around us now.

See off yonder; see them tepees? They kind o' look like corn shocks from here, but them's Injun tents, sure as you're a foot high. See 'em now? Sure, I knowed you could. Smell that smoky sort o' smell in the air? That's the campfires a-burnin' and their pipes a-goin'.

Lots o' people say it's just leaves burnin', but it ain't. It's the campfires, an' th' Injuns are hoppin' 'round 'em t' beat the old Harry.

You jest come out here tonight when the moon is hangin' over the hill off yonder an' the harvest fields is all swimmin' in th' moonlight, an' you can see the Injuns and the tepees jest as plain as kin be. You can, eh? I knowed you would after a little while.

Jever notice how the leaves turn red 'bout this time o' year? That's jest another sign o' redskins. That's when an old Injun sperrit gits tired dancin' an' goes up an' squats on a leaf t' rest. Why, I kin hear 'em rustlin' an' whisperin' an' creepin' 'round among the leaves all the time; an' ever' once'n a while a leaf gives way under some fat old Injun ghost and comes floatin' down to the ground. See—here's one now. See how red it is? That's the war paint rubbed off'n an Injun ghost, sure's you're born.

Purty soon all the Injuns'll go marchin' away agin, back to the happy huntin' ground, but next year you'll see 'em troopin' back—th' sky jest hazy with 'em and their campfires smolderin' away jest like they are now.

GLAMOR GALVANIC!

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD WITH HEDDA HOPPER

(Copyright: 1945: The Chicago Tribune)

Hollywood

THE WOMEN have pretty well taken over Hollywood for their own in every field except directing and producing. In those departments they don't appear to stand the gaff. Not because they're afraid of hard work—no one works harder than a top star both in arriving at the top and in staying there.

I have a theory. It's that women are too impatient of detail to make really superior executives in competition with able men who eat up detail and like it. We've had just enough successful femmes directing and producing films to make the exceptions that prove the rule.

Remember Lois Weber? No, of course you don't. But back in ancient days when Uncle Carl Laemmle was running Universal, Lois was one of his mainstays, turning out a legion of pictures that earned mints of money. Gloria Swanson thought she'd turn producer and lost her shirt—or do I mean slip? Connie Bennett is a current threat, and, knowing Connie as I do, I suspect she may have the stuff. It takes a hard dame, one who can say no in several languages several times a day and make it stick, to herd a picture as far as the cutting room. The Bennett answers the specifications. Harriet Parsons has made some pretty fair stabs at being a producer and hit the top in "Enchanted Cottage." Dorothy Arzner established herself as a successful director of a certain type of film but is currently not so active.

Which brings us to the subject of this story, who is a 33-year-old, golden-haired ball of fire with a temper of a tarantula, the purring persuasiveness of a female archangel, the capacity for work of a family of beavers, and the sex appeal of a No. 1 glamor girl.

A lot of advance notice to live up to, what? You can say that twice. Her name is Joan Harrison. She's British, but veddy, veddy, the product of those finishing schools that seem to be operated by duchesses just out of income. After Joan had learned to walk, talk, and sip in the best approved fashion of princesses of the blood she went up, as those quaint British put it, to Oxford to absorb classical and literary lore. Still unslaked in her thirst for erudition, she crossed over to Paris and made both sides of the Seine while paying heed to lectures by whiskered academicians on the French drama at the Sorbonne.

There's a background for you! Thinks I to myself, there must be something interesting in the way a gal like that makes the grade to Hollywood and steps into a spot which scores of our talented males wear out their lives trying to attain.

For today the Hollywoodians have ceased to look at Joan and observe tolerantly: "That Harrison woman has got something on the ball. One day she may get somewhere—if the feminine influence doesn't bat her down." So the pert, pretty, and piquant Miss Harrison has definitely arrived. "Phantom Lady" placed her on the Hollywood map importantly. Then came "Dark Waters," a psychological tale, and now "Uncle Harry" for Universal.

She's come a far piece from a certain day back a decade or more when one morning she lay late abed getting over a party that some of the young folk at Guildford, Surrey, England, had tossed the night before. A maid brought her a copy of the London Daily Telegraph (pronounced "grawf") with her matutinal tea and crumpets. Joan's eye happened to light on a want ad. The way the ad was worded appealed to her fancy. "Wanted," it said, "young lady, highest educational qualifications, must be able to speak, read, and write French and German fluently, by producer of films."

Thus Joan Harrison first met up with Alfred Hitchcock.

She hurried into her clothes in time to catch the 10:10 up to London, 30 miles away. A little before lunch time she found herself in an office full of presentable young ladies. She took one look at the mob and decided promptly she had missed the boat. Just as she was taking off to keep an appointment at the Ivy a door opened and a roly-poly fat man with an incredible girth, unruly dark hair, a twinkling eye, and a strange light in his face stood there looking over those present.

At right: Glamor again, in the office.

To Hitch's credit be it said he didn't hesitate long. Joan favored him with a brief, haughty stare and was picking up her bag to be gone from there when Hitch said: "You, where are you off to?"

She turned swiftly. He was grinning. He crooked a pudgy index finger at her and said: "Come here, you; I'll want to talk with you a bit."

Thereafter ensued an eight year period of the hardest, most exacting toil a girl—or a man—ever put in. By turns she adored, loathed, despised, admired, hated Hitchcock. But the old adamantine British spirit pulled her thru. She learned a hard trade at the hands of the most exacting taskmaster in it.

Today Joan Harrison makes me think of a man—why do I keep recurring to the masculine? Well, a pretty girl, then, toiling painfully and riskily up a steep cliff, with barely a toe hold and a finger hold, but dragging herself ever up and up. It's a precarious spot.

I said to her: "You've come a long way, Joan. One day you will produce a great picture. Like Hitchcock. Think of the immense satisfaction in that." Hollywood's most spectacular lady success of 1945 answered with a sigh: "I'll tell you something, Hedda. To me something else is more important. I would rather produce a baby than the greatest picture ever made!"

It left me a bit breathless. But I shot back at her just like that: "All the more reason, my dear, for being sure that you will produce great pictures. And babies, too."

"You know," Joan went on, "I was just thinking about that day I went up to London and got the job with Alfred Hitchcock. The boy next door was very nice. His father was a barrister. My people and his thought we'd be married one day. I think I was subconsciously seeking an escape that day."

What price career? I thought.

Joan eventually became a sort of alter ego for Hitchcock. She worked with him on stories and scripts, helped him design those unforgettable films with David O. Selznick. Right now Joan Fontaine, who won an Academy award for her portrayal of a Hitchcock-Harrison character, is thru with Selznick, but she is extremely eager to work with Harrison again.

"I remember the first time I ever saw Miss Fontaine. Mr. and Mrs. Hitchcock made a luncheon date with her to talk about Hitch's new picture, 'Rebecca.' The minute she walked in Hitch sent me a significant glance, as much as to say, 'This is the girl.' And she was." They made history with that one.

"Did you know that I was almost an actress?" Miss Harrison said. "Yes, the very first film I ever made with Mr. Hitchcock was 'The Man Who Knew Too Much.' We had a German camera man who insisted that I was exactly cut out to play the leading feminine role. I submitted to a test. When Hitch looked at it he said: 'Well, young lady, you were right. I'll not spoil a good assistant by turning her into a second rate actress.'"

I asked her how she happened to become a writer, knowing that early in her career she had been a clerk in a smart London shop and later on worked in advertising as a copy writer, just like Greer Garson.

"I sort of fell into it, I'd say," she answered. "Mr. Hitchcock likes to have plots told to him rather than read them. Soon after I went to work for him he gave me the chore of reading books and scripts and then giving him oral reviews of them. I found myself trying to improve on the stories as I went along. One day I had an idea for improving a scene in a film. Hitch said I should go ahead and write it my way. He used my scene just as I wrote it, and that was my start.

"I became a producer by accident," she went on. "Perhaps it would be more truthful to say I got the job because I flew into a towering rage. You see, my years with Mr. Hitchcock spoiled me, because everything I did for him found its way to the screen. After I left him I wrote story after story and they were bought but never produced. A writer can stand just so much of that before going mad."

And little Joanie's gone mad again—and again at Universal, where she got her first chance to produce. This time a psychological mystery titled "Uncle Harry." It was mighty good, too, till the studio got cold feet and decided to let the Hays office have its way. Why, they shot five different endings, and at each ending Joan grew madder and madder, until finally they decided to call the whole thing a dream. Well, that threw our little Cinderella, who was used to stark, staring realism, since she and Hitchcock had cut their wisdom teeth on it. And so again Miss Harrison is looking for a job. But you've gotta take your hat off to the little gal—she's got plenty of nerve.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Mae Tinée: I seldom get excited about movie stars, but I think that Dorothy McGuire is way, way ahead of most of the Hollywood ladies. She has refinement and intelligence in her face, and her acting in "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" was superb. Could you please print her picture and give me a little background on her? W. W.

Dorothy McGuire

I agree with all you say about Miss McGuire. Here's a picture I'm sure will please you and all her other fans who've sent in requests. She's a fairly recent arrival in Hollywood but had five years of professional stage work and starred in the Broadway production of "Claudia" as well as the screen play. Born in Omaha, Neb.; attended school in Indianapolis and in Wellesley, Mass.; married to John Swope, now in service. Likes to read and is not particularly athletic. Height, 5 feet 6 inches; eyes, blue; hair, blonde.

Dear Miss Tinée: Please settle a disagreement. My friend and I disagree as to who played Leo in "The Little Foxes." I would be very grateful to you if you would tell me the person's name and a little about him. ANN

Dan Duryea played the role you mention. He was born in White Plains, N. Y., educated at Cornell university, and played in the stage as well as the screen version of "The Little Foxes." He's popular as a villain and has made a number of movies, including "Along Came Jones," a recent arrival on Chicago's screens. Married.

The Sultan of Sulu Tells

How England 'Stole' North Borneo!

By ALEKO LILIUS

WHEN, one blistering hot summer day a few years before this war, the sultan of Sulu told me that he intended to take British North Borneo away from London and hand it to Washington I thought either that he was joking or that the heat got him.

But he wasn't joking, nor had the heat affected his mind. On the contrary, he was in dead earnest and meant every word he said.

His Highness Padukka Mahasari Maulana Sultan Hadji Jamalu'l Kiram II. of Sulu and I had been playing chess in his wooden palace at Maimbung on the island of Jolo in the southern Philippines, and I had caught him in an attempt to cheat. The sultan had roared with laughter, but the game was over. Cheating at games must have been one of his few remaining royal prerogatives, because his courtiers had taken his fakery as a matter of course. The joke seemed to be on me.

We were next served cold tea with small sweet, perfumed cakes, of which the sultan was very fond. I was thinking how in the olden days, before the advent of the Americans, the sultan could have had me thrown in a dungeon and executed for daring to put him in his place. He must have read my thoughts, because he good-humoredly complained that the Americans had changed all this. The so-called Bates treaty of 1898 had taken away his right to rule, if not to reign, over his people. He could not any more check off at will the lives of his enemies, nor could he take away their property.

True, to compensate for the loss of these prerogatives Uncle Sam paid him a sum of $3,000 a year, in addition to granting him large tracts of land within his sultanate. But nowadays what was a mere $3,000 to an honest-to-goodness sultan?

He had other income, tho, he hastened to explain. Besides, he still was the spiritual head of all the Moslems in Sulu and North Borneo. Then there was the tribute money the government of North Borneo paid him.

"North Borneo?" I asked, surprised. "Your highness forgets that North Borneo is British."

The sultan turned almost purple with rage.

"It is not British," he shouted, and pounded his fist on the low coffee table. "It is mine—mine—mine! The British lease it only. They lease it—that's all. They pay me rent. Now, they have repeatedly broken their lease in more ways than one. I am demanding the return of my Borneo sultanate. And with Allah's help I shall recover it. And once I get it back, I shall turn it over to the President of the United States."

It took quite a while for him to calm down. Finally I managed to ask him how he intended to go about this recovery business. Surely he could not do it by force of arms. For one thing, he had neither force nor arms; besides, the United States would never allow him to make any hostile moves against a colonial government with which we were on the best of terms.

But I sensed a story behind this outburst. So little by little he unraveled to me a remarkable tale of land grabbing, of sharp colonial politics and oriental intrigue, and if the facts as told to me by the sultan were corroborated there was room for all sorts of fantastic speculations, including one that the North Borneo territory actually should come under the Stars and Stripes.

Here is the sultan's own story:

In 1878 two enterprising European adventurers, an Austrian, Baron Overbeck, and a Briton, Alfred Dent (later knighted by Queen Victoria for his part in this affair), approached Jamalu'l Alam, the sultan's father, with an offer to lease all his vast and as yet unremunerative holdings in Borneo for the sum of 6,000 Straits dollars a year. A similar offer was also made to the neighboring sultan of Brunei. As the two Malayan rulers were pinched for money and this looked like an easy way of getting easy cash, they gleefully signed away their lands for a period "as long as the sun and the moon shone." The lessees were also given the right to coin money, collect taxes, and make their own laws. The lease money, however, was to increase with the income from the land.

Hardly had the ink of the signatures on this document dried when the two men formed a colonization company, the Sabah company. It in turn turned over all its rights to the government-protected British North Borneo company. Thus neither the original lessees nor the Sabah company would ever expect an increase of profit from the land, and thus the sultan's income from the lease would never increase.

It took a few years for Sultan Jamalu'l Alam to realize his predicament. He complained so bitterly and insistently that finally the British North Borneo officials agreed to arrange a meeting in Singapore. There were, however, numerous delays. On one of his trips to North Borneo, Jamalu'l Alam had met a beautiful Chinese mestiza, Inchi Jamilah, with whom he fell violently in love, and he returned post haste to Jolo, where he made her his sultana. She soon became known as a cruel and dangerous woman, and the persons she caused to be murdered were legion. One day, according to rumor, as at last the sultan was making preparations for the journey to Singapore, he suddenly was taken ill and died in convulsions. There were those who maintained that she had been paid well for the deed. The young Jamalu'l Kiram, the new sultan, however, continued the negotiations for a new lease or treaty and another day was set for a meeting in Singapore.

He arrived there in style and with a large retinue, as was befitting a person of his rank. The authorities had placed a house at his disposal in the outskirts of the town. There were several conferences, and the going was hard, but finally the parties seemed to have reached a settlement. So the sultan was asked to bring his copy of the lease—or treaty—to the final conference.

On the day before the new document was to be signed, however, the sultan's copy of the treaty—the only one in existence—was stolen from him during the early morning hours—at half past 5, to be exact. The sultan and his followers were saying their prayers in an adjoining room when the Moro Tamini (now a resident of Labuan in British North Borneo) succeeded in getting away with the document, together with some jewelry which had been lying around the room. The sultan saw him, grappled with him in the dark, but the man had oiled his body and succeeded in slithering away and disappearing thru the window.

It was at this point in the sul-

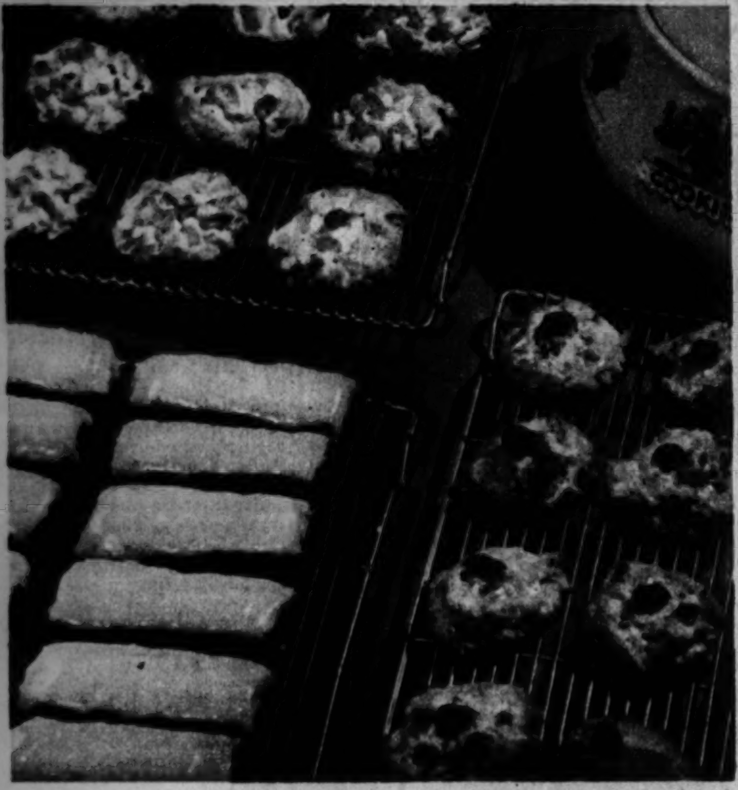
FILL THE COOKY JAR



These ginger bars and honey drops are good carriers for the children's lunch box.

By MARY MEADE

KEEPING the cooky jar filled isn't too much of a problem when sugar-saving recipes like these are used. It takes just a third cup of sugar to make the ginger bars and none at all for the honey drops.

Now that school has opened, they're especially useful to round out the noon lunch, whether it's toted in a lunch box or eaten at home. For a simple dinner dessert, serve them with fresh autumn fruit or pudding.

GINGER BARS
(12 bars)

- ¼ cup fat
- ⅓ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- ½ cup honey or dark molasses
- ½ cup cold strong coffee
- 1 cup wheat flakes
- 1 cup sifted flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1½ teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ⅛ teaspoon ground cloves
- ⅛ teaspoon ginger
- ½ teaspoon lemon juice
- ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind

Cream fat and sugar together, add egg, and beat until light and fluffy. Stir in honey, coffee, and wheat flakes which have been crushed to make ⅓ cup crumbs. Add dry ingredients, which have been sifted together, and stir until thoroly mixed. Add lemon juice and rind. Turn into a greased 8x8 inch pan and bake at 375 degrees about 30 minutes. Cool, then cut into bars. If desired, frost with an orange icing.

HONEY DROPS
(2½ dozen)

- ¼ cup fat
- ½ cup honey
- 1 egg
- 1 cup rolled oats
- 1 tablespoon milk
- 1 cup sifted flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ cup chopped raisins

Cream fat and honey together, add egg, and beat until thoroly mixed. Add rolled oats and milk. Sift dry ingredients together and add with raisins to first mixture. When well mixed drop from a teaspoon on a greased baking sheet. Bake at 400 degrees for 18 to 20 minutes.

Another dessert made to order for the times is the illustrated baked pears. Honey is the sweetening agent used, and a cup of dessert wine adds a gourmet touch.

WINE-BAKED PEARS
(Serves six)

- 6 firm pears
- ⅓ cup honey
- ½ cup cake crumbs
- 1 cup tokay, port, muscatel, angelica, or any dessert wine
- 3 tablespoons chopped pecans
- 1 tablespoon lemon rind, grated
- 1 cup soured cream
- Grated cinnamon or mace

Cut pears in half lengthwise, remove cores, and arrange in baking dish. For filling combine 2 tablespoons honey, cake crumbs, 2 tablespoons wine, pecans, and lemon rind. Fill core cavities with mixture and top with matching pear half. Pour remaining wine over pears and bake at 350 degrees for about 10 minutes. Remove from oven, drop one teaspoon honey over each pear, return to oven, and bake 5 to 10 minutes more, or until done. Serve with wine sirup or with soured cream which has been sweetened with remaining ¼ cup honey and topped with a dash of grated cinnamon or mace.

CHEESE APPLE DUMPLINGS
(Serves six)

- 1½ cups flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup shortening
- 1 cup grated cheese
- 3 to 4 tablespoons water
- 4 medium apples, pared and sliced
- ½ cup sugar
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- ¾ cup brown or white sugar
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 cup water

Sift flour and salt; cut in shortening and cheese with pastry blender or two knives until evenly mixed and like coarse sand. Add 3 to 4 tablespoons water in small amounts to dry mixture, stirring lightly with fork. (Use only enough water to make particles hold together.) Roll dough ⅛ inch thick on floured pastry cloth and cut into 5-inch squares. Mix apples with ½ cup sugar and ½ teaspoon cinnamon and place on squares. Bring opposite corners of dough together on top of apple mixture, moisten edges of one side with water, and seal; prick with fork. Place in pan about two inches deep. Combine remaining ingredients and bring to boiling point. Pour over dumplings and bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees, for 10 minutes, then reduce oven to 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Serve warm with plain or whipped cream.—MRS. J. S. BOULIER, 4140 Drexel blvd., Chicago.

"Theft" of North Borneo

tan's story that I interrupted him to ask:

"Your highness had a copy of the document, of course?"

"I had no other copy," he answered, "because my father had considered the document so important and secret that he hever had trusted any to copy it."

"Then your highness has been able to get a copy from the North Borneo company?"

To this I received this astonishing reply:

"I have repeatedly asked the British North Borneo company to supply me with another true copy of the treaty, but they have consistently refused to do so. In Sandakan, the capital of North Borneo, the authorities have always excused themselves that the original copy was in London, but not even London has forwarded me my copy."

"But what about the thief?" I wondered. The sultan had named him, and what did the police do about the matter?

"The police actually rounded up a gang, including this Moro Tamini. Then the police judge asked me whether I could swear on the Koran that I had actually recognized Tamini as the thief, and how I could possibly have done it in the dark. So I became hesitant. Being the religious head of the Moslems, I could not very well take this oath without being dead certain that this man was the culprit. The suspects were freed, but today this Tamini enjoys great privileges in North Borneo."

The sultan's disclosures were of such sensational nature that I decided to make a trip to Sandakan and there to do some investigating of my own. The Philippine customs cutter Mindoro happened to be in the harbor, and I knew the captain. He at once offered me passage to Sandakan as his guest; he often made the trip to the vicinity of Borneo to keep an eye on opium smugglers. When several days later we arrived in Sandakan I immediately went to see the colonial secretary, and in my capacity of a magazine writer and correspondent I told him of my interview with the sultan of Sulu. The official stiffened at once. I had touched on a sore spot in the history of the colony. He tried to tell me that there was really nothing to the sultan's story, it was all pure fabrication, and that his government had time and again received his complaints, but that it had always found just cause to ignore them.

The secretary, however, was obviously nervous. Time and again he left the room, ostensibly to consult his chief, the governor, and finally I asked him why I could not be shown the disputed document. This would once and for all clear the air and forever stop the sultan from further pestering the North Borneo government.

So the secretary once more left the room, and when he returned he told me that the treaty was in

A sentry outside the sultan's palace.

London, that there was no copy of it available in Sandakan, and that he regretted that he could be of no further assistance to me. Here he got up from the chair; the interview was over.

On my return to Jolo I wrote the story and mailed it to a well known London weekly magazine, where it was given a prominent display. I received from London a cable stating that the governors of the British North Borneo company admitted the lease arrangement but denied that the original treaty was in London and maintained that it was in Sandakan. Apparently my article had caused quite a stir. I was also advised that "questions had been asked in parliament" and that the home office had been annoyed at my disclosures.

So I made ready to take a second trip to Sandakan. I had now the makings of a first class story with an international tang to it and was determined to get at the truth now or never.

A few days before my departure the sultan came to see me. He warned me not to go. He had received a message from his followers in Borneo that if I returned to Sandakan I would not come back alive.

I sailed on a small coastal steamer, and as the trip was rough, we were a couple of days late. On my arrival in Sandakan I went direct from the pier to the government house and asked to see the secretary. It took a long time before the official decided to receive me. He was very curt.

"Well," he said, "so it's you again."

I showed him the cable from London. He looked at it, held it up against the light, rubbed his finger over it, and did everything to it but smell and taste it. Finally he asked my permission to show it to his chief.

He left the room.

He never returned. I sat there like a fool for three long hours of a blistering hot Borneo summer day, waiting for him to come back with my precious cable. Finally an Indian servant walked in. I asked for the secretary.

"O, Sahib P. has long ago left for the day. He most certainly won't return."

5 TO 1 FOR CRACKIN' GOOD SALTINE CRACKERS

Says Lucille K. Jearn, who conducted the tests, under the supervision of Mrs. Rena Robinson, Home Economics Director, Chicago Home Arts Guild, 205 N. Michigan:

"I saw the taste appeal of Crackin' Good Crackers proved conclusively at the Home Arts Guild! We made 5 different cracker tests. In each test, members of a different woman's club compared Crackin' Good Crackers with one other leading brand . . . Crackin' Goods were favored throughout for crispness, flavor, saltiness and appearance. In answer to the question, 'Which cracker do you prefer?'—a total of 396 women, in the 5 tests, selected Crackin' Goods —only 74 voted for all other brands together!"

Have you tried this new and different cracker?

See for yourself why Crackin' Good Saltines win more popularity every day! They're extra-thin, you know, and crisp clear through. Women rave about their extra shortening and flavor. And they're Toast-Baked to Stay Fresh, too! The first bite will convince you—here's a really different, really better cracker! Try it!

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

By ELEANOR NANGLE

Lake Forest, Ill.

HOW THE RATIO of men and women students at Lake Forest college has changed! Normally 60 per cent of the students are men; this year of the 325 students only 75 are men, many of them veterans. Lake Forest's immediate building project will be the erection of dormitories so that it can accommodate the men as they return in the old, larger number and increase the college's capacity to 700.

Interestingly enough, Lake Forest has been co-educational since it opened in 1876 in a building that had been used as a hotel. Its site had been purchased two decades previously by a group of Chicago pioneers, stanchly Presbyterian, who planned originally to establish in the beautiful suburb 30 miles north of Chicago an institution in which young men might be trained for the ministry. Altho it is Presbyterian in its origin and remains in close sympathy with the church under whose auspices it was founded, Lake Forest's charter forbids denominational restrictions.

Its founders chose the site well; it is a little jewel of a campus, traversed by ravines and abundantly wooded. Its architecture is mixed, as almost always happens with old midwest colleges, but one gem in a perfect setting is the little Reid Memorial chapel, a Gothic building, connected by a lovely arcade with the Reid Memorial library. The chapel is its newest building. Its oldest is College hall, built in 1878 and still in use, thanks to good basic construction and complete remodeling eight years ago.

The four fraternities on the campus are understandably inactive these days, but four sororities—Chi Omega, Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Xi Delta, and Gamma Phi Beta—are flourishing. Each has its chapter rooms in Lois Durand, the women's dormitory, which is pretty much the social center of the campus.

In 1943 Lake Forest college was selected by the Johns-Manville corporation as the school to be attended by its scholarship winners, 30 high school students of top qualifications from all over the country, who were to be given the benefit of a unique experiment in coördinating a liberal arts education with business training. In that year of war, of course, all the winners were girls. Of these 26 are still attending Lake Forest. (Two, in the way of women students, got married and withdrew from school.)

These girls join in the college life in every way except working schedule. They are on the campus three days a week, but spend two days a week in actual business training in various departments of the corporation's plant in Waukegan or its offices in Chicago. All are now juniors—and all concerned are happy at the success of the plan.

STYLE MUSTS FOR BEAUTY

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

"NEW DRESS, new hat, new coiffure notwithstanding, you will still run the risk of looking passe unless you utilize modern equations of grooming which will give a woman a new look that is more than fiction," says the style creator Miss Brownie. This designer believes that there are laws of dressing well which are just as precise as those of geometry, and a lot easier for the average woman to understand.

The diaphragm is truly the center of the fashion universe this year, Miss Brownie adds. The whole silhouette revolves around the diaphragm, which is molded flat and should be about the center of your ensemble as you look in a full length mirror. Balance is achieved by the length of your skirt and the height of your hat, and care must be taken that you don't look topheavy in too tall a hat plus too short a skirt.

The things you wear should help you, not drag you down, Miss Brownie points out. The word "functional" has had a lot of heavy usage, but it still is the keynote of the world we live in, and it will be more so. Never forget that a dress you can't forget when it's on you has failed in its first test and makes a personality failure of you.

"I believe," she says, "that the modern woman's dressing room is her laboratory where she concentrates on developing and perfecting her own particular look. Once she is ready, she should be able to forget herself and drink in the exciting life around her."

With light-as-air fabrics insulated to keep us warm, a feeling of freedom, speed, and youth everywhere, Miss Brownie predicts that the present trend for baring backs, arms, feet, ears, and midriffs will, if anything, increase. "Youthfulness is already every woman's right by science," she said. "Any one who takes the trouble to know her own skin, hair, and figure tendencies can keep youth indefinitely."

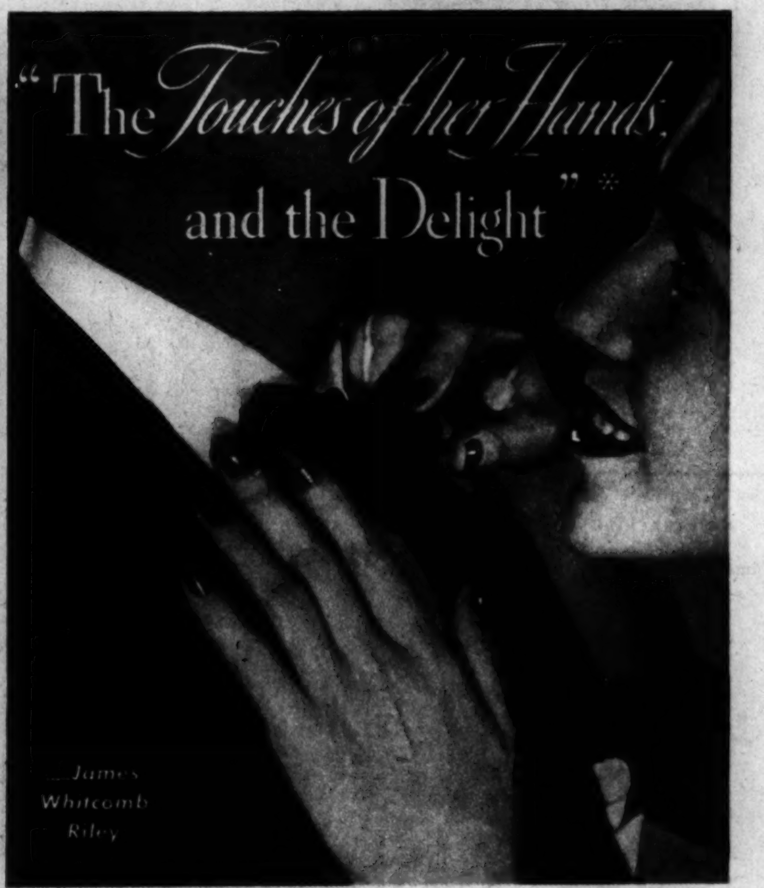
On the other hand, this expert believes that the era of "natural" make-up is finished, to be replaced by make-up that is probably art enhancing nature. "I believe that the new clothes, ultramodern in their bold cut and color contrast, demand a hint of exaggeration in makeup," she says, "and it's up to each woman to decide which of her features to highlight and then 'design' her look around that one strong accent. Perhaps her eyebrows should be boldly slanted or her lips emphasized."

"One 'must' of modern grooming," Miss Brownie adds, "is brushing the hair back from the face and leaving the ears free." Clothes, however modern, may have demure touches, but there is no place today for the frizzy, face-blurring hair-do, she says.



We bet the lady never "touched" household Drudgery!

Housework can make your hands look like anything but a poet's dream. Rough, red, older-looking than you are. Use Pacquins Hand Cream regularly to help give your hands a "young-skin" look!

Ask your Doctor or his Nurse about

. . . how they keep their hands in good condition in spite of 30 to 40 washings a day. Pacquins was originally formulated for their professional use. It's super-rich in what doctors call "humectant" —an ingredient that helps keep skin feeling soft!

Merry Go Rhonda

RHONDA FLEMING grew so fast that by the time she was 16 Hollywood scouts were frequently offering her movie contracts, only to discover to their sorrow that she was too youthful to play the glamor roles which her red-head beauty and her perfect figure called for. At least the many offers gave her the movie bug, and she started to study dramatics, entering class plays, radio competitions, and such, until one night she made her debut in Ken Murray's "Hollywood Blackouts"—a stage revue. An agent spotted her, took her to David Selznick, and she was signed without a screen test. Scarcely a year later she celebrated her 21st birthday on the set of "Spellbound." Rhonda was born in Los Angeles on Aug. 10, 1923. Her mother is Effie Graham, a beauty who appeared in many shows with Al Jolson. Rhonda stands 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 118. Her waist measures 25 inches, bust 37, hips 35. You'll see her when "Spellbound" is finally released, and then in "Some Must Watch."

Can BORDERLINE ANEMIA* Add Years to a Woman's Looks?

BORDERLINE ANEMIA can be the thief of youth! It can leave your complexion dull, and you tired and listless. Yes, even if you are young, it can make you look older.

And surprising as it seems, as many as 68% of women—many thousands of men—have a Borderline Anemia!

Poor Red Blood Cells Means Shortage of Energy

So, if you tire easily, if you seem to be losing your looks, guard against Borderline Anemia, resulting from a ferro-nutritional deficiency of the blood. Red cells that are small, puny and pale in color can't possibly release full energy to every muscle, every fibre.

Take Ironized Yeast— Build Up Blood and Energy

Now, if you have a Borderline Anemia—if you're pale and listless—you need more of the elements you must have to build up healthy blood cells and vigor. Medical records show fully 50% of people don't get enough of these elements! They need Ironized Yeast Tablets.

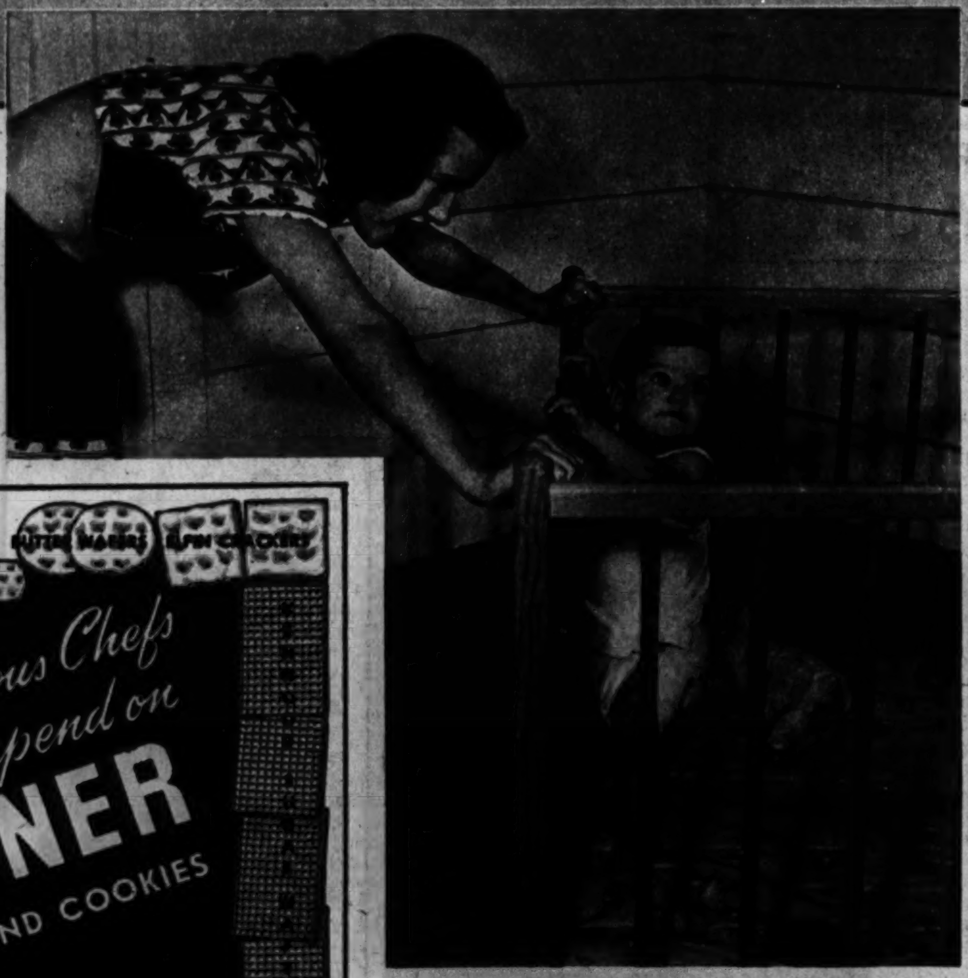
She'd Rather Be Wright

A Hollywood Camera Study by LOUIS WOLF



At right: Teresa Wright poses with her son, now 8 months old. It is one of the first pictures of the baby to be published. When she was making "The Trouble with Women" Teresa's great regret was that the nurse, not she, was with the boy!

This is one of Teresa's favorite hostess gowns. Not a lavish dresser, the young actress has excellent taste in clothes.

She made this dirndl skirt from a crazy quilt and combines it with a roomy, long-sleeved peasant blouse.

Teresa has many classical recordings, which she prefers to popular music. Her husband is Niven Busch, the author and producer. She particularly likes to read his new works in manuscript; hopes some day to play the lead in the movie version of one of his novels.

By FREIDA ZYLSTRA

TERESA WRIGHT succeeded as an actress for the very reasons that people thought she would fail. Her fellow students at dramatic school and her friends thought she was too wistful and child-like to be a good actress, but she made the most of that characteristic by playing that type of role.

She had never thought about being an actress until she saw her first stage play, "Victoria Regina," starring Helen Hayes. She immediately registered at the Wharf theater in her home state of New Jersey.

During her second summer there she toured New England as the lead in Eddie Dowling's show, "Our Town."

She appeared in several other plays before she landed one of the choicest roles on Broadway, the young girl in "Life with Father."

It was Teresa's good fortune that Samuel Goldwyn happened in to see the play and decided that she was the one to play the daughter of Bette Davis in "The Little Foxes." Two years later she played the role of Mrs. Lou Gehrig in "Pride of the Yankees." She won an Academy award for her performance in "Mrs. Miniver." At present she is working on a picture, "The Bishop's Wife."

Two years ago Teresa was married to Niven Busch, author and producer. When their baby son was 6 months old Teresa went back to work for Paramount on the picture "The Trouble with Women," but she said she envied the nurse who was able to stay home with the baby. The picture has not yet been released.

Teresa says she isn't the sportswoman she'd like to be. She swims well enough, but that's about all. Her husband is a good golfer, a fine horseman, and a hunter. For his sake she has tried to learn a little more about the active life.

The only beauty hints she practices are those which will give her the natural look. She wears very little make-up and never plucks her eyebrows. Her hair is worn in a natural girlish looking bob. She is 5 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 110 pounds.

Busch bought this dress for Teresa in Mexico. It is rather typical of her wardrobe, which does not at all run to the glamor dresses usually found in Hollywood closets.

JAMES CAGNEY and SYLVIA SIDNEY in

"BLOOD ON THE SUN"

1 Nick Condon (James Cagney), managing editor of the Tokyo Chronicle, is haled to headquarters by Japanese secret police to explain his story about the Tenaka plan, a very secret outline of Japan's war aims.

2 After the questioning he goes to the home of his best friends, the Ollie Millers. There he learns from Mrs. Miller (Rosemary De Camp) that they are returning to America.

3 When he goes to see them off later that night he finds Mrs. Miller strangled. Hurrying home, he finds Ollie battered and dying. Before he dies Ollie gives Nick a copy of the Tanaka plan.

4 Police break into his house and finally subdue Nick after he has knocked out several of them. They arrest him, but he is able to get his release.

5 In a bar Nick meets Iris Hilliard (Sylvia Sidney), a Eurasian secret agent. She arouses his suspicions by saying a Chinese friend had sent her to find him.

6 In spite of his suspicions Nick falls in love with Iris and they are together a lot. She reports to Baron Tanaka that her plan is working but that she doesn't yet know whether Nick has the Tanaka plan.

7 Eventually Nick decides Iris is working for Tanaka. He trails her to her apartment, and she shows him the plan, which she had taken from his house to protect him. She, too, wants to get it out of Japan. Neither of them knows their conversation is being recorded by the police.

8 Premier Tojo confronts Tanaka with the fact that Iris is double-crossing him, and when Tanaka is unable to find Iris he knows the plan eventually will be revealed to the world. He commits hari-kiri.

9 On the water front Nick finds Iris and Prince Tatsugi, a peace lover, who wants the plan given to the world so it will know Japan's evil hopes of conquest. Before they can reach an American freighter, police discover them.

10 As Iris flees, Nick battles the police, hoping she at least will make her escape with the plan. (THE END)

HOME TRAINING is the foundation for your child's Easy Adjustment to school

Your child's first contact with organized society is school . . . and his ability to adjust himself to this new world depends upon the guidance that you alone have given him. The experiences of his pre-school years have far-reaching effects . . . forming the base for his future self-assurance, social adjustments and accomplishments.

That's why My Book House Plan of Child Training is so important . . . for it teaches your child to think for himself—to acquire the powers of reasoning that will influence him in the selection of desirable companions and in the development of balanced character traits. The Plan is flexible enough to be effective at any time in your child's school life . . . but its results are more satisfactory if your child is exposed to the plan at a very early age.

HERE'S WHAT MY BOOK HOUSE CAN DO FOR YOUR CHILD!

The results of an impartial, nationwide survey prove beyond a doubt that My Book House Plan can be applied effectively to the individual child. 95.3% of the children given its advantages received average or better school grades. Parents and teachers agreed that they were more understanding in their associations with others . . . were better prepared to face the responsibilities of life with an eager and happy attitude.

Surely, you want your child to get the most from his school experiences—so why not mail the coupon today to start him toward a successful future?

Finally... I had You to Myself

AT LAST THEY WENT AWAY—all those other people who had come to welcome you, I'd begrudged them every minute.

I love you so; and I'd waited so long.

"It's only you and I now, sweet," you said. "The way I've dreamed it. Your soft little hands against my face."

"How ever did you keep your hands so soft?" you murmured. I thought gratefully of Jergens Lotion. Was so glad I'd used it.

The war work I did might easily have roughened and coarsened my hands if it weren't for Jergens Lotion. Jergens furnishes beauty-guarding moisture for the skin.

Someday—when we have our little house together, you'll see an extra bottle of Jergens in our kitchen. Then, my dearest, you'll know how your wife keeps her hands so soft—with Jergens Lotion!

COLLEGE GIRLS—UP-TO-DATE—USE JERGENS LOTION, NEARLY 4 TO 1

Your hands, too—serenely protected against roughness, using Jergens. Provides your skin with a moisture that helps safeguard softness. Jergens Lotion blends 2 ingredients, "special" for helping coarsened skin toward dear feminine smoothness. Many doctors prescribe them. Easy! Never sticky, no annoying oiliness. 10¢ to $1.00 (plus tax). Be sure; use Jergens.

CAMPHO-PHENIQUE
ANTISEPTIC DRESSING

Boiling with rage, I picked up my baggage at the ship and had it carried to the hotel, where I booked a room. Then I went to the bar. I needed a stiff drink. A tall young man in a polo shirt and white shorts sidled up to me. I offered him a drink. Then he began to ask me questions. I smelled a rat. Finally I asked him point blank if he was not a policeman.

"I thought you knew," he admitted with a smile. "I suggest that you see the chief in the morning."

"Why?"

"To clear things up."

"Look," I said, "I have nothing to clear up. As a matter of fact, it's your government that has a clearing to do. However, I shall be pleased to see your chief." Next he offered me a drink and I accepted—a double one.

But early next morning there was a tap on my hotel room door. A middle-aged Moro, dressed in a sarong and wearing a fez on his clean-shaved head, stepped in. He spoke to me in faulty English.

"I have word from sultan. He say I shall watch you. Borneo men like kill you. You more better come with me."

I remembered the sultan's warning. Perhaps he had actually tipped off some of his followers here to keep an eye on me. I told him that I had some unfinished business with the chief of police.

"No, you more better come with me. No go police. You go police, no come back."

Perhaps the man had something there. I wanted to think. So I asked him to wait for me on the street. I told him that I wanted to pack.

"O, no, no pack. Leave everything here. Only short trip to my house. I send man for baggage later." I said that I would be with him shortly and almost had to push him out of the room. Then I locked the door, found my pistol and strapped it on me under the tunic.

The sultan and his court in the palace at Maimbung on the island of Jolo.

I peered out thru the blinds, and I saw my man standing outside looking up at the window. I watched him for a few minutes; then I saw another Moro come up to him, and they both peered up. So there were two of them. Then the other man left.

When I joined him I ordered him curtly to walk ahead of me. He hesitated at first, but then I showed him my cartridge belt under my coat. I told him to lead the way. He walked toward the harbor district, and we soon reached the Chinese section of narrow lanes and shops.

He often looked around. Then I noticed that we were followed. I was in a dilemma; it was bad enough to have this man of uncertain loyalty in front of me, but to have two more behind my back was definitely unpleasant. I stopped. I waited for the two men to pass me. Instead they slowed down. I backed against a wall, motioning to them to walk on. Suddenly they nodded, and, smiling in a most disarming way, they quickened their step.

This was most bewildering and a complete mystery to me. Who was foe or friend? The Moro saw them coming, and he began to run. The two men took after him and disappeared around the nearest corner. If there was a scuffle and a muffled outcry I was too busy trying to get out of a tight spot to hear it.

I decided to turn and hurriedly retrace my steps out of the lane and get back to the hotel, when I saw one of the two men reappear in the lane, look around for me, and then motion with his arm to follow him. Somehow his gesture reassured me and I ran up to him. He spoke to me in a native tongue which I did not understand, but I followed him. We ran down to a short pier, stepped into a native outrigger, a vinta, hoisted its sail, and soon were cutting the choppy waves of the Sandakan bay. And there, steaming up the bay in all its white but ancient beauty, was the Philippine customs cutter.

We hailed her and it was only a matter of minutes before I was climbing over her side. It struck me as strange that no one seemed surprised at seeing me. The officers looked pleased and rather relieved. The captain confessed that his timely appearance actually had been the sultan's doing. After I had left Jolo the old man had received repeated warnings about my safety, and he got in touch with his old friend, the master of the Mindoro. The cutter lifted anchor within the hour.

As to British North Borneo, it still remains a leased territory—leased from an American sultan, in fact. The sultan of Sulu died a few years ago, and now one wonders to whom the rent money for the exploitation of his rich and vast possessions in British North Borneo is being paid. As all the sultan's direct heirs have since mysteriously died in quick succession, it would appear that Uncle Sam, as the self-appointed guardian and protector of the Sulu sultanate, ought to be the rightful recipient of the sum.

And if he is, to whom does British North Borneo really belong? Is it British, or is it in the last analysis American?

SULTAN'S LETTER

Copy of sultan's letter to the author corroborating original story. A translation appears below.

"This letter is being decreed by Paduka Haina Sri Maulana—as—Sultan Hadji Mohammed Jamalu'l Kiram Sultan of Sulu and North Borneo, respectfully addressed to Aleko E. Lilius, Manila.

"I am glad to inform you that, as being published in the Sphere of July 4, 1931, narrating my statements regarding the loss of my Treaty with the Sabah Company at Singapore, you have correctly transmitted to the paper of what I have stated to you on your interview with me at Maimbung, Sulu. What partially appears in italics, of a treaty between the Sultan of Brunei and the Sultan of Sulu of January 22, 1878, as far as my knowledge is concerned, are not the preamble or clause prescribed in the document which was stolen from me, that memorable morning in Singapore.

"The original copy of this treaty of which the British North Borneo Company still retains, of course, they cannot deny its existence.

"I maintain the only way to solve this matter would be to request thru your editor, to supply you with photostatic copies in English and Malay of the Treaty of both parties concerned.

"If by will of Almighty, I carry this plan it is my intention to arrive in London this year. And if necessary go before a Court of Peers. I have an absolute trust in the justice of the British public to whose opinion I hereby appeal.

"May God bless you and give you long life and strength to carry on and I thank you for any help you have given or care to give me in the future.

"You may publish this letter if you think it can do me any good.

"(Signed) Jamalu'l Kiram.

RAW, SORE, MISERABLE FROM A COLD?

Do This Quick for Relief!

If you are sneezing and snuffling from a cold . . . all stuffed-up, with your nose and throat raw and sore—combat this distress, as thousands do, by gargling with new Pepsodent Antiseptic.

The reason it's recommended is this: Standard laboratory tests prove new Pepsodent Antiseptic kills millions of germs that go with colds. The very type of germs that many medical authorities say often heighten the misery and prolong the effects of a cold.

Isn't it only common sense then, to gargle with new Pepsodent Antiseptic at first sign of a cold! What better way to combat millions of germs that swarm on mouth and throat surfaces as far back as you can reach . . . back where illness often strikes first!

So treat a cold this sensible way: Get plenty of rest, avoid exposure, dress warmly, drink plenty of liquids . . . and gargle frequently with new Pepsodent Antiseptic. See if you don't relieve discomfort almost at once!

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

By BOB BECKER

DOGS have been called upon by man to perform many different services down thru the centuries. There have been countless thousands of dogs of different breeds used for herding, and even today dogs are invaluable around cattle and sheep.

The idea of using them in war started back in the dim dark ages and continues today. In fact, the part played by strong, intelligent dogs in World War II. is one of the brightest pages in the history of dogs.

Then we have had dogs of the chase—the boarhounds, the hounds for hunting deer, fox, and other wild animals. King John kept a pack of 240 greyhounds alone "to hunt fallow deer in the park of Knappe." Otterhounds, greyhounds, boarhounds, spaniels, setters, and other breeds figure prominently in the early history of the dogs in the outdoors.

But today we have a big, rugged hunting dog that never is found in any of the early illustrations of old world hunting, because it's of such recent origin. This is the Chesapeake Bay retriever, the only native American sporting dog, which is known from coast to coast among the millions of dog fanciers and sportsmen who like to hunt.

Altho there is no complete and authentic record of the way the Chesapeake Bay dog was developed, students of dog history know that the breed had its origin in two Newfoundland puppies which were brought ashore from a wreck off the coast of Maryland in 1807. How these dogs were bred, the outcrosses used, and whether the English otterhound was an influential outcross are still unsolved mysteries in the world of dogs. But by careful breeding the Chesapeake was evolved, and by the year 1885 a very definite type was fixed.

A retrieving dog of superlative ability, the Chesapeake soon became known for its ability to combat rough water and severe cold. Then came the development of the dead grass color of the Chesapeake, which made such a big hit with midwestern sportsmen. Today this breed still is widely used by hunters.

The Chesapeake is hard to beat when it comes to water work. We've had the good luck to hunt over some splendid ones, and we've judged some fine specimens in field trials. They were wonderful in their disregard of cold and in marking and finding crippled ducks trying to hide in heavy vegetation.

Known for its stamina and ability as a water retriever, the Chesapeake is the only native American sporting breed. This excellent specimen is the champion Cocoa II., owned by F. A. Bunte, Evanston, Ill.

Last fall we hunted ducks with a pair of Chesapeakes owned by Jim Raker that did just about everything a duck hunter could want in the course of a day's shoot on mallards.

Chesapeakes seem to be much heavier than they were some years ago when we first hunted over them. In fact, one of our best known breeders and boosters of these duck dogs points out that some of them are almost too big to be used from a boat. The males may tip the scales at 85 and 90 pounds, says this breeder. This question of weight is, of course, a matter of preference among sportsmen. Some like 'em big. Others prefer a medium-sized dog.

In recent years the Chesapeake has experienced some pretty stiff competition from the Labrador retriever. We have noticed this in field trials especially, altho it's also evident when you get into the hunting country that the black dog from England has been coming up very fast and winning the favor of many sportsmen. (Last year 172 Chesapeakes were registered, as against 515 Labradors.) The golden, a handsome dog with a disposition to match its looks, also is giving the faithful old Chesapeake considerable competition. But to thousands of sportsmen there never will be any duck dog except the Chesapeake. And when you see a good one at work it's easy to understand this viewpoint.

A few weeks ago a Chesapeake owner called us for information on the phrase "dead grass color." He was in an argument as to what the phrase meant. According to the standard it covers almost any shade of brown from a tan to a dull straw color. Anyway you see Chesapeakes showing this variation in color. Sometimes they are very light. Then you'll see one that's a rich chestnut brown color. A white spot on the breast and toes is permissible in the breed. This touch of white appears on several of our solid colored breeds, altho its absence is desired.

AMERICAN HEROES OF WORLD WAR II.

This is another of the series on outstanding American heroes of World War II. Subjects are heroes who have been decorated for valor. Illustrations are by Clara Fargo Thomas and Alexander Vernek.

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

SHORTLY after American marines had captured Henderson field on Guadalcanal in the Solomon Islands, Brig. Gen. (then Col.) Merritt A. Edson was assigned the task of defending it against counter-attacks by the Japanese.

He placed his force of 800 marine raiders around a ridge dominating the jungle on either side of the air field, and when the enemy broke thru our front lines there he successfully withdrew his units in the most exposed positions with a minimum of casualties. The Japs, in continuing their assaults, engaged the marines in desperate hand-to-hand combat with bayonets, pistols, and knives. Edson, tho exposed thru a whole night to heavy fire, remained in the thick of the fighting, holding tenaciously to the ridge, which was vital to the defense of the air field. This was on Sept. 13, 1942.

The citation accompanying the award to this gallant officer of the medal of honor (congressional medal) said that "continuously exposed to hostile fire of great intensity, he directed the defense of the ridge, personally displaying such a marked degree of cool leadership and personal courage that the officers and men of his command were constantly inspired by his example."

A native of Chester, Vt., Brigadier General Edson joined the marines in 1917 and served in France in the first world war. He was awarded the navy cross in 1928 for heroism in the Nicaraguan campaign. His elevation to brigadier general came in November, 1943, just after the battle of Tarawa, in which he took part. Later he served in the Marianas, and still later he was given the important assignment of chief of staff of the fleet marine force in the Pacific.

WILL DAVIDSON

NEW ORLEANS has turned out a legion of great jazz musicians, but it never turned out a more persistent fellow than Louis Prima. Whether you consider Louis a jazz great or not is not the question of the moment. What is interesting is the Prima career. He was born in the Crescent city's Negro district, his family being one of only four white families there. His background is one of poverty. Until recently he has never been in the big money, and his dad still drives a truck down south, just in case the present prosperity doesn't last. The Primas have good reason for caution, for ever since the day in 1934 when Louis started work at New York's Famous Door for $40 a week his financial status has been on what might conservatively be called the negligible side. After a couple of appearances on the Rudy Vallee radio show Prima got a raise to $100 a week, and the publicity enabled him to take his five piece band, including the famous Peewee Russell, to his own Famous Door in Hollywood. That was a successful run, but it didn't make Prima rich. It did give him unwise ambitions to organize a big band. That was a brutal experience, for Louis and his sad gang played flop after flop all over the country, finally breaking up in a mining town in southearn Illinois. Back to Hollywood and a search for a recording date, for Louis felt that if he could get on wax he'd be on his way.

Louis Prima

He finally connected with the old HIT company, cutting some increasingly popular sides. Then MAJESTIC took over the company, with Prima's contract included, and he got a real break—his first royalty pact. Then he found himself a smash hit in theaters. He's scheduled to make his first Chicago cafe appearance in years at the Sherman Friday. Louis plays a burly trumpet, pretty undisciplined, sometimes raucous; but he always infects his numbers with energy and humor. Some recent MAJESTIC hits are "Atchison, Topeka, and the Santa Fe," a neat "How Deep Is the Ocean?", "Who Threw the Whiskey in the Well?", and a catchy revival of "There's a Broken Heart for Every Light on Broadway."

IT PAYS TO PLAN

By SHEILA JOHN DALY

(Copyright: 1945: The Chicago Tribune)

SOMEWHERE between the day you go into high school as a freshman and the day when you leave in cap and gown, diploma in hand, there comes a problem—or two hundred. Some of them are small and some are big, but often these things that bother you really aren't hard to solve, so look over these letters from high school fellows and gals and see if perhaps they'll help you untangle the kinks in your high school high jinks:

"We're a group of high school fellows and gals who would like to know how to liven up a pretty dead town. There's nothing to do on a Friday night except go to a movie, unless the high school team is playing a game. Even then there's no place to go afterward to celebrate if we win or to mope if we lose. We'd like to start a teen-age club but don't know how to go about it. We tried to get up a petition to have the city provide some place for us to meet and dance, but nothing ever came of it. We all like to dance, but the coke places won't allow it, and the places that do won't allow minors. What's the solution?"

Probably the reason these young characters weren't able to get a rise out of the city fathers was that they didn't seem enthusiastic enough or willing to help carry out the project themselves. So make the tentative plans first and then present them to a group of business men or the local chamber of commerce.

First scout around for a likely place for your canteen. Some fellows and gals have worked wonders with a vacant store, an old warehouse, or a reconverted barn near enough town to be convenient.

Formulate a plan to present to the people you want to back you. Give them the statistics on how many high school fellows and gals will be members, how much they will pay in dues, the estimated expenses of running the place (these include rent, light, heat, phone, etc.), and figure how much profit you'll be able to make from the bottled drinks and other items you'll sell at your refreshment bar.

Once you have the backing of the older people, they will probably help you solicit donations from various organizations to purchase paints and the lumber necessary for reconversion. Organize a large committee to clean the place thoroly. Have fellows from the manual arts class build a coke bar and booths, or collect old card tables and have the fellows make them sturdy again. Scout around for local high school artistic talent to paint murals on the wall, or just paint the walls a plain color and concentrate your decorations on bright tables and chairs.

You'll be able to procure a juke box (and part of the take will be yours to add to your treasury), and from then on you're set. For those fellows and gals who don't dance you might supply cards and ping-pong facilities. After you've been operating for a while you may even add a book corner where young intellectuals can come and browse. With all this activity going on, the old town won't be such a dull place after all!

"Our club of eight girls would like to give a fall formal party, but we aren't sure exactly what pitch to take. We're all 17 and would like the party to be held at one of our homes. It would be a boy-girl affair, of course, but that's as far as our plans have gone. We'd like it to be a big night that every one would want to record in her diary, but where do we go from here?"

The number one step is, of course, to decide what fellows you're going to ask to be your guests. With the right dates the evening is bound to be fun even if you spend it playing tiddlywinks. But from then on it takes a little imagination. For your first party a dinner dance would be quite a big undertaking (did you ever try to cook dinner for 16 and still have your hair curly and your formal pressed on time), so if you'll make it a dance, with a buffet supper served at about 10, things will be much simpler. Plan for a hot casserole (here's where your favorite recipe and your mother's or your home ec. experience come in), salad, hot rolls, potato chips, relishes (the more the better), and something to drink.

If you're not sure that the fellows—or you, for that matter—will be happy trying to balance plates and cups on their knees and carry on a conversation at the same time, set up four card tables. Cover them with attractive luncheon cloths, set them for four (a candle in the center of each will add to the atmosphere), and then let the guests settle around them, two couples to a table. This is much easier on the furniture—saves you from having to clean up French dressing and scraps of lettuce from the best chair—as well as being much easier on the fellows and gals' nerves.

As for the rest of the evening—make sure that the place is large enough for dancing, clear all the furniture back to the wall, and roll back the rugs if possible. Turn the lights down low (a few blue bulbs screwed into the table lamps will give that ballroom atmosphere) and make sure that you have plenty of good records on hand. You may have to buy, beg, or borrow those dance records, but they're important.

TOPS AMONG TEENS

JOHN CLAGUE

AT THE AGE OF 17 John's great-grandfather, Charles Honsberg, was working with De Lesseps on the construction of the Suez canal. At the age of 17 his enterprising great-grandson, John Clague of John Hay High school in Cleveland, O., has already had his first one-man show. His great-grandfather also was an artist, but he only dabbled, because his wife wanted him to be a draftsman; but his great-grandson still treasures a few of those old water and ink pictures. But until John began to take up the brush seriously in junior high school there was no artist in the family in the generations between.

The talented high school student already has won first prize in a national high school contest for his pencil sketches and second prize for his crayon drawings, while a portrait of his mother was featured in a national magazine. Besides nine Saturday courses and a summer course in the Cleveland School of Art already completed, John spent last summer taking a special course in anatomy as taught by Frank Wilcox, well known artist. Last year the versatile young artist won a prize in the national poster contest sponsored by the national meat poster contest for his original design.

Hard working and energetic, John's school interests are varied. Besides some radio dramatic work, he has played the lead in the senior play, and since junior high school days has designed all the scenery for school stage productions. John is young, his plans are big, and he has yet to prove himself, but already his career has shown that talent and hard work don't have to wait till 21!

WE SAW IT PROVED!

"For Dissolving and Cleaning Away Grease, Old Dutch Cleanser Is Way Ahead!"

THESE are three of the impartial housewives who witnessed cleaning tests on soiled greasy porcelain like stoves, sinks, tubs. *Every cleanser popular throughout this whole country was tested, including Old Dutch. These cleansers are used by nearly 9 out of 10 women. And these impartial witnesses report:

"One cleanser—Old Dutch—stood out far ahead of all the others. We're convinced—Old Dutch Cleanser saves real time and work in getting kitchen and bathroom sparkling clean."

Discovery by Noted Veterinarian

STOPS DOG-ITCH

For years, veterinarians were baffled by a common skin disease that caused untold agony to dogs and cats. Starting as a burning itch, it soon develops dandruff-like scales and brownish edged sores with a mouldy odor in ears, on paws, under-body, back or around tail. Treatments for mange, fleas, allergy or faulty diet result only in costly care or actual loss. Now, noted veterinarian, Dr. A. C. Merrick, has positively identified this disease as a fungus infection comparable to "Athlete's Foot." He has named it "Fungitch" and has also developed SULFADENE, a treatment proved amazingly effective in thousands of clinical cases. Applied externally, Dr. Merrick's SULFADENE stops the itch in a few minutes—scales and sores vanish in a few days. Buy today where you get pet foods or remedies—or send $1.00 for generous treatment; money back if it fails to give complete satisfaction. Address Brookfield Laboratories, Dept. DOCTORS PROVE 2 out of 3 women can have Lovelier Skin* in 14 Days!

14-DAY PALMOLIVE PLAN TESTED BY 36 DOCTORS ON 1285 WOMEN WITH ALL TYPES OF SKIN!

"My complexion had lost its soft, smooth look," says Mrs. Edmund Hallowell of Philadelphia. "So I said 'yes' when I was invited to try the new 14-Day Palmolive Plan—along with 1284 other women of all ages—from fifteen to fifty! My group reported to a leading Philadelphia skin specialist. Some of us had dry skins; some oily; some average. After a careful examination, we were given the Palmolive Plan to use at home for 14 days.

"Here's the Palmolive Plan: I washed my face 3 times a day with Palmolive Soap. Then—each time—for a full 60 seconds—massaged onto my skin Palmolive's lovely soft lather, as you would a cream. Then rinsed. This cleansing massage brought my skin the full, beautifying effect of Palmolive's lather. After 14 days, my doctor agreed my complexion was brighter, fresher, smoother. You must try this wonderful 14-Day Palmolive Plan!"

YOU, TOO, may look for these skin improvements in only 14 Days!

 LESS OILY CLEARER!

"My skin became less oily," says Esther McTighe of Cambridge, Mass. Excessive oiliness often leaves skin blotchy-looking—robs it of that clear, lovely look. The 14-Day Palmolive Plan brought actual definite gains to 89% of 367 women who had oily skin. See if it won't help your skin become less oily—clearer.

 LESS COARSE-LOOKING SMOOTHER!

"Skin less coarse-looking in 14 days!" says Dorothy Seidman of Chicago, Ill. The 36 doctors reported almost two-thirds of all the women tested had smoother—actually finer looking skin. Reason enough for every woman who longs for a younger looking complexion to start the Palmolive Plan today!

 FEWER TINY BLEMISHES!

Tiny blemishes—incipient blackheads, often caused by improper cleansing, respond in most cases to the 14-Day Palmolive Plan. "My skin improved a lot," says Betty Gordon of New Orleans, La. The doctors found finer looking, clearer skins in over half the cases tested. See what Palmolive can do for you!

 FRESHER, BRIGHTER COLOR!

"Skin fresher, actually less sallow!" says Mae McCormick of San Francisco, after testing the 14-Day Palmolive Plan. The 36 examining doctors report this same important improvement for 2 skins out of 3 among the 1285 women. See if this Plan won't bring you fresher skin—and in only 14 days!

DOCTORS PROVE PALMOLIVE'S BEAUTY RESULTS!

NOW!.. Palmolive comes in a New, Big Bath Size!

Try it—for tub or shower. It's solid. Thrifty. Long lasting. And how a man enjoys its rich, generous lather!

AGONIZING MUSCLE PAIN?... HERE'S QUICK RELIEF

Let fresh blood help nature carry off "fatigue acids"

● Cheer up—you can say "good-by" to tortured muscles following too much exercise! When you over-do, "fatigue acids" settle inside the muscles—often make them swell with pain. Here's what to do: Rub those tortured muscles with fast-acting Absorbine Jr. It stimulates local circulation and the fresh blood flowing through the muscles helps nature carry "fatigue acids" away. Then the swelling can subside. Your muscles "ease"—feel limber and relaxed. You'll feel like shouting for joy! Always keep Absorbine Jr. handy. At all drugstores, $1.25 a bottle.

Tampax is so easy to use—it is invisible when in place—sound in principle—invented by doctor

Tampax discards belts, pins and external pads—and this is a revolutionary change in monthly sanitary protection. . . . Users of Tampax think it a wonderful change because they understand all the facts. You, perhaps, may know the essential fact that Tampax is worn internally. But do you realize that an efficient applicator makes insertion easy? And that when Tampax is in place you are unaware of its presence? . . . The principle of Tampax is internal absorption, long known to doctors. Made of absorbent cotton, Tampax is highly compressed and firmly stitched. No odor can form with Tampax. Chafing is impossible. There is no external bulk to hamper you or "show" under a trim dress. . . . Tampax is quick to use, convenient to change, easy to dispose of. A whole month's supply fits into your purse. Sold at drug stores and notion counters in 3 absorbencies (Regular, Super, Junior). Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

I've been driving a "Champion"... that's why I'm going to buy one

IT'S a seasoned young ski trooper from New England, later an infantryman, who is doing the talking.

"Why a Champ?" he asks. "I've been driving its twin brother, that's why. A Studebaker Weasel. That little job sure proved to be a ski trooper's best pal for two tough winters in the mountains during the war. That baby can go anywhere. And they tell me, that in a car, its Champion engine saves a guy a lot of money on gas."

Yes, many men still in the services as well as millions of other Americans have their hearts set on those smart new Skyway Style Champions that Studebaker is now building.

Thanks to Studebaker engineering genius, Studebaker's unusual competence in production and Studebaker's unique father-and-son craftsmanship, this new and finer Studebaker Champion paces all other leading lowest price cars in all around savings per mile.

Here's why it's called an ideal laxative antacid

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia brings fast, effective relief from upset stomach, gas, heartburn and other distress caused by excess stomach acidity. Whenever overindulgence threatens to make you miserable let Phillips' help you wake up thoroughly refreshed. Overnight Phillips' performs this double action:

1. As an acid stomach alkalizer, Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is one of the fastest, most effective known to science.

2. As a gentle laxative, Phillips' can be taken any time without thought of embarrassing urgency. Caution: Use only as directed.

Millions of families have made genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia their standby. Keep a bottle handy. For economy buy the big 50¢ bottle which contains 3 times as much as the 25¢ size. In convenient, easy-to-carry tablet form, Phillips' costs only 25¢ a box, less than a penny a tablet.

YOUR FIRST post-war love affair is here! And it's going to be love at first sight... love at first "write!"

FOR HERE are pens as sleekly designed as the newest jet planes—and as amazing in their performance. Never before have there been pens with such deftness of touch, such complete devotion to your every whim.

THAT'S BECAUSE Waterman's Taperites have the first pen points ever made to combine stream lining with flexibility or firmness—whichever you prefer. Each Taperite point is 14 karat gold, and hand ground to your personal needs. And, because the point is always visible, you never have to "write blind" with Waterman's Taperite.

NO MORE plungers, no pumping, either, when you fill this pen! With Waterman's—a flip of your finger... and it's done! Touch the paper—and you start to write. None of those first futile strokes because the point is dry... no shaking or priming necessary. Thanks to Waterman's exclusive Inkquaduct Feed, there's ink the instant you want it. And it stops flowing the instant you lift your pen!

WATERMAN'S TAPERITES all carry the wonderful new "Emblem" service guarantee, reprinted in full at the left. And it's worth remembering, too, that while these pens write with any ink... they're at their best with Waterman's ink... the ink that's all INK. No harmful solvents, no dilution.

P.S. YOU'LL LIKE HORMEL CHILI CON CARNE! Everybody likes chili the way Hormel makes it, because Hormel Chili is different. You'll like it, too. DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK IF YOU DON'T!

THE PAST WEEK HAS SLIPPED AWAY MOST PLEASANTLY FOR THE TOGGLES AND ANNIE, AS GUESTS IN MR. TIDNAB'S PALATIAL MANSION.....
OH, IT'S BEEN PLEASANT HERE, BUT I DO WISH WE COULD START FOR OUR HOME ON THE MAINLAND! THE SEA SEEMS CALM ENOUGH NOW...
OH, I IMAGINE THAT MAN WILL HAVE HIS BOAT FIXED VERY SOON NOW...
I CAN'T HELP IT... I DON'T FEEL EASY HERE, AFTER THAT HORRIBLE EXPERIENCE WE HAD IN THAT OLD GARDEN... BR-R-R!
HO-HO! COME NOW, SONJA... I'M SURE THAT CAN BE EXPLAINED...
EVEN THAT DEAD MAN? THAT MIGHT TAKE A LOT OF EXPLAININ'!
HM-M... WELL, MR. TIDNAB SAID HE'D TELL US THE WHOLE STORY TODAY... MOST THINGS AREN'T AS BAD AS THEY SEEM...
NOW THAT'S OUR STORY, BOYS... LEAVE IT TO ME TO SELL IT TO THEM... WE MUST LULL THEIR SUSPICIONS, IF POSSIBLE!
WELL-WELL-WELL... I SUPPOSE YOU'RE STILL UPSET ABOUT THAT SILLY BUSINESS IN THE OLD GARDEN... NATURAL, OF COURSE... BUT QUITE EASILY EXPLAINED... THOSE BOYS ARE REALLY INCORRIGIBLE PRACTICAL JOKERS...
JOKE? KILLING PEOPLE A JOKE?
HO-HO! THEY DIDN'T KNOW YOU WERE MY FRIENDS... TOOK YOU FOR STRANGERS... THOUGHT IT WOULD BE RARE SPORT TO FRIGHTEN YOU... BUT THERE'S NO REAL HARM IN THE BOYS...
I GAVE THEM A MIGHTY STERN TALKING TO, I CAN ASSURE YOU! THEY'VE LEARNED THEIR LESSON!
B-B-BUT THERE WAS A DEAD MAN THERE... WE CAUGHT THEM BURYING HIM... WHAT ABOUT THAT?
OH, YES... POOR OLD EDGAR... FAITHFUL CHAP... ON THE PLACE FOR YEARS... HAD A BAD HEART... KNEW HIS END WAS NEAR... ASKED TO BE BURIED IN THE OLD GARDEN THAT HE LOVED SO MUCH... LEAST WE COULD DO, OF COURSE...
OH, OF COURSE...
HA-HA! SO, YOU SEE, IT'S ALL VERY SIMPLE, NOW THAT YOU KNOW ALL OF THE FACTS...
HA-HA! OH, YES INDEED... I KNEW THOSE FELLOWS MUST HAVE BEEN FOOLING...
YOU SEE? I TOLD YOU AND TOLD YOU THAT YOUR SILLY TALK ABOUT GANGSTERS WAS RUBBISH! SUCH SENSATIONAL THINGS JUST DON'T HAPPEN...
WELL, I MUST ADMIT MR. TIDNAB IS VERY CONVINCING...

SKIPPY HELPS

SKIPPY the Chipmunk is a very good Teenie Weenie horse. He can pull the heaviest loads in the Teenie Weenie cart, and he can climb any tree with the greatest of ease. It is very nice to have a horse that can pull a heavy load of nuts, and it is extra nice when that horse can climb a tree and knock down the nuts, too. Skippy is a very busy little chipmunk, and the Teenie Weenies sometimes can't get him to work for them, but the little people were all very happy when Skippy agreed to help them get their winter's supply of apples.

Two apples usually supply the little folks thru the winter. One apple they store away in their food cellar, and when the Cook wants a piece of fresh apple for salad, apple sauce, or for Teenie Weenie pies he cuts off some and immediately covers the spot with hot wax where the piece had been cut out. That preserves the apple, and so the Teenie Weenies have fresh apple for a long time. Another apple is cut in two and one half is made into apple butter, which is sealed into Teenie Weenie six and 10 drop jars. The other half is dried so the little people always have a supply of apple on hand.

One morning the men loaded a spool of stout thread into the Teenie Weenie cart, hitched Skippy to the cart, and set off for their apples. When they arrived at the tree they discovered that all the apples had been picked except two that hung on one of the highest branches of the tree. The little men unhitched Skippy, took off his chipmunk harness, and, holding one end of the thread, the Cook climbed onto Skippy's back. The chipmunk ran up to the top of the tree, where the Cook climbed off, and then Skippy ran down and soon brought up several more Teenie Weenies. Each Teenie had a safety line attached about his waist, which could be snapped around a tree limb, so there would be no danger of falling to the ground. One end of the thread which the Cook had carried up the tree was passed over a limb of the tree and then fastened to the stem of an apple. When every one was ready, one of the Teenie Weenies cut the apple from the tree and the men below lowered it to the ground. In a little time both apples had been loaded into the cart, and Skippy soon pulled it to the Teenie Weenie village.

The Teenie Weenies paid Skippy two pouches of corn for his help. There is a pouch in each cheek of a chipmunk, and each pouch holds about 20 grains of corn, and so Skippy received 40 grains of corn for his work.

Each month you will receive your copy of "Wings", the Guild's illustrated book-review Brochure, which contains articles about the Literary Guild selection to be published the following month. From these articles you decide whether or not you care to receive the Guild book described. If not, you simply return the form supplied and no book will be sent to you that month. If, however, the Guild selection is one you don't want to miss, it will be sent to you on publication date.

Save Up to 50% On New Books

Literary Guild books are selected by our Editorial Staff from proofs submitted by leading publishers long in advance of their publication date. Because the Literary Guild is the largest book club in the world, a huge special edition is printed at a tremendous saving in cost. This saving is passed on to members. The Literary Guild edition is manufactured at the same time as the publisher's edition, yet Guild members pay a flat price of only $2.00 for each Guild book accepted, instead of the higher price charged for the same book sold at retail in the publisher's edition.

Bonus Books Free

In addition, Guild members receive a $2.50 to $4.00 popular new book as a bonus for every four Guild books purchased! To be a "member in good standing" merely requires that you accept a minimum of only four Guild books a year out of the 12 or more new and important fiction and non-fiction Guild books to be published.

Send No Money—Mail Coupon

The convenience, the enjoyment, and the saving of about 50% of your book money will, we hope, prompt you to become a member of the Literary Guild at once. As a special inducement for joining now instead of "later" you will be sent—FREE—a copy of your choice of any book shown above; and you may, if you wish, start your Guild subscription with any other book shown, at the Guild price of $2.00 instead of the higher price of the publisher's edition.

All publishers are operating under restricted paper quotas, thereby limiting the number of new members the Guild can service. By joining now your membership can be accepted at once, and you will be guaranteed against any increase on Guild selections for a year.

TELL OF NORTH SHORE BAPTIST CHURCH WORK

2,300 Members Will Mark 40 Years

The North Shore Baptist church, 5244 Lakewood av., which began as a small group meeting in a railway station near Wilson av., will celebrate its 40th anniversary Friday and next Sunday as the largest Baptist church in the midwest. It also is one of the largest in the Northern Baptist convention.

Dr. Weldon M. Wilson, pastor, will speak on "Life Begins at Forty," at 11 a. m. next Sunday. The choir, dressed in fashions of the early 1900s, will sing old hymns. Messages from absent members and former pastors will be read. Many guests will attend.

Four members will discuss church history in a meeting at 7:15 p. m. the same day. Mrs. C. C. Russell, 5646 Wayne av., a charter member, will talk on the first decade; Harry Lindeman, 6282 Louise av., the second; Mrs. T. W. Blachley, 5254 Glenwood av., the third, and George H. Paris, 6234 N. Hoyne av., the fourth.

Superintendent to Talk

James L. Kraft, chairman of the board and church school superintendent for more than 30 years, will be the principal speaker at a dinner at 6:30 p. m. Friday in the church. More than 300 members are expected.

Celebration chairman is Mrs. Leslie B. Arey, 536 Roscoe st. Mrs. Norman Dold, Wilmette, heads a social committee. Harold Hatzfeld, 1453 Foster av., historical committee chairman, has prepared a chart outline of the congregation's history. It will be displayed in the dining room.

Starting with a group of 104, the congregation now numbers more than 2,300, 285 of whom are in military service. Average church school attendance is 850, but on Rally day last month, 1,285 were present. Because of this growth, a building committee in 1943 initiated plans for a new church and members pledged $100,000 to a building fund. The fund now amounts to $120,000.

Tell of Early Pastors

The church was organized in a meeting Sept. 18, 1905, with the Rev. W. B. Morris as first pastor. He served until 1908 when the Rev. Ingram E. Bill took over. In 1913 the Rev. J. Scott Ebersole began a five year pastorate to be followed by the Rev. William Henry Jones. The Rev. Herbert W. Virgin served from June, 1924, until Dr. Wilson assumed the pastorate in September, 1941.

A graduate of Aurora [Ill.] college and the University of Washington at Seattle, Dr. Wilson held pastorates in Terre Haute, Ind., Tacoma, Wash., and Portland, Ore., before coming to the North Shore church.

In 1906 the group built a church at Racine and Leland avs., which was used until the congregation moved into its present building, the cornerstone of which was laid Feb. 20, 1921. The church maintains missionaries in several foreign fields and contributed three chaplains to World War II.

SEAT EVANSTON CHURCH SCHOOL LEADER TODAY

Miss Gail Frank will be installed as director of religious education of Second Presbyterian church, Evanston, in a service at 4:30 p. m. today. The Rev. John Magill, pastor of Lake View Presbyterian church and chairman of Christian education for the Chicago Presbytery will preside.

John McCracken, Christian education director for the Presbytery, will speak. Miss Ruth Mead, instructor in the Presbyterian College of Christian Education in Chicago, will give the charge to Miss Frank and Dr. Albert Hjerpe, pastor of Second church, will charge the congregation.

A reception in the parlor will follow. Miss Frank is a graduate of the College of Christian Education and has been for four years director of religious education in Glencoe Union church.

Busbey to Bare PAC Schemes in Evanston Talk

Activities of the CIO political action committee and related so-called independent voters' committees will be described Thursday night in the Georgian hotel, Evanston, by Fred E. Busbey, former Illinois congressman who was a member of the house committee to investigate un-American groups.

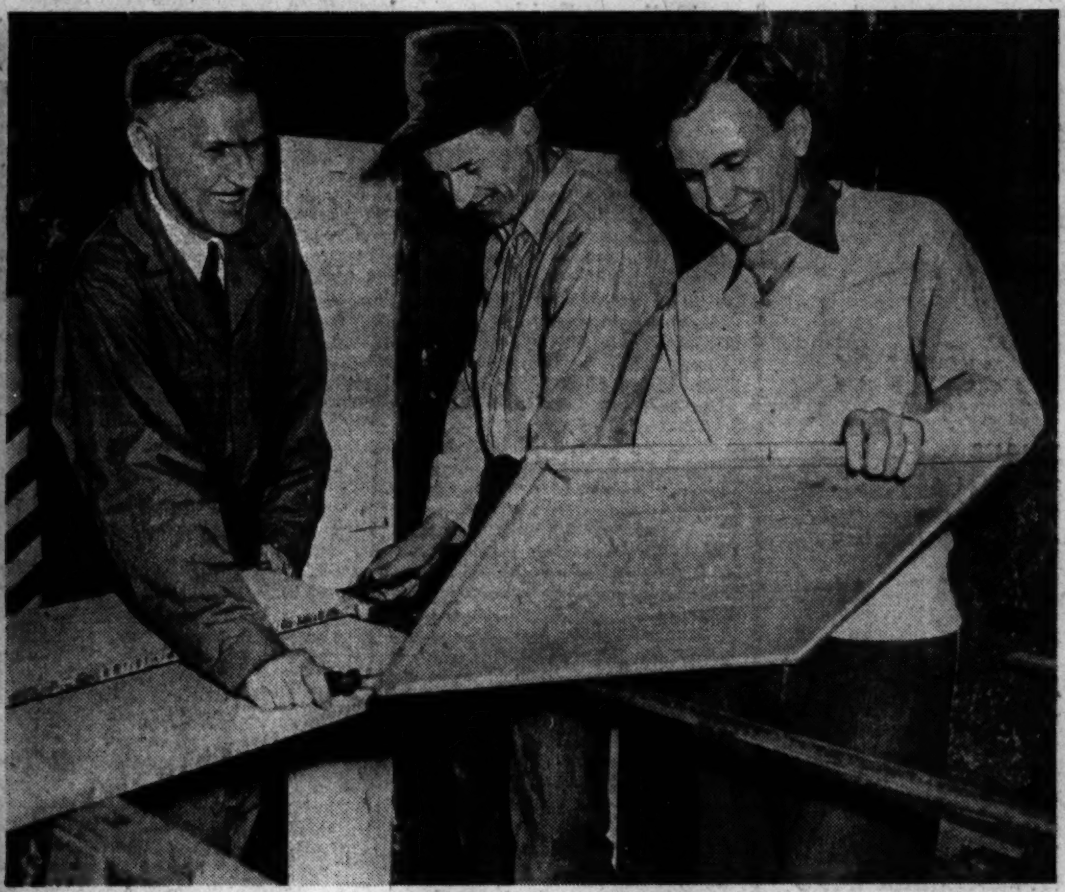
Busbey, World War I. veteran, has made a hobby of studying subversive activities over many years. He believes that the CIO-PAC and communist-front organizations are working to control congress in order to attain state capitalism similar to the systems of nazi Germany and soviet Russia.

"Evanston's recent troubles emphasize the importance of Mr. Busbey's talk from his long experience with communist tactics," said Alan E. Ashcraft Jr., Republical township committeeman. "Wide awake citizens will do their community a favor by learning more about the formenters of discord."

Ald. Harold Mogg is president of the Evanston Republican club sponsoring the meeting which starts at 8 p. m.

Stagers Acquire Southern Accents and Violent Complexes for 'The Little Foxes'

Magnolia blossoms and a wide veranda should be somewhere in the background as Nancy Hamilton, wearing the dress of a southern belle in 1900, rehearses for the role of Alexandra in Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes," to be presented by the Deerfield Stagers Oct. 26 and 27 in Deerfield school. The little theater group, which marks its 10th anniversary this season, designs and builds its own scenery and maintains its own costume warehouse.



Scenery Production Chief Milton Merner (right) gives instructions as James Russell (left), Stagers charter member, and Maurice Allsbrow prepare a living room set for "The Little Foxes." Woodwork and drapes will be characteristic of the 1900 period, and furniture will be borrowed from Deerfield homes.

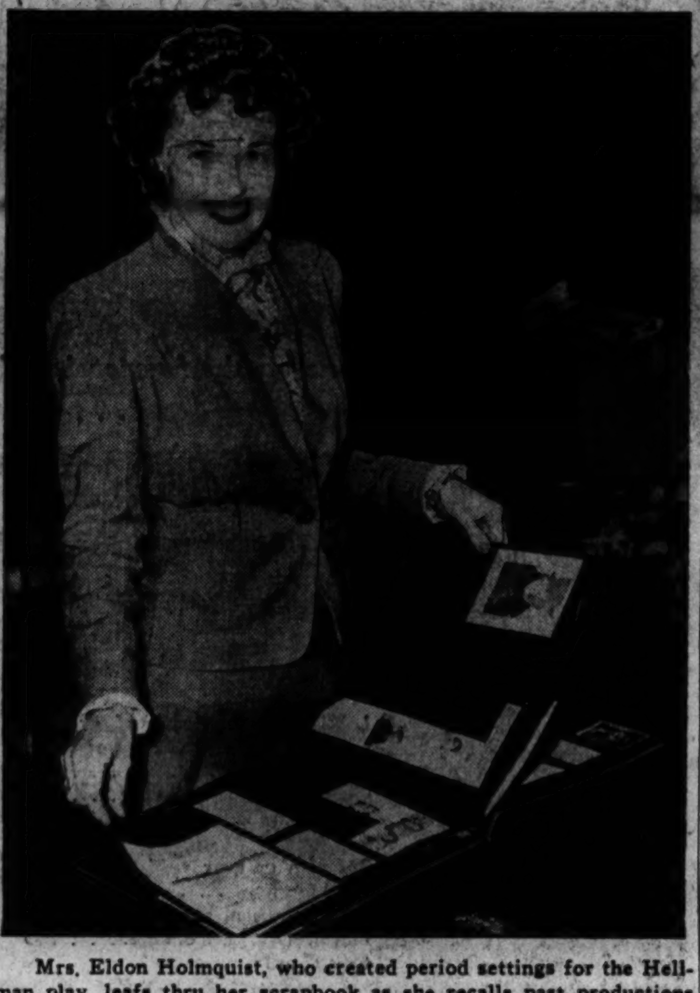
Laboring to acquire southern accents are Mrs. Robert Jordan (second from left) and Louis Seider (right), who take the parts of Negro servants, Addie and Cal. Mrs. Frederick Ritter (left), who plays the role of Birdie, has a head start, suh! She once lived in Tennessee. James Tibbetts, the production's William Marshall, doesn't have to worry. Marshall is a Chicagoan.



Mrs. Eldon Holmquist, who created period settings for the Hellman play, leafs thru her scrapbook as she recalls past productions of the Stagers. She will play Regina, the role taken by Tallulah Bankhead in the Broadway production.

Sewing costumes, painting props, or playing a leading role—all are taken in stride by the versatile Stagers. Mrs. James W. Collins tries her hand at mixing paint, aided by directions from the box cover.

Wild Expose: Shred Animal Myth Masks!

BY GENEVIEVE FLAVIN

Impaled by a myth!—This is the fate of folk who support their Socratic ramblings with such cliches as, "I know—I've a memory like an elephant's!"

Despite the 150 years' longevity endowed by popular fiction, the elephant rarely lives beyond 50. The monkey outsmarts him in recognition tests, and even human beings top his record. [Life insurance companies allow man a 65 year life expectancy, with the greater percentage listed as sane at death.]

Authority for these statements is R. Marlin Perkins, director of Lincoln park zoo, who finds myth stripping an amusing as well as instructive pastime.

Truth About Chameleons

That the person, who follows the trail of a recently bereaved elephant, will be led to a fortune in ivory tusks in the graveyard of the lords of the jungle was termed a fable. No such burial ground yet has been found. If such a discovery should be made, it is doubtful if a single ivory tusk would be found intact. Jungle animals destroy them in their search for tidbits of salt and calcium.

Perkins also discredited the myth that a chameleon changes its color according to that of its background. Its color changes are impelled by light, heat, and emotion. [That would allow it to turn green with envy.]

The old superstition that a turtle, once it takes hold of you, will not let go until it thunders, often has been dissipated. Tho tenacious, it will let go when it gets tired.

Now, Take Elephants

Answer man to practically a million animal questions a year, Perkins said tho many appear to be foolish and others are gags, all have answers. Most frequently sought information is the gestation period of the elephant. The answer is 19 to 22 months depending upon its sex. The male takes 22 months, the female 19.

He added that no elephant ever has been born in an American zoo or circus. He explained that male elephants are too dangerous to handle for the average zoo keeper.

He protested the splitting of a crow's tongue does not help it to talk. The voice does not come from the throat of this bird but from the syrinx which is well below the throat.

Snakes Roll? Don't Be Silly

Perkins also destroyed the myths that hoop snakes roll down hill; that persons get warts from handling toads, and that alligators lift their upper jaws to open their mouths.

The hoop snake slithers along just like the rest of its species; the toad secretes venom thru the warts in its body for protection against biting [but who wants to bite a frog!] and the alligator drops its lower jaw.

Author of several books, among which is "Animal Faces," a composite of pictures and descriptions. Perkins has a thousand myths that he could strip. Among them are—the story of the ground hog, the truth about the zebra's stripes, and —Mr. Perkins, will you please write another book?

LINCOLN BOYS CLUB TO START $100,000 ANNEX

Raze Factory This Week at Site

An 80 year old cigar factory standing at 651 Willow st. will be razed this week to make way for a $100,000 annex to the Lincoln Chicago Boys' club, 1725 Orchard st., oldest boys' club building in the city.

It will provide extended recreational facilities for 2,500 youngsters of the overcrowded neighborhood, where the boy population is estimated at more than 8,000. It also will house the first girls department in a boys' club.

Made possible thru a special gift by an unnamed Chicagoan, the building program is in line with aims approved by the Chicago planning commission and the Community Fund, which groups partially finance operational costs.

Finish by Spring

Children of the near north side where there are few, if any, play facilities or vacant property, will be provided with a roof garden for open air dancing, summer rooftop camping and gardening, and playing courts.

They also will have an auditorium for staging plays, debates, dances, and movies; a modern kitchen, where boys and girls may learn to cook; a craft room, sewing room, and modern shops for woodworking equipped with power tools. Scout rooms also will be included in the annex which will be finished by spring, Irving Rudolph, vice president of Chicago Boys' Clubs, Inc., said.

Cost of equipment for the new quarters will exceed $25,000, Rudolph estimated. It will be supplied thru special gifts.

Start Plan in 1901

Chicago Boys' clubs came into being in 1901, when interested young men from the near north side rented a small space on State st. near Jackson blvd. where free baths, lodgings, meals, clothing, some medical service, and limited games were offered to loop newsboys. Three boys responded the first night, thus forming the charter membership.

The present Lincoln Chicago Boys' club was not organized, however, until 1910, when a small group of boys decided they wanted a clubhouse.

Headquarters were first established in an abandoned church, next in a store, then in an old house, and finally in the deserted cigar factory which also was outgrown.

Boys Decide to Expand

The leaders, an enterprising group of lads including present Vice President Rudolph, decided to expand the club on their own efforts. Each pledged a thousand bricks, then priced at $5 a thousand. They earned the money thru odd jobs, then began digging a basement in the lot adjoining the cigar factory.

Several prominent Chicago business men heard of the project. Impressed with the boys' determination to acquire recreational room, the men applauded with financial support, led by William A. Wieboldt, Chicago merchant and philanthropist, who gave the first substantial donation for the Lincoln Boys' club building. The first such club in Chicago, it presently houses game rooms, a swimming pool, library, radio room, and gymnasium. Current membership is 1,166.

Lincoln Park Kiwanis to Sponsor Goodman Play

Lincoln Park Kiwanis club will sponsor the presentation of "Philadelphia Story" at 8:30 p. m. next Sunday in the Goodman theater. Proceeds will be used to endow a year's university scholarship in industrial relations for a boy or girl. The candidate must qualify for training in the field of labor law and human relations in commerce.

Kiwanis Club to Exhibit Colored Motion Pictures

North Shore Kiwanis club will sponsor a benefit exhibition of colored motion pictures of Italy, Sicily, and Switzerland, with symphonic accompaniment, at 8:15 p. m. Wednesday in the Edgewater Beach hotel. Proceeds will go to the underprivileged children's fund. The travelogue is loaned to the club by Dr. Alfred N. Murray.

North Shore Hiking Club Holds 7 Mile Hike Today

The North Shore Hiking club will assemble at 9:40 a. m. today at Winnetka village hall to start a seven mile hike to Deer Grove woods. Sponsored by the Chicago Recreation commission, the hike is open to the public and will be held regardless of weather conditions.

Four Canned Goats Lend Air of Success to Packing Plant

The company of 57 varieties fame may have to dig up another slogan if the Lake County Community Canning center, North Chicago, continues in business.

Last year the center processed 52 different products varying from peaches to goats, and this year expects to improve the record by including in its repertoire such items as rabbits, minestrone, and a kind of kraut made from turnips.

Output Nearly Doubles

Altho rationing of most canned foods has been abandoned, production has nearly doubled over that of last season, Mrs. Emmett McShane, director of the center, reported.

Scheduled to operate Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays, the center also has been open Wednesdays and Saturdays recently to accommodate additional appointments. It operates Tuesday nights for benefit of business women. An average of 1,800 to 2,500 cans is processed each day.

Many families send canned goods to service men overseas, Mrs. McShane pointed out. Other reasons for increased interest in canning, she said, are bumper corn and peach crops and the installation of two electric juice extractors, which in 15 minutes perform work that would consume three hours at home.

Open Until Nov. 30

An approximate over-all total for the center since it opened July 16 is 27,000 cans of fruit, 30,000 cans of vegetables, 1,000 cans of chicken, and 12,000 cans of specialty products. The center expects to remain open until Nov. 30.

More than 20,000 tins of peaches, the most frequently canned product, already have been prepared. Cabbage, lima beans, and soup stock also are processed frequently.

The most unusual appointment, Mrs. McShane considered, was that of the woman who brought in four goats, already skinned. They were cut up and canned with favorable results, the director reported.

SEAMAN HOME; GIVEN 7 YEARS' FILM CONTRACT

Frank Wolfe, 22, Chicago seaman recruited for motion pictures while he was stationed on the west coast, has arrived in Chicago to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Wolfe, 7647 Bosworth av. He will report for work under a seven year contract with Twentieth Century-Fox films on Oct. 29.

A player with the Children's Civic theater when 15, Wolfe joined the navy in February, 1943. After a cruise on the aircraft carrier U. S. S. Bataan, he was stationed at the naval hospital at Balboa Park, Cal. A talent scout stopped the aviation radio man second class on a street in Hollywood and asked him to try a screen test.

Wolfe who received his discharge in California last Saturday is a 1941 graduate of Sullivan High school and attended Wabash college, Crawfordsville, Ind., where he directed a dance band for a year.

WHY SAVE NOW?

MANY MILLIONS of Americans are saving now. Americans have always saved more money per capita than any people on earth. That's why we have a higher scale of living.

But more millions are saving more money now than ever before. Cheerfully making sacrifices, taking large payroll deductions today, to make America safe tomorrow. If we continue this habit of thrift in the after-war years, our personal futures will be secure, too. Deposits Insured up to $5,000 per Depositor.

It's the small change we save now that makes the BIG change in our future.

RIDE HER, BOY! MORTON GROVE RODEO ON TODAY

Two Groups to Take Part in Show

A free rodeo with 20 classes of riding and many feature events will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Sportsman's Riding stables, Morton Grove. Joint sponsors of the 10th annual show will be George Jayne, owner of the stables, and the Sportsman's Saddle club.

Contestants, all amateurs, will come from schools, business firms, and professional offices to show their horsemanship and stunting ability. Trophies will be awarded winners of the men's and women's events in horsemanship, jumping, and the feature musical chair event.

Will Show Champion

Among attractions will be Pinky, blue ribbon winner of open jumping events in eight shows in Illinois this season. Owner is Nick Angelocus, 4434 North av., president of the club.

Frank M. Jayne Jr., 11, will put his horse, Jimmy, thru comedy paces. The youth aided his family in training the horse on Our Day farms, Elgin.

Nine head of Brahma cattle, shipped from Missouri, will challenge bronc busters Henry Woodrich, 5521 Forest Glen av., and George Singer, 1300 Argyle av. Edward Beck, 2038 North av., will take the "suicide ride," in which he will attempt to keep his seat on a fiery horse by holding to mane and tail.

Co-ed in Trick Riding

Trick riding, with its falls and drags, will be exhibited by a Northwestern university co-ed and a student of Loyola university. They are Miss Antoinette Grooss, 20, 9454 N. Hamlin av., and Neil Schmitz, 1423 Rascher av., respectively.

The entire membership of the two sponsoring groups will display their horsemanship, and ride grand march. Lawrence Ashbough, veteran member of the riding stables group and recently returned from 39 months overseas duty, will lead the march.

Announcer will be Tom Greenwood of Seneca [La Salle county]. Judges will be Si Jayne of Norwood Park and Alfred Hintt, Bowes Station, near Elgin.

People's Church

Dr. Preston Bradley will speak on "Two Things I Don't Believe" at 11 a. m. today at People's church, 941 Lawrence av.

FORT DEARBORN D.A.R. WILL DISCUSS WORK DONE FOR RED CROSS

Fort Dearborn D. A. R. chapter will hear a discussion of the organization's Red Cross service during the Spanish American War and World Wars I. and II. at 2 p. m. tomorrow in the Evanston Woman's club. Mrs. Gertrude Galloway, Illinois D. A. R. Red Cross chairman, will speak.

Mrs. Galloway

Mrs. Wendell C. Perry, regent, will preside at a business session. Mrs. John L. Browne, Red Cross chairman, will have charge of the program.

Mrs. John Schneider, social chairman, and a committee will serve tea.

SOCIAL AGENCIES COUNCIL OFFERS STUDY COURSES

Will Teach at N. U. and Hull House

Because the need for volunteer aids to serve in Chicago area social centers is so great this year, the Council of Social agencies will inaugurate two new training courses this week.

On Thursday night classes will open in the gymnasium of Scott hall on Northwestern university's Evanston campus. Arranged by the student Y. W. C. A. at Northwestern, the sessions also will be attended by the student Y. W. C. A. from the National College of Education, Evanston.

Both groups recognize the program will provide orientation for the many students who annually enlist for social service and settlement work as a part of their community service under the Y. W. C. A.

Hull House Schedule

Classes will be held from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m. on four successive Thursdays.

A six session course will open tomorrow night at Hull House, 800 S. Halsted st., with class meetings from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays for two successive weeks.

Conducted in the atmosphere of the workshop itself, the class of evening volunteers will tour Hull House during the opening meeting. Instruction will include a talk by Miss Elaine Switzer, program director for the settlement, and a practical introduction to handicrafts, games, and club leadership.

Plan Social Hour

The sessions will conclude with a social hour and entertainment planned and conducted by the volunteer students.

Registration for classes at Hull House and in the student courses at Northwestern university will be taken thru Wednesday at the Volunteer office, 343 S. Dearborn.

Install North Chicago Legion Post Officers

Joseph Nemanich has been installed as commander of the North Chicago American Legion post. Other officers are George H. Stevens and George A. Brown, vice commanders; Ben H. Newman, adjutant; Joseph Gilmore, finance officer; Henry A. Hansen, chaplain, and Fred A. Schustedt, sergeant at arms.

ELEVEN MORE JOIN FACULTY AT MUNDELEIN

To accommodate an enlarged enrollment and to provide for an increased student interest in science, Mundelein college has appointed 11 new faculty members. Registration of 1,035 students represents a 10 per cent increase over last year's figure. The senior class of 127 is the largest in the school's 16 year history.

New chemistry instructors are Alice Hudson, former faculty member of Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y., and Ethaline Hartge Cortelyou, former teacher in William Penn college, Oskaloosa, Ia., and the University of Tennessee at Knoxville.

Atom Bomb Project Advisor

Before coming to Mundelein, Mrs. Cortelyou was a technical adviser on the atomic bomb project at the University of Chicago.

Margaret Drummond, 1945 graduate of Mundelein, is a new biology assistant. The occupational therapy department, opened two years ago, has added to its staff Dorothea Packard Barr, who holds degrees from Milwaukee [Wis.] Downer college and served her internship in County and Michael Reese hospitals.

Language Instructor Named

Because of a sharp increase in the number of students majoring in Spanish, a new language instructor has been named, Florence Nardi, 1939 Mundelein graduate and former Chicago public high school teacher. She holds a master's degree from Northwestern university.

The Rev. William P. Murphy of St. Gertrude's parish, 1420 Granville av., and a graduate of St. Mary of the Lake seminary, Mundelein, is teaching senior religion. Other appointees and their departments are Sister Mary St. Ida, mathematics; Sister Mary Colette, secretarial and the Rev. John P. Downey, S. J., a Loyola university faculty member, philosophy.

Josephine Lafler, who holds a master's degree in physical education from Northwestern university, is fencing instructor in the drama department. Elizabeth Buddeke, graduate of Clarke college, Dubuque, Ia., is dietician in the tearoom.

LAUNCH GREAT BOOK READING ON NORTH SIDE

A program of social reading designed to create understanding of contemporary problems will get under way this week in five north shore communities.

Based on the reading and group discussion of great books, the courses will meet bi-weekly for 15 to 18 weeks. They are being presented under the joint sponsorship of the University of Chicago, Chicago public libraries, and suburban libraries and schools.

Thirty-two communities from as far north as Racine, Wis., and south to Gary, Ind., have joined in the co-operative adult education venture.

Two Openings Tuesday

The program will open Tuesday at Hild regional library, 4536 Lincoln av., and Sheridan library, 4869 Broadway, and is scheduled to start Thursday at Waukegan public library. Dates for courses at New Trier Township High school, Winnetka, and Glencoe public library are being arranged.

Stemming from the great book courses devised by Chancellor Hutchins and Mortimer J. Adler at the University of Chicago, required reading in the community courses will be works by Plato, Aristotle, James Madison, and Alexander Hamilton. These and other books providing insight and understanding of human aims, motives, and shortcomings will be analyzed during seminar discussions.

Limit Size of Groups

Each reading group, not exceeding 30 members, will be conducted by two discussion leaders who have been trained in discussion leadership and the use of classics in modern education by the University of Chicago.

No special educational qualifications are necessary to participate. All that is required is a willingness to read, engage in discussion, and face new ideas. Registrants, however, must be prepared to devote two to three hours weekly to reading the book under analysis.

Branch librarians will enroll students at participating libraries.

NBC ORCHESTRA WILL PRESENT NEW SYMPHONY

The Fifth Symphony of Don Gillis, production director of the Symphony of the Air hour, will be played for the first time by the NBC Symphony orchestra, under direction of Frank Black, over WMAQ-NBC at 5 o'clock today. Black also will conduct the orchestra in Richard Rodgers' "Carousel Waltz," Dinicu's "Hora Staccato" as arranged by Jascha Heifetz, and the Polka and Fugue from Weinberger's "Schwanda."

TOP STARS JOIN IN ARMY HOUR TRIBUTE TODAY

Bob Hope, Jack Benny, Katherine Cornell, Jane Froman, Dinah Shore, and other outstanding entertainers will appear on the Army hour over WMAQ-NBC at 4 p. m. today in a salute to the 4,378 performers who entertained American troops during the war. Special tribute will be accorded the 18 entertainers who died in the performance of their duty. The broadcast also will include talks by military officials and pickups from U. S. O. units overseas.

Dorothy Maynor on Sunday Evening Hour

DorothyMaynor will be soloist on the Sunday Evening Hour over WLS-ABC at 8 o'clock tonight. Miss Maynor will sing Cimara's "Stornellata Marinara," Beach's "Ah! Love but a Day," and Hageman's "Me Company Along." Accompanied by a chorus, Miss Maynor also will sing the Negro spirituals, "Steal Away" and "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray." Fritz Reiner will direct the orchestra in the Overture to "The Secret of Suzanne," by Wolf-Ferrari, a Symphonic picture from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," and other works.

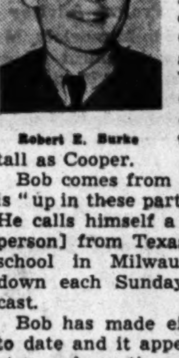
TEXAS KID WITH DRAWL MAKES HIT ON RADIO

Tall, Slim Redhead Has Way with Mike

BY LARRY WOLTERS

A new funny man is brightening the airways this season. He's that tall Quiz Kid from Texas, Robert Easton Burke, a redhead lad of 14 in cowboy boots with a voice that has some of the drawl of Gary Cooper and just a suggestion of Will Rogers. He's 6 feet 4 in his cowboy boots — that's at least as tall as Cooper.



Robert E. Burke

Bob comes from San Antonio and is "up in these parts under protest." He calls himself a D. P. [displaced person] from Texas. He's going to school in Milwaukee and comes down each Sunday for the broadcast.

Bob has made eight appearances to date and it appears that he may stay a long time. He knows the answers and he has personality that has listeners cheering from coast to coast. His voice is deep, deliberate, and slow. He has a 'ine sense of timing and a deep south accent that don't hurt him, either. He's the best informed kid on aviation that has blown into the Quiz Kids' classroom.

Because of his drawl listeners have asked about his nationality. He's got a lot of Irish blood in him, some English, and some German. He is a great-great-grandson of Rufus Eaton, who was Thomas Jefferson's private secretary. His family, you can see, has been around for some time.

Comment: Fred Allen, despite a year's absence, seems to have lost none of his old touch. Listeners commented that he was in fine fettle last Sunday, apparently undismayed by the fact he has a brand new supporting cast except for Minerva Pious.

Request performance, which bowed in last Sunday, isn't up to Command Performance, the overseas show for American troops. It lacks the surprises and humorous turns the service men's request show has had thruout the war years. Diana Lynn, Frank Morgan, Hoagy Carmichael, and Rudy Vallee will contribute to R. P. tonight at 9 over WBBM.

Looking back on the series broadcasts: The games were carried around the globe on the largest network ever put together. Mutual sent it to some 500 stations in the United States and Canada. The Armed Forces Radio service relayed it to 150 of its stations overseas and it was picked up thru sound systems by navy ships. American short wave stations beamed it abroad. The series also was sent to a Cuban network in Spanish and the games were reconstructed in French for several stations in Quebec.

Numerous fans commented that they missed the experting of Red Barber and Bob Elson. Bill Slater and Al Helfer, who did the play by play, are known mainly in New York where they broadcast local games the past season.

PHILHARMONIC WILL HIGHSPOT SCHELLING WORK

The New York Philharmonic orchestra, under the baton of Artur Rodzinski, will highspot Ernest Schelling's orchestral fantasy, "A Victory Ball," on WBBM-CBS at 3 p. m. today. The program also will include Beethoven"s Symhony No. 5 in C minor, the Prelude to Act 1. of Wagner's "Lohengrin," and Strauss' tone poem, "Till Eulenqpiegel's Merry Pranks."

"Mr. Pim Passes By" on Theater Guild Tonight

A. A. Milne's "Mr. Pim Passes By," a comedy concerning absent mindedness which almost wrecked a marriage, will be aired on the Theater Guild of the Air over WENR-ABC at 10 o'clock tonight. Arlene Francis and Leo Carroll will star in the presentation.

KERN OPERETTA SCHEDULED FOR THEATER OF AIR

"Music in the Air," Jerome Kern's operetta about Viennese life in the 19th century, will be offered on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network next Saturday from 10 to 11 p. m. Marion Claire, soprano, and Bruce Foote, baritone, will star in the presentation. Ruth Slater and Angelo Raffaelli will sing supporting roles.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak during the broadcast.

The Theater of the Air chorus and orchestra, directed by Henry Weber, will be heard in some of Kern's most popular tunes: "The Song Is You," "I've Told Every Little Star," "Love Was Born," "I'm Alone," "When Spring Is in the Air," and "There's a Hill Beyond a Hill."

CITIZENS SHOW HONORS ALUMNI OF DU SABLE

When the Citizens of Tomorrow salute Du Sable High school on W-G-N at 9:30 a. m. next Saturday, John E. Meegan, principal, will dedicate the broadcast to the 1,152 alumni of the school who have served in World War II. Philip Maxwell will conduct the program.

Gilda Burns, who is to be student star entertainer on the show, will sing "Vissi d'Arte" from Verdi's "La Tosca." A chorus, under direction of Mrs. E. M. Turley, will offer Schubert's "To Music" and Nageli's "A Faithful Shepherd."

Names of Reatha Herndon of Du Sable and Thomas K. Hostetler of Decatur [Ill.] Senior High school will be added to the program's student honor roll.

Gertrude Lawrence Is Hall of Fame Guest

When Gertrude Lawrence visits the Radio Hall of Fame on WENR-ABC at 6 o'clock tonight, she will sing "Limehouse Blues" and star in a scene from her autobiography, "A Star Danced." Paul Whiteman, his orchestra, and Martha Tilton are regulars on the show.

PARTNERS IN "LIVING" SINCE 1875

YOUR LIFE HAS BEEN OUR LIFE FOR 70 YEARS

We knew your family before you were born . . . and we've watched you grow up and raise your own family.

You see, it all started with your grandmother that day back in 1875 when she came to us for her bridal finery, and invited us to her wedding. That began our friendship. It wasn't long afterwards that your dad appeared on the scene—a lusty infant—and, thru the swift passing of time, we outfitted him for his confirmation, his graduation, his own wedding. . . . One day he came in to buy a sled. He had a brand new daughter, he said—and we chuckled a little at the things fathers buy for new daughters. That baby was you. Now, to us, it has seemed no time at all since that baby sled . . . your first party dress . . . your college wardrobe . . . and that beautiful, specially engraved watch our buyer selected for your engagement gift. Yet here you are today, selecting your own wedding dress and trousseau—ecstatically awaiting the return of that soldier boy to whom we've mailed so many remembrances from you.

Yes, that's the way it's been, all down these 70 years, as one generation follows another. We've made thousands of fine friends. We've shared your greatest moments. We've been happy at your weddings, loved your babies, been proud of your successes, and now are rejoicing as your boys (and ours) come home. More than you think, these moments touch our hearts. That's why we say, in one way or another, your life IS our life.

A Great Store in a Great City

We've never been fishing with Dad or camera hunting with junior, but we feel we have from listening to their stories.

Kitchens have changed a lot in 70 years. It used to be "a woman's work is never done" . . . now "a woman's work is done for her" . . . with reservations.

We're celebrating our 70th Anniversary. Be sure and see our State Street windows designed by the same artist who made the above sketches.

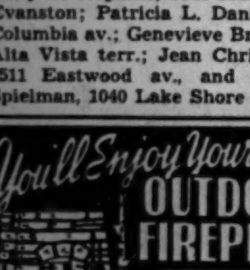
You'll Enjoy Your Own OUTDOOR FIREPLACE



Now it's EASY to have an outdoor fireplace in the privacy of your own grounds. Invite favorite friends to enjoy sizzling steaks broiled over glowing charcoal or wood . . . an early morning breakfast of pancakes and sausage . . . or an impromptu wiener roast!

And it's really simple to build with a Hancock SKELETON UNIT, which comes complete with genuine rolled steel frame and doors (not cast iron); and gray-iron fire-grate, cooking grate, hot plate and front. Build brick or stone masonry around it, as simple or elaborate as your taste dictates, from the detailed plans furnished for each basic design. Accessory units, such as ovens and barbecue spits, available for those who wish them. Hancock Outdoor Fireplace Units are solidly constructed, long enduring, are standard equipment in many leading park systems.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Oct. 15

Dutch bulbs have arrived in numbers. Among these are hyacinths, bulbous plants that are useful for growing in the home in pots or as bedding plants in the outdoor garden.

The bulbs do well when placed singly in special glasses that enable the roots to grow downward in water but which hold the bulb above water. It is essential that the root system be well formed as with tulips, crocus, and some other bulbs before bringing to the lighted window.

Grow a few pots of tulips or other bulbs that are available, for they will brighten up any window.

Tuesday, Oct. 16

If the ground is in condition to spade, be sure to turn it over now. By so doing so many insect pests will be killed thru the action of freezing and thawing. As the spading progresses, turn under a copious amount of humus in some form.

Decayed manure is about the best material for this purpose, but substitutes will do. Buy a bale of chopped alfalfa and straw and work some of it into each trench turned up.

Peat muck, decayed leaves, compost, which most gardeners never have, or any vegetable material will suffice. Humus is necessary because of its bacterial action.

Wednesday, Oct. 17

If an amaryllis bulb is bought, put it to the neck, and water to settle the soil.

Bulbs growing in the garden should be lifted and dried off, then stored in a dry, dark place until they show activitiy. If thrips appear when the plants are growing in the field suitable sprays may be used to control them.

Peonies still can be planted. Roses can be planted up to heavy freezing, but never allow the roots to be exposed to the air and dig the holes large enough to spread out the roots. Firm the soil around and between the roots.

Thursday, Oct. 18

Many rock garden plants can be planted this month. Clear out or reduce the plants that spread too rapidly, otherwise the slower kinds will be crowded out. Wait until the ground freezes before applying a mulch to hardy plants, bulbs, and others.

All fall planted stock is greatly benefited with a mulch. Parsnips and oyster plants are safe if allowed to stand outdoors all winter. They will be quite tender when lifted in spring.

If any hardy chrysanthemums are in flower try lifting and planting in pots for indoor use. They are among the easiest of all plants to transplant.

Friday, Oct. 19

Trees may be fed at this time. Use any recommended formulae or purchase the special plant food that is available for them.

Lay in a supply of potting soil for early spring use. Some plants will need transplanting and soil should be on hand.

Visit the grower who has a varied lot of plants and buy a few small ones to grow on in the window. Try some new begonia, for almost all kinds are ornamental even when in leaf.

Try a cyclamen, a few table ferns, and one of the best plants is the clivia or kaffir lily from South Africa.

Saturday, Oct. 20

Take care of the rubber plant, the screw pine, the Christmas cactus, the sansevieria. If the rubber plant grows quite large, cut it back in the spring when it resumes active growth, or discard all overgrown plants and replace with young, active plants.

CATHOLIC CLUB OF EVANSTON TO HEAR LECTURE

The Rev. John A. O'Brien, political science professor at the University of Notre Dame, will discuss "Heroes of Peace" before the Evanston Catholic Woman's club at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the clubhouse, 1560 Oak av., Evanston.

Mrs. J. D. Sharkey

Mrs. Joseph D. Sharkey, chairman of the civics committee which is sponsoring the program, will introduce Dr. O'Brien.

A social hour will conclude the meeting. Hostesses will be Mrs. Joseph Kearney, Mrs. Urban Lavery, Mrs. Leo Chambers, and Mrs. Joseph McGowan.

Woman's Benefit Group to Mark Silver Jubilee

The Woman's Benefit association, 209 S. State st., will mark its silver anniversary with a tea at 8 p. m. Wednesday in Links hall, 3539 Sheffield av. Mrs. Julia Bell, founder, will be present. Mrs. Anna Price, president, will be master of ceremonies.

INSURANCE MEN VISITING PLANTS IN VICTORY LOAN

North Shore insurance leaders who have joined the Fighting 400 squad to promote the Victory loan, opening Oct. 29, are making personal visits to industrial plants in the Chicago area. They are assisting labor and management in setting up individual campaigns.

Supplementing the pay roll savings plan, which is in effect in 4,079 plants, these individual drives are expected greatly to augment the achievement of the $608,260,000 county quota.

George T. Moore, manager of the labor division of the war finance committee of Illinois, and Earl J. McMahon, chairman of the Chicago and county labor committee, have been pledged full coöperation by organized labor for the drive.

AUDIENCE GETS ACTORS' LINES, LIGHT BULBS, TOO

'But the Show Must Go On,' Say Stagers

BY RUTH LOGAN

A seemingly sturdy chair may collapse under a sturdier actor; the entire stage and building may be darkened by blown fuses; footlights themselves may sail out into the startled audience, but the Deerfield Stagers aren't dismayed. It's all in a night's performance!

"Everything has happened to us," declared Mrs. John Derby, a charter member of the little theater group which will open its 10th season with Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes" at 8:15 p. m. Oct. 26 and 27 in Deerfield school.

Adept at Ad Libbing

In their decade before the footlights, the Stagers, whose membership has grown from 10 to 35, have become adept at creating costumes, designing scenery, scrubbing floors, and [especially useful] ad libbing!

"We have several actors who never are quite clear about their lines, but they have good imaginations," observed Mrs. Eldon Holmquist, who plays Regina in the current production. The period setting of the Foxes was designed by Mrs. Holmquist, as is most of the Stagers' scenery.

"Remember when we gave 'The Bat'?" recalled Mrs. Derby. "Somebody blew the fuses and the whole building went dark. But it didn't matter because everybody blew his lines, too. We all ad libbed and the audience didn't seem to mind a few added erie effects!

Curtain Now Closes

"And our first production!" she continued. "There was nothing humdrum about it. A table was pushed accidentally against the footlights and all the bulbs went flying out into the auditorium."

The curtain, which occasionally failed to close on schedule, once caused trouble too, members said, but there's a new one now.

In addition to a curtain that closes and 10 years of experience in playing everything from leading roles to backstage charwomen, the actors have their own stock of costumes and thus are independent of the contents of neighboring attics. Self-supporting since their organization as a young people's dramatic group of Deerfield Presbyterian church, the Stagers also arrange all lighting effects, scenery, and other props.

Give 3 Productions Yearly

They average three presentations a season—usually a comedy, mystery, and drama. In addition to the Hellman production, anniversary plays will include "Claudia" by Rose Franken and "Death Takes a Holiday" by Walter Ferris.

Kenneth Hunter, director, heads the committee to select plays. Assistants are James Russell, Mrs. Carl Ross, Hubert Kelley, and Mrs. Maurice Allsbrow. Mrs. Frederick Ritter, assistant director, is on the casting committee, headed by E. F. Nelson and composed of Hunter, James Tibbetts, and Mrs. Derby. Milton Merner has charge of scenery production. Mrs. James Tibbetts is president and Mrs. Harry Thomson is business manager. Headquarters of the group is the Deerfield school.

Boys' Club to Get New Home

An 80 year old cigar factory at 651 Willow st. will be razed to make way for an annex to the Lincoln Chicago Boys' club, 1725 Orchard st. The $100,000 edifice (portrayed by the architects) will provide recreational facilities for 2,500 youngsters from the near north side. The building, which will be completed by spring, also will house the first girls' department in a boys' club.

N. Shore Jewish Children Group Benefit Tomorrow

The North Shore auxiliary of the Jewish Children's bureau will sponsor a luncheon and fashion show at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow in the Mayfair room of the Blackstone hotel. Auxiliary members will serve as models. Mrs. Mitchel Stone and Mrs. Joseph Walzer are reservation chairmen and Mrs. Bernard A. Mitchell president. Proceeds will be used to care for more than 500 orphans.

Every Mother-to-be Should Wear A New-Lift
MATERNITY SUPPORT

DESIGNED FOR SCIENTIFIC PRE-NATAL CARE AND THE HEALTH OF THE YOUNG MOTHER-TO-BE Designed for young mothers who dread wearing a heavy, boned garment . . . this NU-LIFT MATERNITY SUPPORT combines all the comforts of the garments you normally wear with the support that is so vital during this important time. There is no binding or pressure because the weight is carried from the shoulders. Adjustable side laces and darts. This is a two-in-one garment that can be converted for post-natal wear by interchanging the front panel. Thus you will be assisted in a more rapid return to your normal figure by NU-LIFT MATERNITY SUPPORT. (It is recommended by leading obstetricians.)
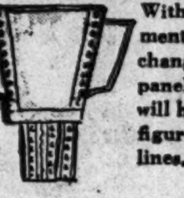
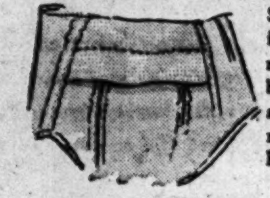
12.50
FOR POST-NATAL WEAR



With the above garment is an interchangeable front panel support that will help restore your figure to its former lines.
BETTER BODY BALANCE



Scientific inner band in back gives you restful comfort, helps avoid backache and allows you to maintain better body balance.
NU-LIFT PANTIE SUPPORT FOR GENERAL WEAR

It's new! Detachable and adjustable crotch with firm front panel for abdominal support and control. Lacer for adjustment, and soft back with inner supporting band. Excellent for post-natal, post-operative and sportswear . . . also general wear. Come in and try one on!

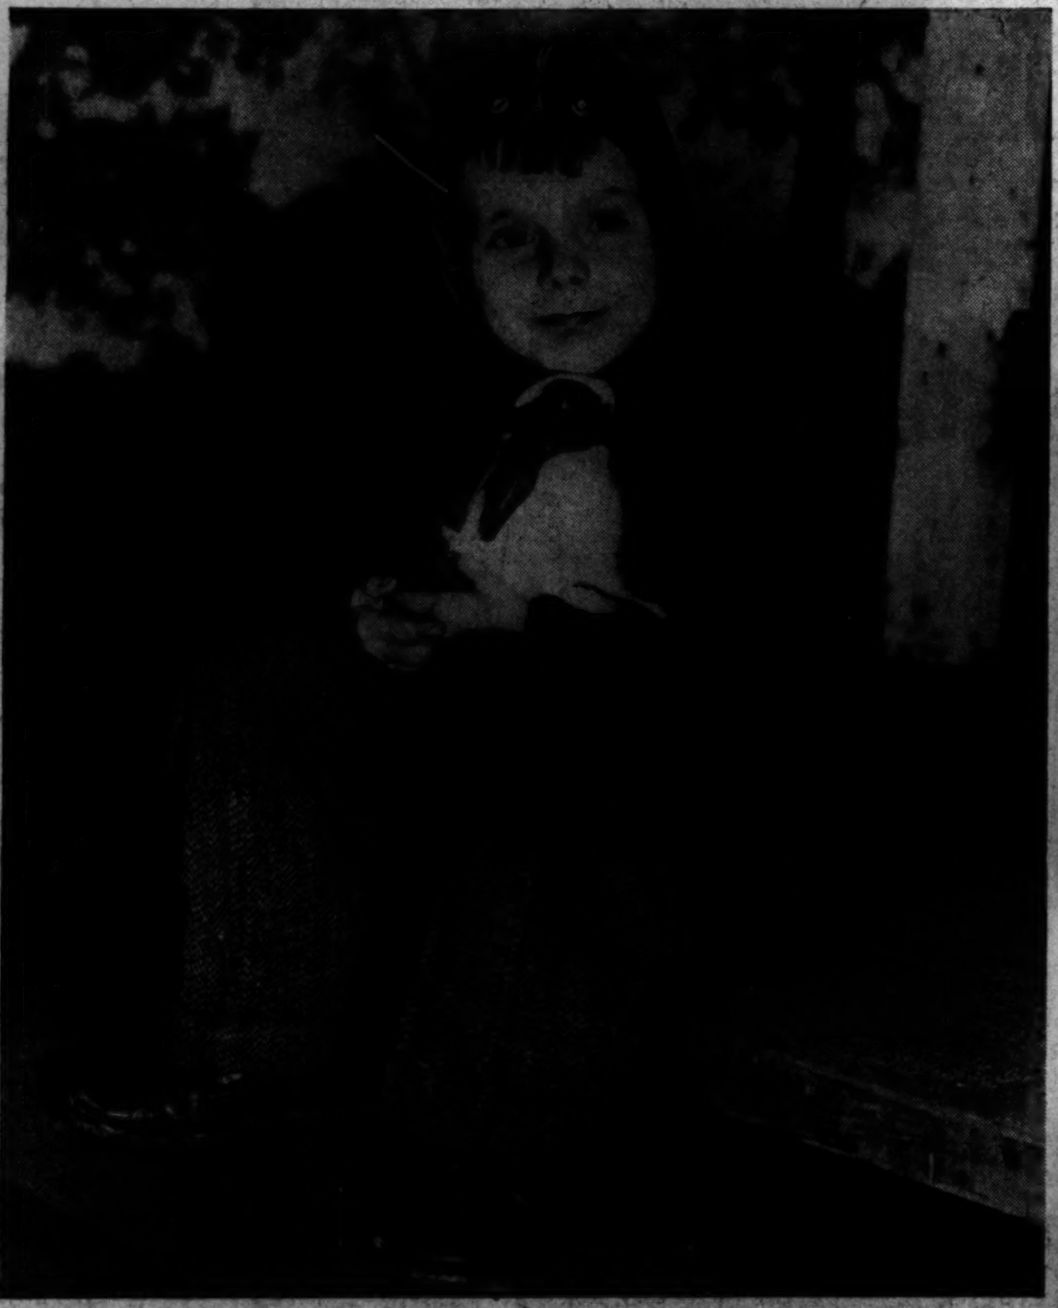
Younger Generation Expresses Hearty Approval of Tibbar Club Exhibition



While enthusiastic rabbit raisers milled around a recent Tibbar club show, young Jerry Malewicki, 8908 Houston av., tightly held a young Chocolate Dutch bunny belonging to Lloyd Ashpole, De Kalb, Ill., and wondered at all the excitement. The competition between owners for blue, red, and yellow ribbons caused many a heart to skip a beat. The club sponsoring the show (Tibbar is rabbit spelled backwards) is made up of men and women who raise rabbits as a hobby and who meet twice a month in the Hamilton park fieldhouse.

[TRIBUNE Photos]

Raising rabbits has become a family affair with the Broberg clan and every Tibbarite is acquainted with the Broberg bunnies. The two brothers, their wives, and children turned out 10 strong with a couple of cases of rabbits for the show. Members of the clan (left to right, seated) include Joan, Karen, David, Kristan, Mrs. Henry Broberg, and Elaine; (standing) Henry Broberg, Mrs. B. C. Broberg, B. C. Broberg, and Marjorie. Joan, Karen, and Marjorie are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Broberg, 1723 E. 85th st., while the parents of David, Kristan, and Elaine are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Broberg, 8309 Luella av.

Half asleep as usual, eight rabbits consented to show off eight of the 36 breeds represented at the show. Hunched up in routine bunny fashion (left to right) are Champaign D'Argent, New Zealand Red, Black Silver Martin, New Zealand White, Dutch, Flemish Giant, Himalayan, and Belgian hare. Rabbits are fed special rabbit pellets, no common old carrots and lettuce for them.

Two rabbit enthusiasts who specialize in raising the checkered giants breed are B. F. Temple (left), Gary, and H. C. Geary, 1618 E. 84th pl. To win a prize marking on nose, eyes, cheeks, and ears of their entries must be perfect. Geary, a police officer, has been a rabbit raiser for about three years and now has 50. Temple, a railroad machinist, also has about 50. His rabbit was one of those awarded a ribbon.

PULLMAN FREE SCHOOL WILL MARK 30 YEARS

Earliest Students to Attend Sunday

Students in the first class and original faculty members and employes will be among those attending the 30th anniversary of the opening of Pullman Free School of Manual Training, 250 E. 111th st., at 3 p. m. next Sunday. Urban G. Willis, principal, has announced parents of 18 alumni, killed in action, also will attend. A memorial plaque will be dedicated to the memories of the fighters.

Speakers will include Phillip Miller, president of the board of trustees and grandson of George M. Pullman, school founder; Francis M. Gunn, assistant to the president of Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing corporation; Sheldon W. Govier, clerk of the 1st district Appellate court; David Lofgren, commander of Roseland American Legion post, and Ald. Lindell [9th].

Legion to Be in Charge

Roseland Legion post will have charge of memorial exercises for the following alumni: Bruno J. Bednarek, son of Mrs. Margaret Bednarek, 309 E. 119th st.; William Bedzyk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Bedzyk, 10752 Langley av.; Walter A. Butkus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Butkus, 10512 Edbrooke av.; Willis R. Hillegonds, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hillegonds, 11729 Princeton av.; Raymond Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar R. Johnson, Oak Lawn.

Charles J. Kindberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kindberg, 9 E. 112th pl.; Anthony Krotiak, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Krotiak, 10730 La Salle st.; Harold P. Kuruzar, son of Louis J. Kuruzar, Blue Island; Stuart R. Loskill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Loskill, 11150 Wallace st.; Richard M. Napoli, son of Mr. and Mrs. Attilio Sartori, 11438 Calumet av.; Louis E. Nardi, son of Mr. and Mrs. Amedeo Nardi, 11932 La Salle st.; Arthur P. O'Leary, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur P. O'Leary, 7836 Cregier av.

Other War Heroes

Trevisan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christ Trevisan, 11417 Forrestville av.; Anthony Vandermark, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Vandermark, 104 W. 112th st., and Jacob Wondaal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Enneus Wondaal, 260 W. 106th st.

A memorial tablet with the heroes' names is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. O'Leary in honor of their son.

Pullman was opened in 1915 and since that time 8,000 students have been enrolled and 2,200 graduated from the four year course. Present enrollment is 525. The first two years of the course are general, but in addition to English, social studies, mathematics, and science, each boy receives instruction and practice in the drafting room, machine shop, electrical shop, and automobile shop.

Courses for Girls

After two years the student chooses the shop in which he wishes to specialize. If he chooses drafting he may take either architectural or mechanical drawing. During his third and fourth years he spends 4½ hours daily in vocational preparation for his chosen occupation.

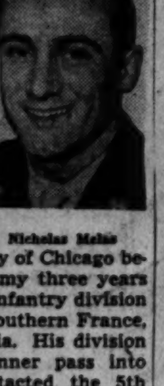
For girls, in addition to courses in general education, there are home economics, stenography, typewriting, bookkeeping, office practice, and filing.

Board members include David A. Crawford, vice president; Louis S. Taylor, secretary-treasurer; Sewell L. Avery, Charles A. Liddle, Emery T. Filbey, and Harriet Lowden Madlener, granddaughter of George M. Pullman.

South Side Art Group Will Hold Tea Today

The South Side Art association will hold a musical and tea at 3 p. m. today in the Windermere West hotel at the opening of the autumn exhibit of paintings by member artists. Speakers will be Col. John N. Gage and Mrs. Warren Lutton. George Burhop, baritone, and Hattie Krause, pianist, will entertain. Mrs. Albion Headburg, president, will preside.

WAR VETERAN ALUMNI OF TILDEN TECH WILL ATTEND PARTY FRIDAY



Nicholas Melas

When the social center at Tilden Technical High school, 4747 Union av., opens its series of weekly dances Friday night, Nicholas J. Melas, 1301 E. 47th st., will be one GI alumnus attending. The parties have been planned by the board of education for service men.

Melas, who was a scholarship student at the University of Chicago before entering the army three years ago, served with an infantry division of the 7th army in southern France, Germany and Austria. His division went thru the Brenner pass into Italy where it contacted the 5th army.

He wears the bronze star and the Purple Heart. Hoping to be discharged in a month, he intends to return to his studies at the university.

Most Birds Are Equipped with Feathers Now, Dick

The birds at the Jackson park sanctuary scarcely had time to meet their new boss, Richard Reichert, 731 W. 61st pl., when they had to leave for the south, but he feels it's probably just as well. Their absence will give him an opportunity to study up on them.

"O, I know a sparrow when I see one," he grinned, "but that's about all. The birds here at the sanctuary are all wild creatures and I probably would have done all the wrong things and scared them off."

Reichert came to the park about two months ago and shortly thereafter took his vacation. When he returned, armed with a couple of books on ornithology, the birds had gone. However, he hopes to be able to tell one species from the other by the end of the winter.

He Gets Around

Reichert has completed a unique triple play—from fishes to snakes to birds. Which is to say he started with the zoo in 1934 when the house was an aquarium. When the fish moved out and the snakes glided in three years later he stayed to take charge. And now, the birds.

"I didn't particularly care about snakes when I started," he said. "At that time jobs were rather scarce and I just made up my mind to like them."

Evidently a strong minded fellow, the former snake man is always ready to reminisce about his life among the serpents. He finally grew to like them. "Whenever we were expecting a shipment of new reptiles," he recalled happily, "it was all kind of exciting. We never knew just what we were going to get and were prepared for anything. Here at the sanctuary the birds come and go as they please."

Struck by Python

Reichert insists he's no snake authority. However, he found his handling of snakes determined

CITIZENS SHOW SPOTLIGHT ON DU SABLE HIGH

Students to Honor Six War Dead

Du Sable High school will be saluted on the Citizens of Tomorrow show over W-G-N from 9:30 to 10 a. m. Saturday. The program will be recorded at 1 p. m. Wednesday in the school auditorium, 4934 Wabash av., before guests.

John E. Meegan, principal, will pay tribute to the 1,152 students who were in the military service from Du Sable. Six students were killed. They are: James Lee Black, steward's mate 1st class; Corp. John C. Hicks; Lt. Raymond McEwen, Pvt. Carl Nelson, Pvt. Lonnie Smith, and Pvt. John Yoind.

Will Honor Scholars

Philip Maxwell of THE TRIBUNE who will be master of ceremonies, will add the names of two more students to the honor roll: Reatha Herndon, 4824 South Park way, and Thomas K. Hostetler of Decatur [Ill.] Senior High school.

Reatha has been an honor student for three and a half years, is president of the senior class, and chairman of the Junior Red Cross. Hostetler has a straight A average. He is editor of the newspaper and was elected president of the Champaign district, State Association of Student Councils.

Gilda Burns, 16, 4751 St. Lawrence av., will be the student star entertainer. A lyric soprano, she will sing "Vissi d'Arte" from Puccini's "La Tosca." Members of the Special Voice chorus will sing Schubert's "To Music," and Nageli's "A Faithful Shepherd Is My Lord." E. M. Turley will direct.

Name Quiz Entrants

Taking part in the quiz will be James Andrews, Raymond Harth, Reatha Herndon, Rose Locker, Virgil Matthews, and Karon Watson. Cheerleaders will be Louis Baker, James Seay, Frances Suthern, Doris Purvis, Marjorie Williams, Eleanor Wright, and Lillian Young.

Guests who have been invited to witness the recording of the show include: Marjorie S. Jayner of Walker Beauty college; Irvin C. Mallison of the board of education; John Johnson, editor of Negro Digest; John Sengstacke, publisher of the Chicago Defender, and Ald. De Priest [3d].

OPEN HYDE PARK CHURCH GROUP'S SEASON TONIGHT

PETER RABBITS WRIGGLE NOSES FOR THE JUDGES

Tibbar Club Submits 250 for Blue Ribbons

Few persons ever think of that plain drug store variety of bunny as being any particular breed, other than stuffed. But there are those who can recite the various brands of rabbits right off. "He represents a New Zealand White, judging by his soft white coat, large pink eyes, and long pink ears," they would say.

With such observers it is nearly always safe to assume they are members of the Tibbar club. Tibbar [a mystifying title until read backwards], a club for and of rabbit raisers, has members all over Chicago and in outlying towns. They meet twice monthly in the Hamilton park fieldhouse. Their slogan seems to be: "It's better meat than chicken." At least that's what they keep repeating to any one sceptical about the joys of raising rabbits.

250 "Furries" Entered

About 250 rabbits and their owners gathered recently for a one day show. Tibbarites arrive from miles around, each with a car load of bunnies, youngsters, or both. It was a great day for the rabbits. If aware of it, however, they took great pains not to let it be seen as they were weighed in for the judging, stared at, handled, and generally roughed up by both judges and proud owners. With typical bunnylike placidity they nibbled, dozed, and wiggled their noses hopefully at one another thru cage doors.

Competition was keen. Not between the cottontails, but between their owners. Many an animal was a disappointment merely because an ear wasn't quite right, his marking was slightly off, or he had a lazy tail. Red, blue, and yellow ribbons were awarded by two professional judges who grimly ploughed their way thru mounds of rabbit fur.

Some Are Specialists

Many of the hobbyiest raise several breeds. Others prefer to specialize. Proudly awaiting his chance with a judge was Frank Heinish, 5931 Maplewood av., carrying Rocky a 7 months heavy-weight chinchilla rabbit—fine eating and with a pelt more valuable than those of his brothers. Police Officer H. C. Geary, 1618 E. 84th pl., exhibited his prize checkered giant. A white animal with patches of gray and black on his nose, eyes, cheeks and ears, the entry was one of several Geary has raised in the last three years.

Tho the show was pronounced a success, members stated they were looking forward to one of the club's three day shows of pre-war quality.

Plans for such a show will be made at future Tibbar meetings, said B. C. Broberg, 1723 E. 85th st., president. Other club officers include John Feltus, 2548 W. 109th st., vice president; George Donnelly, 10705 Albany av., secretary, and Norman Thorne, 6550 Laflin av., treasurer.

LODGE TO FETE CHARLES LOUER, 70 THIS WEEK

The Adolf Kraus lodge of B'nai B'rith will honor Charles H. Louer, 1755 E. 55th st., on his 70th birthday with a testimonial dinner Wednesday night in the Covenant club, 10 N. Dearborn st.

C. H. Louer

Louer's long time service with the lodge was culminated in his chairmanship of a drive thru which $150,000 worth of recreational facilities recently were presented to Vaughan General hospital.

Gen. Percy J. Carroll, commanding officer of the hospital, will deliver a tribute following which the names of 250 new B'nai B'rith members will be presented by Ben R. Samuels. A program will be presented by members of Vaughan hospital.

There's a new dramatic emphasis on silhouette, a lavish use of fur, that sweeps the cloth coat to a new peak of fashion importance. Deep, deftly shaped paths of fur for borders on hem and sleeve, tightly drawn waists, gently curved shoulders and deep-set sleeves contrive to give it that "costume look" that is setting the trend now and for many seasons to come.

TELL PROGRESS OF COMMUNITY AND WAR FUNDS

Drive Off to Good Start, Director Asserts

With $1,000,000 established as the city goal of house to house and small business divisions of the Community and War Fund's Victory campaign, south side volunteers will seek to raise $266,800, it has been announced by Walter P. Paepcke, general chairman.

The women's special gifts division, the men's special gifts division, and the city division are seeking the balance of the $13,040,700 metropolitan quota in the combined appeal for war related relief and home front charities which opened Oct. 1.

Get Off to Good Start

First returns from all divisions indicate campaign workers have succeeded in their early solicitations. The initial gifts group of the city division has raised $5,603 in the first few days from individuals and business firms on the south side. Morton Bodfish is chairman of the initial gifts group and James R. Sterling is chairman of the entire city division.

A volunteer team of high school girls is helping to solicit south side homes. Miss Alice Loeb, 4812 Kimbark av., is chairman. Members of her team include Sandra Cross, 5019 Blackstone av.; Phyllis Monson, 4201 Drexel av.; Jean Curry, 5039 Blackstone av.; Beverly Clark, 5477 Kimbark av.; Gwynne Roeseler, 4514 Woodlawn av.; Nancy Shepul, 1352 E. 48th st.; Rosemary Watkins, 5835 Blackstone av., and Beverly Merrill, 1517 E. 57th st.

List Local Quotas

Miss Loeb, who organized her friends into a soliciting group, received encouragement in her endeavors from her mother, Mrs. Hamilton Loeb, a member of the women's special gifts division, and her father, a member of the men's special gifts division.

Ready for Citizens Show

How do you rate at the sink?

Test for yourself this easier way to clean pots and pans

The Speed Test will amaze you! Here's how to test S.O.S. for speed: take your blackest pot, crusted with food and scorches. Dip the edge of an S.O.S. pad in water. Start scouring. Rinse. Check the time! Amazed? Sure—so quick, so easy! Really, there's no other cleanser quite like S.O.S. It works like magic, like lightning!

The Ease Test will open your eyes and empty that sink! Here's how: let greasy pans pile high—then reach for S.O.S. Watch it cut through grease. Notice how the oval shape gets into dark corners. See how the soap in the pad helps those sturdy S.O.S. fibres make light of heavy sink work. Easy? Yes, very easy!

The Shine Test is the happy ending. Remember S.O.S. cleans, scours and polishes in one simple operation. So test the shine—by holding those newly cleaned pans up to the light. Wonderful? And surefire. That's why women tell us S.O.S. is their favorite, first-choice cleanser for pots and pans. Test it yourself—do!

Every Mother-to-be Should Wear a New-Lift

MATERNITY SUPPORT

DESIGNED FOR SCIENTIFIC PRE-NATAL CARE AND THE HEALTH OF THE YOUNG MOTHER-TO-BE

Designed for young mothers who dread wearing a heavy, boned garment . . . this NU-LIFT MATERNITY SUPPORT combines all the comforts of the garments you normally wear with the support that is so vital during this important time. There is no binding or pressure because the weight is carried from the shoulders. Adjustable side laces and darts. This is a two-in-one garment that can be converted for post-natal wear by interchanging the front panel. Thus you will be assisted in a more rapid return to your normal figure by NU-LIFT MATERNITY SUPPORT. (It is recommended by leading obstetricians.)

FOR POST-NATAL WEAR

With the above garment is an interchangeable front panel support that will help restore your figure to its former lines.

BETTER BODY BALANCE

Scientific inner band in back gives you restful comfort, helps avoid backache and allows you to maintain better body balance.

NU-LIFT PANTIE SUPPORT FOR GENERAL WEAR

It's new! Detachable and adjustable crotch with firm front panel for abdominal support and control. Lacer for adjustment, and soft back with inner supporting band. Excellent for post-natal, post-operative and sportswear . . . also general wear. Come in and try one on!

PARTNERS IN "LIVING" SINCE 1875

YOUR LIFE HAS BEEN OUR LIFE FOR 70 YEARS

You see, it all started with your grandmother that day back in 1875 when she came to us for her bridal finery, and invited us to her wedding. That began our friendship. It wasn't long afterwards that your dad appeared on the scene—a lusty infant—and, thru the swift passing of time, we outfitted him for his confirmation, his graduation, his own wedding. . . . One day he came in to buy a sled. He had a brand new daughter, he said—and we chuckled a little at the things fathers buy for new daughters. That baby was you. Now, to us, it has seemed no time at all since that baby sled . . . your first party dress . . . your college wardrobe . . . and that beautiful, specially engraved watch our buyer selected for your engagement gift. Yet here you are today, selecting your own wedding dress and trousseau—ecstatically awaiting the return of that soldier boy to whom we've mailed so many remembrances from you.

Yes, that's the way it's been, all down these 70 years, as one generation follows another. We've made thousands of fine friends. We've shared your greatest moments. We've been happy at your weddings, loved your babies, been proud of your successes, and now are rejoicing as your boys (and ours) come home. More than you think, these moments touch our hearts. That's why we say, in one way or another, your life IS our life.

We knew your family before you were born . . . and we've watched you grow up and raise your own family.

We've never been fishing with Dad or camera hunting with junior, but we feel we have from listening to their stories.

Kitchens have changed a lot in 70 years. It used to be "a woman's work is never done" . . . now "a woman's work is done for her" . . . with reservations.

We're celebrating our 70th Anniversary. Be sure and see our State Street windows designed by the same artist who made the above sketches.

TEXAS KID WITH DRAWL MAKES HIT ON RADIO

Tall, Slim Redhead Has Way with Mike

BY LARRY WOLTERS

A new funny man is brightening the airways this season. He's that tall Quiz Kid from Texas, Robert Easton Burke, a redhead lad of 14 in cowboy boots with a voice that has some of the drawl of Gary Cooper and just a suggestion of Will Rogers. He's 6 feet 4 in his cowboy boots — that's at least as tall as Cooper.

Robert E. Burke

Bob comes from San Antonio and is "up in these parts under protest." He calls himself a D. P. [displaced person] from Texas. He's going to school in Milwaukee and comes down each Sunday for the broadcast.

Bob has made eight appearances to date and it appears that he may stay a long time. He knows the answers and he has personality that has listeners cheering from coast to coast. His voice is deep, deliberate, and slow. He has a fine sense of timing and a deep south accent that don't hurt him, either. He's the best informed kid on aviation that has blown into the Quiz Kids' classroom.

Because of his drawl listeners have asked about his nationality. He's got a lot of Irish blood in him, some English, and some German. He is a great-great-grandson of Rufus Eaton, who was Thomas Jefferson's private secretary. His family, you can see, has been around for some time.

Comment: Fred Allen, despite a year's absence, seems to have lost none of his old touch. Listeners commented that he was in fine fettle last Sunday, apparently undismayed by the fact he has a brand new supporting cast except for Minerva Pious.

Request performance, which bowed in last Sunday, isn't up to Command Performance, the overseas show for American troops. It lacks the surprises and humorous turns the service men's request show has had thruout the war years. Diana Lynn, Frank Morgan, Hoagy Carmichael, and Rudy Vallee will contribute to R. P. tonight at 9 over WBBM.

Looking back on the series broadcasts: The games were carried around the globe on the largest network ever put together. Mutual sent it to some 500 stations in the United States and Canada. The Armed Forces Radio service relayed it to 150 of its stations overseas and it was picked up thru sound systems by navy ships. American short wave stations beamed it abroad. The series also was sent to a Cuban network in Spanish and the games were reconstructed in French for several stations in Quebec.

Numerous fans commented that they missed the experting of Red Barber and Bob Elson. Bill Slater and Al Helfer, who did the play by play, are known mainly in New York where they broadcast local games the past season.

Gertrude Lawrence Is Hall of Fame Guest

When Gertrude Lawrence visits the Radio Hall of Fame on WENR-ABC at 6 o'clock tonight, she will sing "Limehouse Blues" and star in a scene from her autobiography, "A Star Danced." Paul Whiteman, his orchestra, and Martha Tilton are regulars on the show.

ON SHORT WAVES

The North American service of the BBC from London includes the following programs today. The frequencies [in megacycles] employed after 4:15 p. m. are: 11.93, 9.58, 9.82, 6.11, 7.26, 9.51. 5:45 p. m.—News. 7:30 p. m.—Radio newsreel. 8:15 p. m.—Sunday services. 9:10 p. m.—Tomorrow's London Papers.

Bank credit is never costly

THAT bank loan-rates are the lowest is common knowledge, but there's another important reason why a bank loan is never costly.

Bank loans are made only where they help firms and individuals to improve their economic position. Such loans are sound for the borrower and for the bank, and the cost to the borrower is extremely low relative to the increased business and profits they make possible.

South East National's liberal credit policy, by helping our customers, has helped this bank to grow to its present substantial size. Do not hesitate to discuss your credit requirements with us.

BUSINESS MEN LINE UP PLANTS IN VICTORY LOAN

62 South Siders Among Fighting 400 Group

Sixty-two south siders are members of the Fighting 400 squad, a group of leaders in the insurance field who are visiting industrial plants in city and suburbs to assist labor and management in individual drives of the Victory Loan drive which will open Oct. 29.

Supplementing the pay roll savings plan which is effective in 4,079 plants in the Chicago area, these individual drives are expected to help achieve the $608,260,000 quota set for the county.

Dorothy Maynor on Sunday Evening Hour

DorothyMaynor will be soloist on the Sunday Evening Hour over WLS-ABC at 8 o'clock tonight. Miss Maynor will sing Cimara's "Stornellata Marinara," Beach's "Ah! Love but a Day," and Hageman's "Me Company Along." Accompanied by a chorus, Miss Maynor also will sing the Negro spirituals, "Steal Away" and "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray." Fritz Reiner will direct the orchestra in the Overture to "The Secret of Suzanne," by Wolf-Ferrari, a Symphonic picture from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," and other works.

You'll Enjoy Your Own OUTDOOR FIREPLACE

Now it's EASY to have an outdoor fireplace in the privacy of your own grounds. Invite favorite friends to enjoy sizzling steaks broiled over glowing charcoal or wood . . . an early morning breakfast of pancakes and sausage . . . or an impromptu wiener roast!

And it's really simple to build with a Hancock SKELETON UNIT, which comes complete with genuine rolled steel frame and doors (not cast iron); and gray-iron firegrate, cooking grate, hot plate and front. Build brick or stone masonry around it, as simple or elaborate as your taste dictates, from the detailed plans furnished for each basic design. Accessory units, such as ovens and barbecue spits, available for those who wish them. Hancock Outdoor Fireplace Units are solidly constructed, long enduring, are standard equipment in many leading park systems.

St. Ignatius High Will Mark 75th Year with Fete

St. Ignatius High school, 1076 Roosevelt rd., will observe its 75th anniversary with a fall festival and homecoming Saturday in the auditorium at Ashland av. and Van Buren st. The event is sponsored by the St. Ignatius Fathers' club. Joseph Rollheiser, 8051 Oglesby av., is president.

The school, conducted by Jesuits, was founded in 1870 by the Rev. Arnold Damen.

Alumni include eight bishops and 25 monsignori. Ten former teachers are serving as chaplains in the armed forces with 1,700 former students. There are 57 gold stars on the service flag hanging in the school.

South siders serving on the anniversary committee include Tim McKeough, 8231 Eberhart av.; Art Worrell, 7921 St. Lawrence av.; Edgar Wolfe, 8422 Luella av.; R. A. Wright, 7715 Cornell av.; Herb Eck, 7812 Jeffery av.; John O'Connor, 1753 E. 72d st.; Ed Kemper, 919 E. 44th st.; Earl McLaughlin, 7711 Euclid av.; Norman Hempel, 7822 Saginaw av., and Phil Collins, 2666 E. 73d st.

PLANNING GROUP ORGANIZES FOR CIVIC PROGRAM

Leonard Ball, 6016 Indiana av., recently was elected president of the West Washington Park Planning council. Sponsored by the Chicago Urban league under a five year plan of civic education among Negroes it numbers residents of the area from 55th to 63d sts., between State st. and South Park way.

Other new officers include: Mrs. Emma B. Mathis, Howard Stevenson, Mrs. Carolyn Miles, and Mrs. Carrie J. Lee, vice presidents; Mrs. Ruby L. Petty, Lawrence Abernathy, and Mrs. Eugenia Trapp, secretaries; Mrs. Laura Dillard, treasurer, and the Rev. B. C. Hedrick, chaplain.

The council will study community problems thru special committees. These will include health, housing, law enforcement, streets and alleys, zoning, recreation, beautification, and transportation. More than 300 persons have pledged their support to the program.

Also being organized by the league is a council for the Abbottsford area which extends from 51st to 55th sts., from State st. to South Park way, and from 47th to 51st sts. on Langley av. Plans are being made by Mildred LaTouche, league worker at the Parkway Community house, 5120 South Park way. Residents of the Langley av. territory are organizing for neighborhood improvement under William H. Jones and Mrs. Verda Lewis. They meet in the home of Andrew Williams, 4727 Langley av.

PHILHARMONIC WILL HIGHSPOT SCHELLING WORK

The New York Philharmonic orchestra, under the baton of Artur Rodzinski, will highspot Ernest Schelling's orchestral fantasy, "A Victory Ball," on WBBM-CBS at 3 p. m. today. The program also will include Beethoven"s Symhony No. 5 in C minor, the Prelude to Act I. of Wagner's "Lohengrin," and Strauss' tone poem, "Till Eulenqpiegel's Merry Pranks."

Bergen-McCarthy Guest

Hildegarde will be a guest on the Edgar Bergen-Charlie McCarthy show over WMAQ-NBC at 8 o'clock tonight. Music and song furnished by Ray Noble's orchestra and Anita Gordon, teen-age vocalist.

WINNING OF BIRD FRIENDS AIM OF SNAKES' FRIEND

whether they bit or not. "You must be careful and not get excited for that agitates the reptile," he advised. "Snakes seem to be a lot like people, they have different temperaments. They seem to be in a better mood sometimes than at others.'

"One time," he recalled, "When Dr. Young [Dr. Floyd S. Young, since retired] was still at the zoo he and I were trying to lift a python by means of a leather rope-like affair. The leather was wet and we still aren't sure what happened, but we think it slipped. Quick as a wink the snake struck, knocking me down and tearing Dr. Young's clothes. That was about the only time I had any real trouble."

If snakes like a calm, steady person they must have been fond of Reichert, for it is hard to visualize his being upset over anything.

Life for him at the sanctuary probably will seem rather dull at first, what with no shipment of snakes coming in, or persons working with him. There's just the park district dog, Teddy.

He keeps busy however, setting out in his battered row boat twice a day to feed what birds are left. [It takes, by the way, 80 loaves of bread and close to 200 pounds of grain each week to keep the birds happy in the summer.] Tho the sanctuary is left to grow rather wild, it does take some keeping up. Between that duty and studying his new bird books Reichert hopes soon to become acclimated.

NBC ORCHESTRA WILL PRESENT NEW SYMPHONY

The Fifth Symphony of Don Gillis, production director of the Symphony of the Air hour, will be played for the first time by the NBC Symphony orchestra, under direction of Frank Black, over WMAQ-NBC at 5 o'clock today. Black also will conduct the orchestra in Richard Rodgers' "Carousel Waltz," Dinicu's "Hora Staccato" as arranged by Jascha Heifetz, and the Polka and Fugue from Weinberger's "Schwanda."

Ingrid Bergman, Larry Adler with Benny Gang

Ingrid Bergman and Larry Adler, who accompanied Jack Benny on a U. S. O. tour overseas last summer, will join the Benny gang on WMAQ-NBC at 7 o'clock tonight when it entertains at the Santa Barbara redistribution center before men who have just returned from Jap prisons. Larry Stevens will sing, "If I Love You."

FIT-TESTED* FASHIONS

in beautiful Gold Cross Shoes

Fit-Tested? Yes, just as if they were made over "living" lasts. Before any Gold Cross style is introduced, hand-made originals are worn... walked in... for weeks. Checked daily, by our designers for gapping, wrinkling, binding. Changed. Checked again. Until the kind of fit is assured that millions of women tell you they find only in beautiful Gold Cross Shoes... America's famous Fit-Tested footwear.

Growing Up, Under Guidance of Child Care Laboratory, Can Have Its Rewards

"And the little bear said, 'This porridge tastes just right.'" Lorraine Bates, 18, 431 N. Central Park av., reads the story of "The Three Bears," a nursery school favorite, to Susu Feldman, 2. Lorraine, who was graduated last June, is one of the students trained in the child care and development laboratories in Lucy Flower Technical High school, 3545 Fulton blvd. As part of their home economics course, senior students study the development of children from babyhood thru their 10th year, making observations in the laboratories conducted by the school.

Helping Carol Silverman, 3, into her coat before the morning play period is Virginia Accetturo, 16, 1038 S. Racine av. Virginia, senior student, plans to enter nurse's training after she is graduated.

Lunch time is a favorite hour for nursery school youngsters. Rita Staller, 3, is an interested spectator as Shirley Manchen, 17 (left), 1137 N. Ridgeway av., and Josephine Gayton, 17, 1412 Polk st., prepare the children's noon meal in the kitchen adjoining the child care laboratories.

Absorbed in the adventures of Jack the Giant Killer which are being read by Marion Thorup, 17, 2912 North av., are (left to right) Melvyn Goodman, 3; Henry Pevener, 3, and Michele Graver, 3.

Melvin Goodman, who is 3, but who has not yet outgrown his liking for dolls, goes for a stroll with a toy perambulator. During free play periods children are encouraged to make use of the many toys provided by the nursery school.

PARKS BECKON TO THOSE WHO WANT A HOBBY

Offer Varied Fare on West Side

If you would like to make puppets, weave cloth, carve coconut shells, or make musical instruments in your spare time this winter you can find expert instruction and a group of hobbyists who will share your enthusiasm in a park fieldhouse near your home.

Activities ranging from art to xylophone playing have been scheduled in 13 west side parks. Hobbyists can utilize long winter evenings painting, sketching, modeling clay, making rugs, working metal, or tooling leather. For both amateur and experienced craftsmen there will be classes in boat building, cabinet making, model airplane building, basketry, bone carving, kite making, Indian crafts, photography, and basketry.

The athletically inclined can work off excess energy in badminton, table tennis, fencing, volleyball, basketball, tumbling, wrestling, weight lifting, boxing, handball, swimming, water polo, or archery.

Games in Fieldhouse

Game rooms also are provided in the fieldhouse for chess, checkers, Chinese checkers, mah-jong, bridge, pinochle, billiards, pocket billiards, and other activities.

Rooms and auditoriums are also available for community and club meetings. In almost every park there will be dance nights for square and folk dancing, ballroom dancing, and jive. Instructors are available in many parks for beginners and for those wishing to learn special types of dancing.

Fieldhouse facilities at Austin Town Hall park, 5610 Lake st., include a gymnasium, assembly hall with stage equipment for dramatics, music, dancing, social and community events; natatorium, game room, eight clubrooms, public library, three kitchens, craft shop, photographic dark room, toy center, and rifle and archery ranges. Activities will be conducted under direction of Fred Bosserman, park supervisor.

Offer Arts and Crafts

Supervisor Leonard Sterling is in charge at Garfield park. Facilities include a refectory building with assembly hall and row boat landing; a separate building with inclosed roque courts; a fieldhouse for dancing, dramatics, music, gymnastic activities, arts and crafts, games, and club meetings. There is also a large conservatory with propagating and other horticultural facilities.

At Columbus park, 500 S. Central av., hobbyists will find an archery range, craft shop, toy center, games room, seven clubrooms, two assembly halls for dancing, dramatics, and music; a refectory, and gymnasium. E. J. Weiner is supervisor.

List Other Centers

Other west side centers sponsoring activities and their supervisors are Altgeld park, 515 S. Washtenaw av., A. J. Kovach; Douglas park, 14th and S. Albany av., Clyde Walther; Dvorak park, 1119 Cullerton st., Umberto Marchese; Franklin park, 1409 S. Kolin av., George Smith; Harrison park, 18th and Wood sts., Arthur Butler.

Also LaFollette park, 1333 N. Laramie av., Charles Dean; Shedd park, 3660 23d st., William Del Frank; Sheridan park, 910 S. Aberdeen st., William Steinhaus; Stanford park, 650 14th pl., William Johnson; Union park, 1501 Randolph st., L. J. Mosley.

Hold 7 Mile Hike Today in Morton Arboretum

A seven mile hike, under the auspices of the recreation commission, will be held in Morton arboretum today. Hikers will leave Union station via the Burlington railroad at 11 a. m. and will arrive at Lisle at 12:29 p. m. They will return to Chicago on the 5:41 p. m. train.

Pick Elmhurst Diamond Queen of Homecoming

Elected by the student body, Miss Ruth Lammars will be queen of the diamond jubilee homecoming of Elmhurst college to be held for three days starting Friday.

Coronation of Miss Lammars will take place between halves of the football game Saturday afternoon between Elmhurst and Wheaton colleges. She also will be honored at the jubilee dance Saturday night in the gymnasium.

Members of the court, also elected by the students, are Miss Shirley Haas, Miss Marjorie Locke, Miss Marie Hoefer, Miss Frances Wentzel, Miss Peggy Albrecht, and Miss Winifred Schultz.

The celebration will open with an alumni banquet Friday night at which E. J. Goebel of Chicago, an alumnus, will speak. Other Friday night events will be a torch parade, a pep rally and bonfire, and an original revue.

Saturday, in addition to the homecoming football game, there will be an alumni all-star football game at 10 a. m., an open house at 11 a. m., an alumni tea at 4 p. m., and a dance at night.

The Rev. Armin Haeussler of Evansville, Ind., a member of the college board of trustees, will speak at 11 o'clock Sunday morning at the homecoming service in St. Peter's Evangelical and Reformed church. A musical will be given at 3:30 p. m.

The homecoming will be the first major event of Elmhurst's 75th anniversary year, 1946. The college, founded in 1871, is planning an expansion program to mark its diamond jubilee.

These Ducks Have Newest Tip on Travel

BY ONEY FRED SWEET

Corn for breakfast has more appeal than the call of the wild for 250 ducks that have decided to make Batavia their home. Canada summers and Alabama winters have lost all lure for the reformed migrants, and Batavians continue to enjoy their guests now in the third year of their stay.

Three years ago at the suggestion of Andy Connley the Batavia Sportsmen's league bought 10 hens and four drakes from near-by farmers and placed the birds in a scenic spot above the Fox river bridge in the heart of the suburb.

Breakfast Served Promptly

Russell Clark of the police department and L. A. Parre, city engineer, took it upon themselves to feed corn to the 14 fowls promptly at 7:30 o'clock each morning. Townsfolk, old and young, tossed down bits of bread at odd hours from the bridge. Wings of the 14 were clipped to make sure they would not succumb to inherited wanderlust, but the displaced mallards indicated their preference for self-preservation to any opportunity for seeing the world.

The next spring 30 ducklings were hatched in secret nests on the river banks. The oldsters may have handed down adhered to advice. Anyhow the second generation showed no tendency to fly away. The few that ventured beyond the city limits during the hunting season only served as a bad example for the flocks that swam up and down the placid river as far as the dam a block north of the bridge and a block south of the bridge to the tiny islands of the sanctuary.

Ducks Enjoy Varied Diet

The islands are just across from the city plant that houses the police and fire departments and other municipal offices. At the customary morning hour, the ducks waddle ashore and their leader enters the pumphouse to quack a request of Engineer Parre. Then Parre rations the corn which Policeman Clark has purchased as an activity of the Sportsmen's league.

For the rest of the day the ducks are at leisure to forage for themselves and supplement their diet with bugs, minnows, and crabs. At sundown the drakes with their green and black heads and curled up tails form a line across the river with

LYONS TWP. HIGH TO STAGE SATIRE ON KNIGHTHOOD

"The Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," a play adapted from Mark Twain's satire on the days of knighthood, will be presented Friday and Saturday nights by the junior class of Lyons Township High school, La Grange. Miss Josephine Allen will direct.

Marjorie Hansen will take the role of the queen who dominates the good natured but somewhat discouraged King Arthur [Gordon Nordberg].

Others in the cast include Beverly Gilson, Dale Grimes, Shirley Olsen, Julia Bart, Robert Butz, Jackie Wright, Mary Lou Ruthy, Harold Harding, Walter Lynch and Connett Jones.

Glenbard Choir

The Glenbard choir will sing eight numbers tomorrow at the fall meeting of the Du Page valley division of the Illinois Educational association in the school auditorium.

Villa Park Raise Chickens? In War, Yes—Peace, NO!

Villa Park has joined the list of west suburbs seeking reconversion in the matter of chicken raising. According to complaints brought before the village board, many nonkeepers of poultry feel that during the war time food shortage crowing roosters in the early morn were not to be criticized. Now, they crave a return to undisturbed hours of sleep.

Among anti-chicken raisers who have contacted Mrs. Marion Noble, village clerk, by phone, one insisted the crowing in his neighbor's yard started as early as 3 a. m.

Forest Park took the initiative some weeks ago by instructing chicken raisers to get rid of their fowls by Jan. 1. A village ordinance restraining poultry raisers had not been enforced during the war.

Theodore F. Ashford, village attorney of Villa Park, explains that while there is at present no village ordinance banning chicken raising, unless it is declared a nuisance, such an ordinance could be drafted.

Alfred A. Hinkelman, Villa Park village president, has arranged for a pro and con discussion of the chicken raising subject at the village board meeting tomorrow night.

Brookfield Library

Ruth Louise Oliver will give dramatic sketches on "Well Known Women of the Bible" Friday afternoon at a meeting of the Friends of the Library in the Brookfield library.

Austin Sisterhood

The Sisterhood of the Austin Jewish Community center will hold a membership tea at 1:30 p. m. Oct. 24 in the home of Mrs. Clara Kapson, 5800 Adams st.

VILLA PARK CUB PACK DENS TO VIE FOR TROPHY

A loving cup will be presented to the den having the largest number of parents in attendance in the fall roundup of Cub Scout pack 31 of Villa Park Tuesday night at Community Congregational church, Villa Park.

Parents are being invited to see the bobcat initiation, applaud the achievement awards, and enjoy the den sketches.

Pack 31 will go on a hike thru Thatcher woods Saturday.

'OLD LAWNDALE' IS HISTORICAL GROUP'S TOPIC

The Lawndale Crawford Historical society will hold its 13th annual meeting at 7:30 p. m. Thursday in Toman library, 4005 27th st. Adelor J. Petit will talk on "Memories of Old Lawndale."

On display will be an exhibit of historic relics, some of them more than a hundred years old. A group of pictures of old settlers also will be shown.

Mrs. Nellie Hempenius, secretary, will lead the club in singing old songs.

MARK JUBILEE OF ST. IGNATIUS HIGH SATURDAY

Festival to Salute 75 Years' Service

Across dirt streets and board sidewalks the first students of St. Ignatius High school made their way in 1870. With Latin and algebra books tucked under their arms, they were the forerunners of a long line of Chicago youth educated by Jesuit teachers in the last three-quarters of a century.

Saturday evening St. Ignatius will celebrate its 75th anniversary at a fall festival and homecoming in its auditorium at Ashland blvd. and Van Buren st. The event is sponsored by the St. Ignatius Fathers club of which Joseph Rollheiser is president. Bernard J. McDonnell, an alumnus and the father of two St. Ignatius students, is general chairman.

Fire Threatens School

Founded by the Rev. Arnold Damen, S. J., a well known Jesuit missionary of his day, St. Ignatius High school was designed to meet the need of higher education for five parochial schools under Father Damen's jurisdiction.

A short time after the completion of the school and the near-by Holy Family church, the Chicago fire, beginning just a few blocks to the east, threatened to destroy his plans. At the time Father Damen was in the east giving a mission. Members of the school faculty sent him a telegram informing him of the danger to the property.

Immediately upon receiving the word, Father Damen made a vow and bound his successors at Holy Family church, to keep seven lights always burning before the shrine of the Madonna if his school and church were spared from the fire. Today visitors to the church find the tapers constantly burning before the altar of Our Lady of Perpetual Help in the east transept of the church.

1,700 Alumni in War

During its 75 years, St. Ignatius has sent forth hundreds of prominent alumni. Among those who have been graduated from the school are eight bishops and 25 monsignori.

During the recent war, 1,700 alumni were in military service. Among these were 10 former teachers who served as chaplains. In the service flag of the school there are 57 gold stars for Ignatians killed in combat.

Robert Scelze and John O'Connor head the program committees. Frank Von Driska is in charge of hall arrangements, Joseph Gladstone of purchasing, Joseph Murphy of printing, and Harold Koch designing. Charles Owens, Jules Huffman, and Jack Kenealy are in charge of tickets.

Many on Committees

West siders serving on arrangement committees include Edward R. Kelly, 5239 Monroe st.; John J. Welcome Home 35 War II. Vets in Glen Ellyn

Thirty-five men in uniform attended the first of a series of "welcome home" programs for Glen Ellyn's World War veterans recently held in Acacia hall, Glen Ellyn. More than 300 Legionnaires, their families, and friends attended. Plans were made for holding the parties quarterly. Should Acacia hall prove to be too small as more and more service men return home, the programs will be held in Glenbard High school.

Sponsors of the programs is the Glen Ellyn American Legion post of which Theodore Prescott is commander. Assisting in the arrangements is Capt. Clayton Bentley, veteran of World War II., and second vice commander of the post.

It has become the policy of the Glen Ellyn post to elect some of its officers from the ranks of the returning service men with the idea of eventually turning the organization over to them. Besides Capt. Bentley, other World War II. veterans are William Freeman, finance officer; Robert Galloway, sergeant at arms, and Donald Bush, county delegate.

Returned veterans were encouraged to express their ideas for a permanent war memorial in Glen Ellyn. Suggestions included a stadium, a new wing for the library, a new village hall with a clubhouse, and memorials in the parks. A majority of the speakers favored living memorials that would provide college scholarships.

BERWYN ANTIQUE MART TO SHOW 150 YEAR DRESS

Sixth Event to Open for 3 Days Tuesday

A dress 150 years old and weighing 50 pounds will be among the exhibits at the sixth annual Berwyn Antique and Hobby show Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday in Piper house, Berwyn. The show is sponsored by the Woman's Society for Christian service of the Berwyn Methodist church.

Mrs. H. L. Blout is general chairman of the show at which antique dealers from the Chicago area will have booths. Mrs. Earl Spink is president of the woman's society, the 10 circles of which will have charge of the exhibits.

Circle chairmen are Mrs. Thomas Card, dolls; Mrs. Russell Kiser, quilts; Mrs. T. J. Thomas handcraft; Mrs. V. J. Phillips, old books and pictures; Mrs. A. B. Van Sciver, service men's pictures and souvenirs; Mrs. P. H. Stoneham, hats and shawls; Mrs. Roy Barnhart, antiques in general; Mrs. Paul Whittenberg, hobbies; Mrs. Henry Awalt, Girl and Boy Scout exhibits, and Mrs. E. S. Davidson, table settings.

Scouts to Be Guests

The Methodist church group of Camp Fire Girls will have handmade articles for sale. Guests at the show will be a troop of Boy Scouts from Summit dressed in Indian costumes. Scoutmaster Raymond Douglas will direct the Summit Scouts in Indian ceremonials and dances.

In the room set aside for war souvenirs and photographs, Mrs. Robert Nemecek will have a table containing articles brought from Hawaii.

Piper house will be decorated with displays by florists in the west area and autumn leaves. In the lobby there will be a huge map of the United States in which each state will be represented in varicolored postage stamps.

Hours of the show will be from 11 a. m. to 10 p. m. daily. Lunch and dinner will be served by the society's circles. Tea will be served afternoons by young women of the church.

87 Years of Fashions

Thursday night a style show will be held in the gymnasium where fashions from 1858 to the present will be shown. Children will model clothes from Berwyn shops. Music for the style show will be under the supervision of Mrs. Wallace Tate. During the three days, there will be songs at intervals by girls of the church, and music from an old time phonograph that has been labeled "grandpa's juke box."

Window displays in several Berwyn stores will call attention to the annual show. There will be spinning wheels and old lamps, and one of the stores will devote an entire window to a living room of the Victorian era.

Hostesses under the chairmanship of Mrs. Virgil Stephens will be Mrs. H. W. Clark and Mrs. J. W. Steiner, Tuesday; Mrs. Ray Brown and Mrs. Paul Teeter, Wednesday, and Mrs. B. D. Morland and Mrs. Carl Wright, Thursday.

SOCIAL AGENCIES COUNCIL OFFERS STUDY COURSES

Will Teach at N. U. and Hull House

Because the need for volunteer aids to serve in Chicago area social centers is so great this year, the Council of Social agencies will inaugurate two new training courses this week.

On Thursday night classes will open in the gymnasium of Scott hall on Northwestern university's Evanston campus. Arranged by the student Y. W. C. A. at Northwestern, the sessions also will be attended by the student Y. W. C. A. from the National College of Education, Evanston.

Both groups recognize the program will provide orientation for the many students who annually enlist for social service and settlement work as a part of their community service under the Y. W. C. A.

Hull House Schedule

Classes will be held from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m. on four successive Thursdays.

A six session course will open tomorrow night at Hull House, 800 S. Halsted st., with class meetings from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays for two successive weeks.

Conducted in the atmosphere of the workshop itself, the class of evening volunteers will tour Hull House during the opening meeting. Instruction will include a talk by Miss Elaine Switzer, program director for the settlement, and a practical introduction to handicrafts, games, and club leadership.

Plan Social Hour

The sessions will conclude with a social hour and entertainment planned and conducted by the volunteer students.

Registration for classes at Hull House and in the student courses at Northwestern university will be taken thru Wednesday at the Volunteer office, 343 S. Dearborn.

$196,900 GOAL SET FOR W. SIDE WAR FUND DRIVE

West side goal of the Community and War Fund's city division has been set at $196,900, to be raised in house to house and business solicitations, Walter P. Paepcke, general chairman, has announced. The combined appeal for war related relief and home front charities has an over-all goal of $13,040,700.

Since the beginning of the drive, the initial gifts group of the city division has raised $15,650 on the west side. Morton Bodfish is chairman of the group and Kenneth Putman, Elmhurst, is co-chairman.

In the suburban division Wayne township is the first west side community to complete solicitation. Under chairmanship of Donald Auble, Bartlett, Wayne exceeded its goal by subscribing $1,550. Edward S. Reque and Henry Van Acker, both of Wayne, are secretary and treasurer, respectively.

The women's special gifts division has raised more than 70 per cent of its goal of $330,000 from women thruout Chicago. Mrs. Otto Madlener and Mrs. Philip D. Block Jr., are co-chairmen.

156 HIGH SCHOOL SENIORS AID IN TENDING 8 TOTS

Child Care at Flower a Benefit to All

Sunshine streamed thru the windows on her golden curls as she busily took blue cups and saucers from a diminutive maple cupboard and laid the table for tea. The tea was imaginary, but the pleasant expression on her guest's face did not waver, for the guest was a flaxen haired, wide-eyed doll. The tiny hostess was Susu Feldman, 2, and the scent was a typical one in the child care laboratories of Flower Technical High school, 3545 Fulton blvd. Here youngsters of nursery school age are cared for by high school students under the direction of experienced teachers.

Each day's activites are scheduled carefully. Children arrive at 9 a. m., and for an hour engage in free play which ranges from keeping house to making sand castles or jouncing up and down on a see-saw. At 10 a. m. they have a snack of fruit or vegetable juice, then adjourn to the playground until about 11:15.

Rest Before Lunch

A story period follows indoors, after which the tots rest for 10 minutes before lunch. The noon meal is prepared by home economic students in a compact kitchen adjoining the playroom and is served on round tables scaled to the size of the lunchers.

After eating it's nap time. When the charges awake about an hour and a half later, they have another play period until their parents call at 3 p. m.

In preparation for their work as leaders in the child care laboratories, Flower High school students take a series of carefully integrated courses. These include classes in dietetics, home nursing, and home management.

Stress Guidance, Discipline

About 156 senior students participate in the program, coming to the laboratories at scheduled intervals to help lead activities. Altho the physical development of the youngsters is stressed, even greater emphasis is placed upon guidance, habit training, and wholesome discipline.

Often teachers and pupils are called upon to deal with emotional difficulties or problems of maladjustment. Most of the difficulties present themselves during the children's initiation into nursery school activities.

A little boy of 2, for example, was accustomed to dominate his home scene by tantrums. On his first day at school he resisted every friendly overture. When lunch time came he refused to eat and punctuated his refusal by sweeping all the dishes off the table.

Tantrums Disappear

Apparently he expected his tantrum to create something of a furor. When the teachers met his display of temper calmly he was somewhat taken aback. Later, as he began to feel security in his surroundings and to learn what to expect in his daily schedule, the tantrums disappeared and his naturally sunny disposition asserted itself.

Registration in the nursery school is limited to eight children. Approximately 50 youngsters are on the waiting list. In some instances mothers enroll children as soon as they are born to insure them a place in the school.

Child care and development courses are included in the curriculum of the home economics department of which Miss Helen McGann is supervisor. Miss Zoe Deo is director of the laboratories and also introduces advanced courses. Miss Grace E. Moore teaches a number of the classes. Miss Mary C. Gillies is principal of the school.

Children Have Their Ups and Downs

Mark Perlow, 3 (left), and Richard Steigmann, 3, enjoy the ups and downs of a nursery school seesaw, while Elizabeth Sutherland, 18, 310 E. 32d st., supervises their play. Elizabeth will be a social worker after she completes her education.

Church in Riverside to Hold Square Dances

With Guy Colby, radio dance caller, giving the first lesson, square dance classes for adults will start tomorrow night in the parish house of St. Paul's Episcopal church, Riverside. Classes will be held for 10 Monday evenings. The committee in charge represents St. Monica's guild and the Men's club of the church. Mrs. F. W. Peters, active for a number of years in conducting the young people's dance groups sponsored by the guild, also has arranged the classes.

FRIENDSHIP CLUB WILL DISCUSS KNUTE ROCKNE

The contribution of Knute Rockne to American sportsmanship will be discussed by Miss Dorothy Dewey at a meeting of the Youth Friendship club at 8 p. m. Tuesday in Garfield park recreation center, 100 N. Central Park av. The club, organized early this month, is a cultural and social group. Meetings are open to all west side youth.

Tuesday Club

Mrs. I. S. Haney will be hostess at a meeting of the Tuesday club at 1 p. m. Tuesday in First United Presbyterian church, 641 S. Oak Park av., Oak Park.

Dorothy Kahn Club Holds 1st Fall Meeting Tomorrow

The first fall meeting of the Dorothy Kahn club for Crippled Children will be held at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Standard club, 320 Plymouth ct. Entertainment will follow a dessert luncheon. The club, whose president is Mrs. B. J. Cohn, sponsors the therapeutic day nursery for spastic children at Michael Reese hospital.

St. Ignatius Mothers Club Will Hold Party Tuesday

A dessert bridge party will be given by members of St. Ignatius Mothers club at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday in Damen hall, 1076 Roosevelt rd. Mrs. Frank Doyle, chairman, will be assisted by Mrs. Joseph A. Graber and Mrs. Joseph G. Murphy, cochairmen. Mrs. Walter Keefe is president of the club. The Rev. Bernard A. Foote, S. J., is moderator.

MATERNITY SUPPORT

DESIGNED FOR SCIENTIFIC PRE-NATAL CARE AND THE HEALTH OF THE YOUNG MOTHER-TO-BE

Designed for young mothers who dread wearing a heavy, boned garment . . . this NU-LIFT MATERNITY SUPPORT combines all the comforts of the garments you normally wear with the support that is so vital during this important time. There is no binding or pressure because the weight is carried from the shoulders. Adjustable side laces and darts. This is a two-in-one garment that can be converted for post-natal wear by interchanging the front panel. Thus you will be assisted in a more rapid return to your normal figure by NU-LIFT MATERNITY SUPPORT. (It is recommended by leading obstetricians.)

FOR POST-NATAL WEAR

With the above garment is an interchangeable front panel support that will help restore your figure to its former lines.

BETTER BODY BALANCE

Scientific inner band in back gives you restful comfort, helps avoid backache and allows you to maintain better body balance.

NU-LIFT PANTIE SUPPORT FOR GENERAL WEAR

It's new! Detachable and adjustable crotch with firm front panel for abdominal support and control. Lacer for adjustment, and soft back with inner supporting band. Excellent for post-natal, post-operative and sportswear . . . also general wear. Come in and try one on!

KEEP ANTI-FIRE WEEK WINDOWS IN BROOKFIELD

Colonial Age Apparatus Displayed in Village

Window displays arranged by the Brookfield fire department will be continued today for the benefit of any one in the village who may not have been sufficiently indoctrinated by the campaign carried on during National Fire Prevention week.

Two of the displays show a huge cigaret and a match of proportionate size—matches and smoking having proved to be the community's greatest cause of property destroying blazes. A third display is of modern fire fighting equipment. A fourth deals with antique flame extinguishing apparatus. In the latter collection is a wooden water main said to have been laid by George Washington and a leather water bucket reputedly used by Benjamin Franklin when he was Philadelphia's fire chief.

Hear Plea in Churches

All week a streamer painted by members of the Brookfield department has been strung across Prairie av. just south of the Burlington station. Churches of the suburb announced the observance of the week from the pulpits. Drills were held in the schools which also conducted poster and essay contests. Red placards warning of fire dangers were attached to water hydrants in the three parts of the village—Central Brookfield, Hollywood, and Congress Park.

In the message delivered by Boy Scouts to the householders, the department pointed out that 90 per cent of fires is entirely preventable and that they all stem from shortcomings and carelessness.

"Remember," home owners were warned, "a fire isn't something that just happens to the other fellow. You may have one, too. In reporting a fire, be sure and give street and house number and the nearest street intersection."

$5,040 Loss in 1944

Members of the Brookfield department's committee for fire prevention week observance were Fred McDowell Jr., acting chief, chairman, Lt. Frank Hawes, Engineers Walter Bruns and Wilbert Langele, and Pipemen Oscar Johnson and Stanley Land.

McDowell reported that property, buildings, and contents exposed to fire in Brookfield in 1944 totaled $303,510. The loss on the property involved amounted to $5,040 or a per capita loss of 46 cents. There were 135 fires in 1944 from all causes.

Leading causes were the same as in past years. Matches and smoking caused 13 fires; overheated and defective chimneys, 12; electrical, 10; stoves and furnaces, 12; petroleum and its products, 6; rubbish and litter, 7; spontaneous combustion, 8; hot ashes and open fires, 5, and all other causes, 62.

Fiance Discharged

BEVERLEE JONES

Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Jones, 10 S. Mason av., announce the engagement of their daughter, Beverlee, to Harold J. Karneffel, son of Mrs. Martha Karneffel, 2826 N. Natchez av. Miss Jones is a graduate of Austin High school. Her fiance, who has returned to civilian life, served aboard the U. S. S. Enterprise.

120 AT MORTON HIGH IN VISUAL AIDS SECTION

Under direction of Bohumil Mikula, 120 students are enrolled in Morton High school's visual aids department. Within the department is a group known as the Movie Makers, trained to take motion pictures.

Before Munich, several members of the movie group toured Russia and Czechoslovakia showing pictures of the United States. They returned with scenes of foreign lands.

Students in the department volunteer their work hours. They are taught responsibility, punctuality, care of property, ethical obligations, art, and the science of motion picture operations.

Careless Smokers Cause Fires

ELGIN WILL FETE ITS CIVILIAN WAR GROUP WORKERS

Gov. Green will speak at Elgin's testimonial luncheon Tuesday noon in the Elgin Masonic temple honoring the community's war time selective service and ration boards and WMC labor-management committee members.

The luncheon is being sponsored by the civic events committee of the Elgin Association of Commerce of which Maj. Dudley W. Nash is chairman, in conjunction with the Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions, and Cosmopolitan clubs. Army and navy officers will be present to express the thanks of service men. Men and women of the city have been invited to attend.

Quote Letter to Guests

The letter of invitation to the guests of honor reads:

"During the war you have rendered a distinct service to your fellow citizens of Elgin and to your country. It has been necessary in war time for public spirited citizens to accept the responsibility for service as members of the selective service boards, the ration boards, and the labor management committee of the war man power commission.

Laud Work Done

"In all those services it has been necessary for you who accepted the responsibilities, to carry out federal regulations that affected the liberties of a free people.

"We know that this has not been an easy task, but we do know it has been fairly done, and that the community is deeply appreciative of the service you have rendered."

Volunteers Sought by Red Cross for Hospital Work

A plea for day time volunteer staff assistants at Vaughan General and Hines Veterans' hospitals has been issued by the Red Cross. Stenographers and typists are needed for recording claims, taking letters, and typing case histories. Recruits are needed also to operate information desks. Applications will be accepted at Red Cross headquarters, 529 S. Wabash av.

PTA AT SUMNER WILL SEE MOVIE ON WEDNESDAY

Dr. Mary Stephens, child psychologist, will speak at 1:15 p. m. Wednesday before Sumner PTA in the school. Members also will view the motion picture, "The Mortons Make Some Changes." First graders will hold a model assembly. Refreshments will be served during the social hour.

Mason—Mason PTA will meet at 1 p. m. Tuesday in the school. Mrs. Frank Suchomel, president, will preside at the meeting, which will follow a tour of the school.

Mrs. Margaret Bauman, principal, will speak. Community singing will follow. Mrs. Howard Peterson, program chairman, will present a membership playlet, "Billy Gets His Ma to Come to PTA." Participants will include Mrs. Joseph Margolis, Mrs. William Malmborg, Mrs. John Babor, Mrs. Frank Suchomel, and Mrs. Henry Yech.

Mrs. Herman Blum, ways and means chairman, will present plans for a party Nov. 7. A special committee will also report on plans for a Halloween party for pupils. Mrs. M. J. Tlusty, Mrs. Haine Saposnik, and Mrs. James Sramek will serve refreshments at the social hour.

Emmet—Mrs. Olga Contorer, membership chairman, will present a playlet, "Before and After PTA," before Emmet PTA at 1 p. m. Tuesday in the school. Taking part will be Mrs. Leo Stepkin, Mrs. Rose Glick, and Mrs. Contorer.

La Grange Infant Welfare Group Aids Fund Drive

Members of La Grange center of the Infant Welfare society of Chicago have been given the responsibility for supplying captains for the La Grange and La Grange Park Community chest drive. Twenty-five members of the group have become captains. All other members are soliciting. The goal of this year's drive is $37,500. Mrs. Warrick Robinson is president of the La Grange welfare organization and a member of the chest advisory board.

3 DAY MEETING TO OPEN OCT. 23 IN WEST SUBURB

Preparations are being made by the First Congregational church of La Grange to play host Oct. 23, 24, and 25 to several hundred delegates attending a joint meeting of the American board and the midwestern regional division of Congregational Christian churches.

In making plans for receiving the guests L. P. Warner has been appointed chairman and T. A. Morris Jr. vice chairman of the general committee. Other members of the general committee are Mrs. O. A. Heppes, F. S. Lynn, Mrs. H. W. Schroeder, Miss Myra Stewart, Charles H. Vial, Mrs. R. C. Wylie, and the Rev. Thomas L. Crosby.

Tom Morris is coördinator of three committees under group one, which includes Arch Sessions, who will arrange for meeting places; Julian How, transportation, parking, and information booth, and E. T. Leavitt, publicity.

Mrs. J. F. Mangold is coördinator of group two, with Mrs. Randall Cooper chairman of the hospitality committee, which will arrange for sleeping accommodations and breakfasts for out of town delegates. Other leaders in the group are C. H. Glashagel, reception, and Mrs. H. B. Knowlton and Mrs. O. A. Heppes, meal arrangements.

W. H. Prickett will be coördinator of group three, with Mrs. P. J. Hartsuch chairman of the committee on personnel and information. Other chairmen in the group are Mrs. R. C. Llewyn, music; Miss Emma Keller, decorations, and Fred Battey, finance.

the mottled hens and mop up on insect life on the stream's surface.

Ninety ducks survived last winter, selecting a spot above the bridge where the current of the river is too swift to freeze. Last spring 200 eggs were hatched. There were some casualties, but a total of 250 now survives.

The Females Are Noisy!

The tamed ducks may be visited by some of their wild brethren before snow flies. Last fall a big flock, hitting south from Canada in V-shaped formation, swooped down to hold conference but were gone again next morning. Perhaps the so-called dumb species now so thoroly a part of the Batavia scene discouraged competition for the corn.

Employes of the Batavia Body company, located near the river bridge, feed some of the ducks. They have learned that it is the hens that make the most noise, and that the drakes are shedding their fine feathers for the winter.

At times the ducks fly as high as a thousand feet above the steeples of the town. Occasionally a drake and a hen will soar away together. But it is only the unusually restless that fails to return to a paradise where the hunter's itching trigger finger is stayed. It is only thru hearsay that the younger generations know of Canada and Alabama. As long as the corn lasts they stick to Batavia.

STAR AWARDED RIVERSIDE YANK KILLED IN ACTION

Word recently was received from the war department by Erich Krueger of Riverside, informing him that by direction of the President, the bronze star medal had been posthumously awarded to his son, Pvt. Burt T. Krueger of the armored infantry. The citation in part said:

"For heroic achievement on Jan. 8, 1945, in the vicinity of Herrlisheim, France, Pvt. Krueger volunteered for a seemingly suicidal patrol to neutralize enemy positions that were stopping the company's advance. He then aided in the capture of several prisoners who were the first to be taken in the vicinity of Herrlisheim. He was wounded by enemy sniper fire while returning with these prisoners. These wounded later resulted in his death."

He was credited with courage and daring in volunteering for a dangerous mission.

VETS OF WAR II. TO BE SCHOOLS' GUESTS FRIDAY

Veterans of World War II. will be guests of the board of education at 15 high school social centers Friday evening. Supt. Johnson has announced that returned service men will be admitted without charge provided they are in uniform or wear their discharge buttons.

"Hello" cards and victory hats will be distributed to guests during a grand march. A song for GI's, with words written especially for them, will be part of the program.

West side centers at which parties will be held are Austin High school, 231 N. Pine av.; Farragut High school, 2345 S. Christiana av., and Medill High school, 1326 14th pl.

Ducks Drop in for Breakfast at Batavia

Cunningham is cochairman of the party.

GLENBARD BOARD GETS PORTRAIT OF PRINCIPAL

Presentation of a portrait of Fred L. Biester, principal of Glenbard High school, recently was made by A. M. Glahn, president of the board of education, by the graduating class of 1945.

Antonin Sterba, the painter, attended the unveiling which was planned by the Glenbard student council under direction of Miss Ruth G. Ely.

Sterba, now conducting classes at the American Academy of Art, has won the gold medal of honor at the Art Academy of Chicago and the Mrs. Frank G. Logan portrait award.

NEWSPAPERS put you ON BUSY STREET

PARTNERS IN "LIVING" SINCE 1875

YOUR LIFE HAS BEEN OUR LIFE FOR 70 YEARS

You see, it all started with your grandmother that day back in 1875 when she came to us for her bridal finery, and invited us to her wedding. That began our friendship. It wasn't long afterwards that your dad appeared on the scene—a lusty infant—and, thru the swift passing of time, we outfitted him for his confirmation, his graduation, his own wedding. . . . One day he came in to buy a sled. He had a brand new daughter, he said—and we chuckled a little at the things fathers buy for new daughters. That baby was you. Now, to us, it has seemed no time at all since that baby sled . . . your first party dress . . . your college wardrobe . . . and that beautiful, specially engraved watch our buyer selected for your engagement gift. Yet here you are today, selecting your own wedding dress and trousseau—ecstatically awaiting the return of that soldier boy to whom we've mailed so many remembrances from you.

We knew your family before you were born . . . and we've watched you grow up and raise your own family.

Yes, that's the way it's been, all down these 70 years, as one generation follows another. We've made thousands of fine friends. We've shared your greatest moments. We've been happy at your weddings, loved your babies, been proud of your successes, and now are rejoicing as your boys (and ours) come home. More than you think, these moments touch our hearts. That's why we say, in one way or another, your life IS our life.

TEXAS KID WITH DRAWL MAKES HIT ON RADIO

Tall, Slim Redhead Has Way with Mike

BY LARRY WOLTERS

A new funny man is brightening the airways this season. He's that tall Quiz Kid from Texas, Robert Easton Burke, a redhead lad of 14 in cowboy boots with a voice that has some of the drawl of Gary Cooper and just a suggestion of Will Rogers. He's 6 feet 4 in his cowboy boots — that's at least as tall as Cooper.

Robert E. Burke

Bob comes from San Antonio and is "up in these parts under protest." He calls himself a D. P. [displaced person] from Texas. He's going to school in Milwaukee and comes down each Sunday for the broadcast.

Bob has made eight appearances to date and it appears that he may stay a long time. He knows the answers and he has personality that has listeners cheering from coast to coast. His voice is deep, deliberate, and slow. He has a fine sense of timing and a deep south accent that don't hurt him, either. He's the best informed kid on aviation that has blown into the Quiz Kids' classroom.

Because of his drawl listeners have asked about his nationality. He's got a lot of Irish blood in him, some English, and some German. He is a great-great-grandson of Rufus Eaton, who was Thomas Jefferson's private secretary. His family, you can see, has been around for some time.

Comment: Fred Allen, despite a year's absence, seems to have lost none of his old touch. Listeners commented that he was in fine fettle last Sunday, apparently undismayed by the fact he has a brand new supporting cast except for Minerva Pious.

Request performance, which bowed in last Sunday, isn't up to Command Performance, the overseas show for American troops. It lacks the surprises and humorous turns the service men's request show has had thruout the war years. Diana Lynn, Frank Morgan, Hoagy Carmichael, and Rudy Vallee will contribute to R. P. tonight at 9 over WBBM.

Looking back on the series broadcasts: The games were carried around the globe on the largest network ever put together. Mutual sent it to some 500 stations in the United States and Canada. The Armed Forces Radio service relayed it to 150 of its stations overseas and it was picked up thru sound systems by navy ships. American short wave stations beamed it abroad. The series also was sent to a Cuban network in Spanish and the games were reconstructed in French for several stations in Quebec.

Numerous fans commented that they missed the experting of Red Barber and Bob Elson. Bill Slater and Al Helfer, who did the play by play, are known mainly in New York where they broadcast local games the past season.

Chicagoans on WBBM's Fort Sheridan Show

Welcome Home, a program from the Fort Sheridan separation center which is aired over WBBM at 11:45 o'clock Sunday nights, will consist of interviews with five Chicago men tonight. Sgt. Joseph Gerling, 1423 Oakdale av.; Corp. Dan Cugtiss, 1008 N. Mason av.; Corp. Anthony Zigmont, 4400 S. Ashland av.; Corp. Michael Eannanino, 1429 Mohawk, and Corp. George Ryan, 224 W. North av., will be heard during discharge proceedings.

Ingrid Bergman, Larry Adler with Benny Gang

Ingrid Bergman and Larry Adler, who accompanied Jack Benny on a U. S. O. tour overseas last summer, will join the Benny gang on WMAQ-NBC at 7 o'clock tonight when it entertains at the Santa Barbara redistribution center before men who have just returned from Jap prisons. Larry Stevens will sing, "If I Love You."

Review Stand Subject

"What Should Be the National Labor Policy?" will be the subject of the University of Chicago Round Table on WMAQ-NBC at 1:30 p. m. today.

Air True Story

Ozzie Nelson and Harriet Hilliard (Mrs. N.) portray the story of their own lives on their show over WBBM-CBS at 5 p. m. Sundays.

WEST SUBURBAN RELIGIOUS STUDY COURSE TO OPEN

The Community Leadership Training School of Religious Education for the west suburban area will begin the first of six Monday night sessions at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night in Elmhurst college.

Courses are sponsored by the church schools of Du Page and surrounding counties. They are approved by the International Council of Religious Education. The school has been held each year since 1926.

Five courses are offered as follows:

"The New Testament; Its Contents and Values"; Prof. T. W. Menzel, professor of religion at Elmhurst college.

"Guiding Children in Christian Growth," Mrs. Sarah Mullen, teacher in week day religious education.

"Guiding the Religious Growth of Juniors," Mrs. Evelyn King, director of week day religious education.

"Guiding Youth's Approach to Religion," the Rev. Arthur Ebeling, pastor of Peace Evangelical and Reformed church, Bensenville.

"The Art of Leadership," the Rev. John Shaffer, pastor of Calvary Evangelical church, Villa Park.

Charles W. Paape of Elmhurst is chairman of the training school activity and the Rev. Walter Luedtke of Hinsdale is dean. The school is open to all regardless of creed or denomination.

CITIZENS SHOW HONORS ALUMNI OF DU SABLE

When the Citizens of Tomorrow salute Du Sable High school on W-G-N at 9:30 a. m. next Saturday, John E. Meegan, principal, will dedicate the broadcast to the 1,152 alumni of the school who have served in World War II. Philip Maxwell will conduct the program.

Gilda Burns, who is to be student star entertainer on the show, will sing "Vissi d'Arte" from Verdi's "La Tosca." A chorus, under direction of Mrs. E. M. Turley, will offer Schubert's "To Music" and Nagelí's "A Faithful Shepherd."

Names of Reatha Herndon of Du Sable and Thomas K. Hostetler of Decatur [Ill.] Senior High school will be added to the program's student honor roll.

KERN OPERETTA SCHEDULED FOR THEATER OF AIR

"Music in the Air," Jerome Kern's operetta about Viennese life in the 19th century, will be offered on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network next Saturday from 10 to 11 p. m. Marion Claire, soprano, and Bruce Foote, baritone, will star in the presentation. Ruth Slater and Angelo Raffaelli will sing supporting roles.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak during the broadcast.

The Theater of the Air chorus and orchestra, directed by Henry Weber, will be heard in some of Kern's most popular tunes: "The Song Is You," "I've Told Every Little Star," "Love Was Born," "I'm Alone," "When Spring Is in the Air," and "There's a Hill Beyond a Hill."

Bergen-McCarthy Guest

Hildegarde will be a guest on the Edgar Bergen-Charlie McCarthy show over WMAQ-NBC at 8 o'clock tonight. Music and song furnished by Ray Noble's orchestra and Anita Gordon, teen-age vocalist.

CITY'S COURSES IN GREAT BOOK STUDY OPENING

All Leaders Trained in Methods of U. of C.

Adult education courses in the great books will be held in west side communities this fall and winter under the auspices of the University of Chicago college, the Chicago public libraries, and suburban libraries and school systems.

A total of 32 community courses thruout the city and suburbs will be under way by Saturday. They represent the first coöperative venture in adult education designed to bring the Hutchins-Adler method of discussing the world's great books into every section of the Chicago area. The courses are being offered as far south as Gary, Ind., and as far north as Racine, Wis.

Started as Experiment

The program resulted from the successful inauguration of adult courses in the great books at University college downtown last fall. Adult education, departing from the traditional classroom type, will experience a boom during the post-war period, Cyril O. Houle, dean of the college, said.

The community courses were preceded by a five month series of biweekly lectures at the college, during which community leaders were taught methods of discussion leadership and the use of the classics in a liberal education. Works of such authors as Plato, Aristotle, Karl Marx, James Madison, and Alexander Hamilton were analyzed in seminar discussions.

West side discussion groups and opening dates of the biweekly sessions are: Austin library, 5615 Race av., Friday; Legler library, 115 S. Pulaski rd., Wednesday, and Toman library, 4005 27th st., Monday.

Tell of Registration

In each of the community courses there will be two moderators or leaders. By questions they will seek to stimulate discussion. The great books courses were made famous on the Midway by Chancellor Hutchins and Prof. Mortimer J. Adler.

Registration will be held in the centers where discussion groups will meet. The courses of 15 to 18 meetings are offered to community residents without charge as part of the adult education program of Chicago and suburban libraries and public schools.

FORMER MORTON STAR BACK AS GYM TEACHER

A. P. Kovanic has returned to the faculty of Morton High school after two years' duty with the coast guard. At the time of his discharge he held the rating of chief petty officer. An alumnus of Morton, class of '28, Kovanic attended Morton Junior college and later was graduated from the University of Illinois.

Kovanic was one of a group to discover the Germans had landed on Greenland. He assisted in capturing them and their vessel. The ship on which he served was used in Russian waters to aid in clearing ice near the ports.

Before his enlistment, Kovanic was a member of the commercial department at Morton. He is now a physical education teacher at the school for which he won athletic honors when he was one of its students.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Oct. 15

Dutch bulbs have arrived in numbers. Among these are hyacinths, bulbous plants that are useful for growing in the home in pots or as bedding plants in the outdoor garden.

The bulbs do well when placed singly in special glasses that enable the roots to grow downward in water but which hold the bulb above water. It is essential that the root system be well formed as with tulips, crocus, and some other bulbs before bringing to the lighted window.

Grow a few pots of tulips or other bulbs that are available, for they will brighten up any window.

Tuesday, Oct. 16

If the ground is in condition to spade, be sure to turn it over now. By so doing so many insect pests will be killed thru the action of freezing and thawing. As the spading progresses, turn under a copious amount of humus in some form.

Decayed manure is about the best material for this purpose, but substitutes will do. Buy a bale of chopped alfalfa and straw and work some of it into each trench turned up.

Peat muck, decayed leaves, compost, which most gardeners never have, or any vegetable material will suffice. Humus is necesrary because of its bacterial action.

Wednesday, Oct. 17

If an amaryllis bulb is bought, put it to the neck, and water to settle the soil.

Bulbs growing in the garden should be lifted and dried off, then stored in a dry, dark place until they show activitiy. If thrips appear when the plants are growing in the field suitable sprays may be used to control them.

Peonies still can be planted. Roses can be planted up to heavy freezing, but never allow the roots to be exposed to the air and dig the holes large enough to spread out the roots. Firm the soil around and between the roots.

Thursday, Oct. 18

Many rock garden plants can be planted this month. Clear out or reduce the plants that spread too rapidly, otherwise the slower kinds will be crowded out. Wait until the ground freezes before applying a mulch to hardy plants, bulbs, and others.

All fall planted stock is greatly benefited with a mulch. Parsnips and oyster plants are safe if allowed to stand outdoors all winter. They will be quite tender when lifted in spring.

If any hardy chrysanthemums are in flower try lifting and planting in pots for indoor use. They are among the easiest of all plants to transplant.

Friday, Oct. 19

Trees may be fed at this time. Use any recommended formulae or purchase the special plant food that is available for them.

Lay in a supply of potting soil for early spring use. Some plants will need transplanting and soil should be on hand.

Visit the grower who has a varied lot of plants and buy a few small ones to grow on in the window. Try some new begonia, for almost all kinds are ornamental even when in leaf.

Try a cyclamen, a few table ferns, and one of the best plants is the clivia or kaffir lily from South Africa.

Saturday, Oct. 20

Take care of the rubber plant, the screw pine, the Christmas cactus, the sansevieria. If the rubber plant grows quite large, cut it back in the spring when it resumes active growth, or discard all overgrown plants and replace with young, active plants.

HOLD LIBRARY CLINIC FRIDAY IN LA GRANGE

Lyons Township High school and Junior college, La Grange, will be host Friday to area librarians at the third annual school library clinic.

Since state teachers' meetings at the University of Illinois were abolished several years ago because of transportation difficulties, school librarians have held regional clinics. "The School Library as a Teaching Agency" will be discussed in 10 clinics thruout the state this fall.

Tell List of Topics

Mildred Nickel, president of the Illinois Association of High School Librarians, is chairman of the program committee for the La Grange meeting.

Topics and their speakers will be "School Library Standards," Frances Henne of the graduate library school of the University of Chicago; "The Library and the Reading Program of the Schools," Jean Evans, and "The Public Librarian Looks at the Schools," Mrs. Adele Maze.

Plan Informal Panel

The informal part of the program will consist of a panel discussion led by Alice Lohrer of the library school of the University of Illinois and a sectional meeting for elementary school and high school librarians.

Section chairmen are Gertrude Morse of the Evanston Public library and Virginia Brown of Morton High school. Myrtle Ellis, York High school librarian, is coördinator for the day's program.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

IN recognition of over 2,000 hours of volunteer service, Mrs. Kay Ladenburger, 950 N. LeClair av., recently was decorated by Mayor Kelly with the OCD service ribbon bar. Active in civilian defense work since its inception, Mrs. Ladenburger was chairman of consumer information and conservation for her community. As a member of the speakers' bureau for the OCD and the OPA, she fulfilled lecture engagements in many sections of the city and suburbs.

Mrs. Ladenburger was employed in a war industry until the plant closed after V-J day. She was a volunteer worker in all the bond drives and was co-chairman for North Austin in the 7th war loan campaign. Her husband, Edward L. Ladenburger, was a 1st class petty officer in the coast guard.

FRANK Sherman, 3210 Arthington st., has been elected president of the student council of Central Y. M. C. A. evening high school. Other west siders on the council include Suzanne Roth, 20 N. Ashland av.; Connie Spychal, Cicero; Dorothy Tramel, Aurora; Jerome Taylor, Maywood; A. F. Parker, 207½ N. Pulaski rd., and Helen Swartz, Berwyn.

On the student council of the day high school are Mrs. Zora Hansen, 343 N. Lorel av.; Ronald Watson, Cicero, and John Tacl, 1035 Cullerton st.

MR. and Mrs. C. W. Eifrig, formerly of 1029 Monroe st., Oak Park, celebrated their golden wedding recently with a dinner party at the Oak Park Arms hotel for members of the family. The dinner was followed by a reception attended by 135 friends and relatives.

The couple was married in Fort Wayne, Ind. In 1909 Dr. Eifrig joined the faculty of Concordia Teachers' college, River Forest, where he was professor of natural history, world history, and geography. Since his retirement in 1942, he and his wife have lived in Windermere, Fla.

You'll Enjoy Your Own OUTDOOR FIREPLACE

Now it's EASY to have an outdoor fireplace in the privacy of your own grounds. Invite favorite friends to enjoy sizzling steaks broiled over glowing charcoal or wood... an early morning breakfast of pancakes and sausage... or an impromptu wiener roast!

And it's really simple to build with a Hancock SKELETON UNIT, which comes complete with genuine rolled steel frame and doors (not cast iron); and gray-iron fire-grate, cooking grate, hot plate and front. Build brick or stone masonry around it, as simple or elaborate as your taste dictates, from the detailed plans furnished for each basic design. Accessory units, such as ovens and barbecue spits, available for those who wish them. Hancock Outdoor Fireplace Units are solidly constructed, long enduring, are standard equipment in many leading park systems.

CHURCH READY FOR EXPANSION IN SAUGANASH

Queen of Saints to Build in Spring

To meet the anticipated development of the Sauganash community, Queen of All Saints' Catholic parish will begin construction this spring on three buildings of a proposed $1,500,000 group. They include a new grade school building, a convent, and a new rectory building.

Father Dolan

The units will be constructed on a two block square area including the site of the existing grade school building. The 11½ acre area, already purchased by the parish, is bounded by Sauganash, Kilpatrick, Ionia, and Lamon avs.

Upon completion of these units, construction will begin on a high school building. Last to be built will be the church. Father Francis J. Dolan, parish minister since 1934, has estimated the entire group will be completed in 10 years.

Stress Schools First

"We believe that the foundation for building in a community must be the school," he explained. "For that reason we are beginning our building program with the schools. The existing school is so crowded now that it cannot properly house more pupils, even tho it is only four years old."

The new grade school building, doubling the capacity of the present school, will house 320 students and have a gymnasium, library, and a cafeteria. It will be directly north of the present school structure, facing Lamon av. The convent will house the Sisters of St. Benedict, who comprise the parish teaching staff. At present they commute to the grade school. The rectory building, to house assistants needed in the growing parish, will face Sauganash av. and be bounded on the north by Lamon av. Construction of these buildings will cost $375,000.

The site of the new high school and church will be east of the school group and face Sauganash av. All will be constructed of Lannon stone and be harmonious in architecture.

Looks for Growth

"I feel that the Sauganash community will triple its present population in the next five years, bringing with it a more than proportionate growth of the Catholic community," Father Dolan said. At present the parish has 502 families in its membership, and of these 52 families entered the church since last June.

In evidence of the growth that may be expected as well as citing growth of the last 10 years, the parish record reveals that only 43 families supported the church in 1934. At that time the parish income was $8,000, and carried an indebtedness of $88,000. In 1944 the parish was clear of indebtedness, had an income of $70,000, the present $150,000 school building, and the land site acquired for its building program.

Women's Medical Group to Hear About RH Factor

The Women's auxiliary of the Chicago Medical society, northwest branch, will meet at 1:30 p. m. Friday in the clubrooms, 2512 Kimball av. Mrs. A. H. Hallman, past junior president, will present a paper entitled "RH Factor in Blood." Mrs. Clyde R. Landis, president of the Chicago Medical auxiliary, will be a guest.

It's a Dream! a Servant at 40c a Month

To those to whom a shortage of servants is a favorite lament, Sgt. Frank T. Maciejewski, 22, 1544 Oakley blvd., could stir their envy with the description of his native houseboy in Accra, Africa, who became his man-of-all-work for a salary of 40 cents a month.

The "boy" [with a harem of 15 wives, incidentally] did all the housework in the sergeant's quarters, took care of the soldier's laundry, kept fruits, nuts and coconuts in constant supply, and looked after his own food and housing needs without any help from his employer.

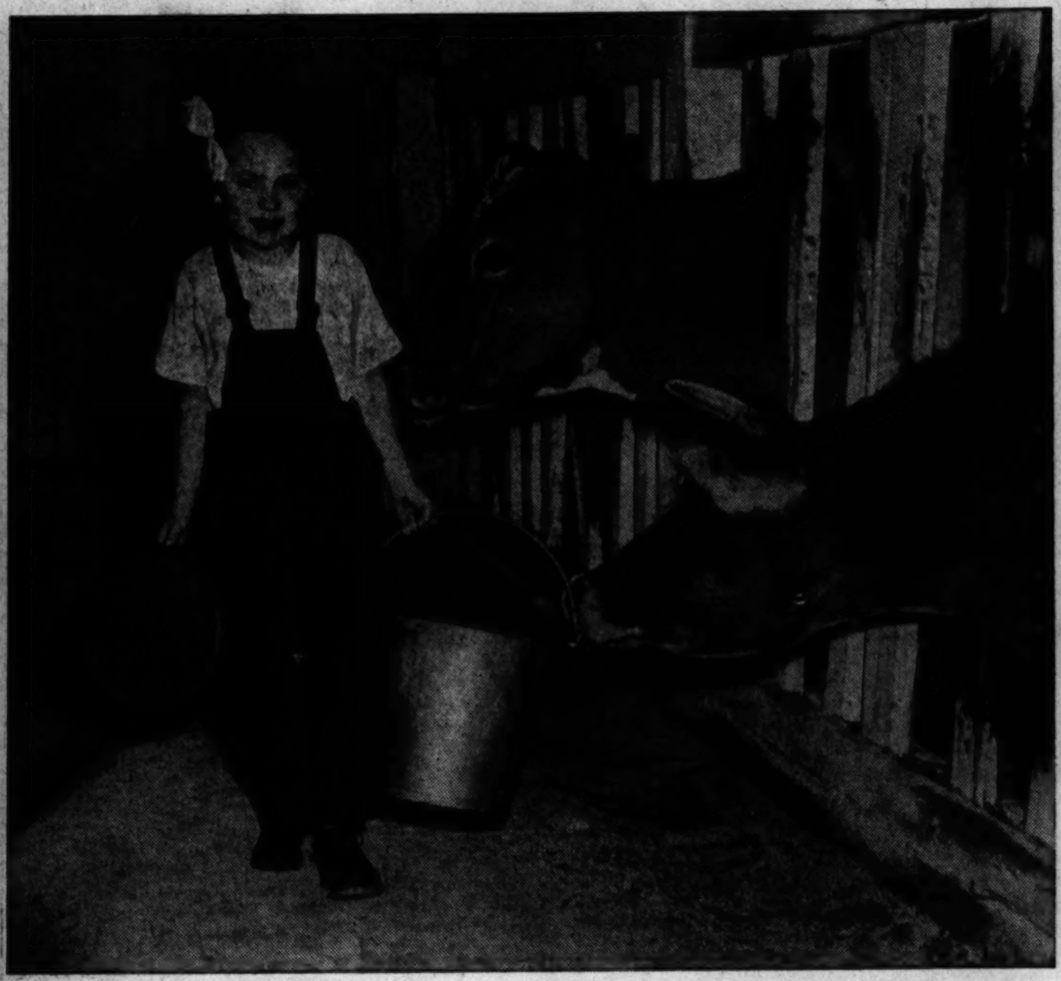
The houseboy managed to get Maciejewski elected a full fledged member of his tribe, the only white man to be so honored. As proof of their esteem the tribesmen gave the sergeant a hand beaten gold ring inscribed with his first name and the signs of the Zodiac. Furthermore, as a tribe member he was privileged to come and go in the village as he wished. In repayment, the sergeant kept his houseboy supplied with candy, chewing gum, and cigarets.

All of this was a comparatively quiet phase of the sergeant's service career. At his base, only three degrees north of the equator, he was a member of a service squadron of the air force. Other bases in which he served with the squadron include South America, Panama, Mexico, Hawaii, Guam, the Marshalls and the Philippines.

His service record began in December, 1942, when he enlisted after being graduated from Crane Technical High school. After seeing action on Leyte and Luzon he is on sick leave from the Moore General hospital, Swannanoa, N. C.

Nancy Believes Milking Is an Art That Requires a Lot of Help on the Side

A future farm woman of America . . . that's Nancy Parkyn, 5, of Crystal Lake. When school is over for the day Nancy hurries home to round up 13 cows and milk three herself. First to receive Nancy's ministrations is Big Guernsey, favorite of the child.



Milking stool in one hand and bucket in the other, Nancy's almost thru with chores for the evening. Before she and her father, John E. Parkyn, tenant on the Delmar Stevens farm (Delmar Stock farm) can sit down to supper the cows must be turned out to pasture, and milk must be cooled and put in cans for the creamery.

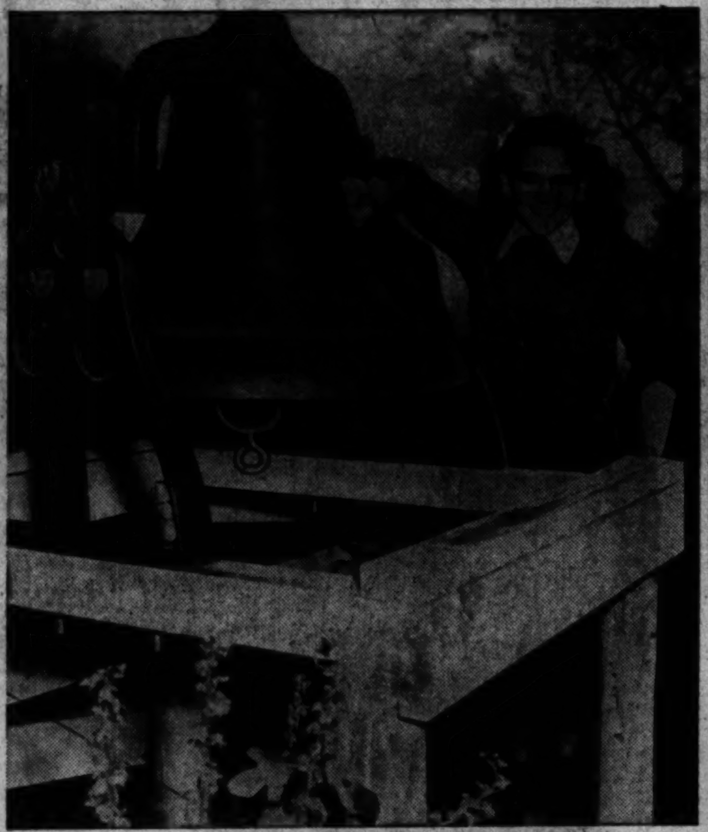
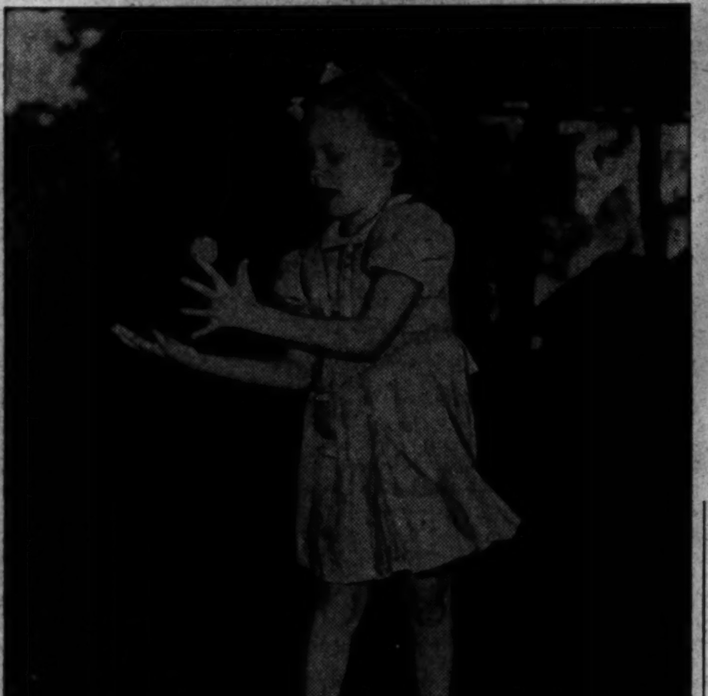
Among the chores Nancy has delegated for herself is caring for the three-gaited thorobred horse owned by Mrs. Stevens. Nancy curries Top Hat once a day. Mrs. Stevens holds the reins.



Summoning the family to dinner Lois Parkyn is ready to ring the iron bell which has been a part of the farm so long no one remembers from where it came. The bell is believed to be more than 100 years old.

Nancy's two sisters, Lois, 14, and Jeanette, 2, enjoy an autumn stroll with their father and mother on the farm's pebbled drive. Like Nancy both girls prefer outdoor life to housework.



When it's time for play Nancy knows how to enjoy herself just as much as any other 1st grader at Crystal Lake school. It's a rare occasion when mother finds Nancy in a dress outside of school hours. A pair of overalls and a cotton shirt are clothes quite acceptable to Nancy. [TRIBUNE Photos]

Buddies Tell How GI Found Wife in Reich

A Greek girl, singled out by the Nazis for her wide knowledge of languages, was taken from her homeland and brought to Germany to serve as a translator.

An American boy of Greek ancestory fought for three years from Africa to Germany, acquiring eight battle stars and the bronze star medal before the Nazis quit.

Then, the boy and the girl met in Esslingen, Germany. Sgt. Anthony Saras, 1896 Milwaukee av., had visited the Greek refugee camp near his base to see how the people of his parents' homeland were faring. The translator was Stella Rigaki, 24, and she learned of dances being sponsored by the 316th fighter squadron. They attended the dances together and fell in love.

Await Ship Home

Now it is Sgt. and Mrs. Anthony Saras. They are waiting in Germany for transportation to the United States but want their friends back home to know they found a happy ending to the war years.

Two of Sgt. Saras' buddies who attended the wedding have come home to attend to that. They were commissioned to see the wedding announcement was put in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Sgt. Saras could have come home with his buddies, what with his 128 points, but that would have meant leaving his bride of a month.

Staff Sergeants Joe Gorelick, 1301 Columbia av., and Ted Papuga, 884 N. Marshfield av., have reported the ceremony took place Sept. 2. A German minister officiated in the office of the burgomaster of Esslingen. The bride was given in marriage by a German woman who had befriended her.

The Messengers Report

A reception in the mess hall of the 316th fighter squadron followed where refreshments included champagne. Then there was dancing. And because it means a lot for a bride to have wedding pictures, Sgt. Papuga took 16 pictures during the festivities.

The wedding announcement taken care of, Sergeants Gorelick and Papuga announced they had another mission. Armed with the pictures they visited Mr. and Mrs. Mike Saras, parents of Anthony, to describe the wedding and Stella.

The next stop for both messengers was an army separation center where they were discharged.

ARTS AND SKILLS WORKERS NEED OF RED CROSS

Northwest side artists and craftsmen will be asked to volunteer their talent to the arts and skills corps of the Red Cross. The organization hopes in coming months to bring its program to all military hospitals in the Chicago Red Cross area.

"The number of hospitalized service men taking part in our handicrafts program is constantly growing," Mrs. Clark W. Lawrence, chairman of the corps, explained. "At this point there just aren't enough volunteer artists and craftsmen enrolled to teach the thousands of men clamoring to participate in the program."

Rummage Sale

Park Ridge center of the Infant Welfare society will sponsor a rummage sale at 5054 Irving Park blvd. Oct. 31, Mrs. William Whitmore, president, has announced. Chairman is Mrs. Lowell Ruprecht.

St. Luke's Men

Dr. Askar Waldemar Vestergaard, traveler and lecturer of Copenhagen, Denmark, will speak at the St. Luke Men's club in Park Ridge at 8 p. m. Tuesday.

GAS CO. LEGION POST TO SEAT HEADS TUESDAY

Peoples Gas American Legion post will install officers Tuesday night in the Columbia Yacht club, at the foot of Washington st.

Following a dinner at 6:30 p. m., William G. Byrnes, Cook county council commander, will install the following: Albert A. Ward, commander; Joseph Stoesser, senior vice commander; Samuel Cohn, junior vice commander; James Smart, adjutant; Albert Frendahl, treasurer; Leo La Gesse, chaplain, and Leon J. Peikes, sergeant at arms.

Maj. George Moore, member of the 46th infantry Philippine scouts and held prisoner of war three years, will speak on "Experiences in Japanese Prisons and Prison Ships." Toastmaster will be Eskil I. Bjork.

Women of Moose

Department chairmen of the Women of the Moorse, chapter 427, will hold a party at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow at 5835 Irving Park rd.

Y HIGH SCHOOL COUNCIL ELECTS N. W. SIDE PUPIL

Kenneth Behnke, 4239 N. Le Claire av., has been elected president of the student council of the Y. M. C. A. Day High school, 19 S. La Salle st. A senior who formerly attended Schurz High school, he will lead the student governing body in planning winter activities. Among other northwest side students elected to the council are Margie Baldwin, Park Ridge; Frank Chin, 1942 Irving Park blvd.; Jeanette Kassmann, 4256 N. Mozart st., and Alfred Hardtke, 5634 Wellington av.

Polish Club Officers at Tuley High Named

Jack Iwicki is the new president of the Tuley High School Polish club. Other officers elected recently include Martin Czerbeck and Mary Kmiecik, vice presidents; Dorothy Tepper, secretary; Joseph Gagola, treasurer, and Robert Werygo, Joseph Kurek, Casimer Kazmierski, and Joseph Giza, sergeant at arms.

VICTORY GARDEN HARVESTERS GET CROP OF GREEN

Prizes Awarded for Best Produce

The victory garden harvest reaped by employes of the W. F. Hall Printing company, 4600 Diversey av., brought an accompanying harvest of war bonds and stamps for those whose produce was judged the best.

In the first division for gardens of over 2,000 square feet, Mrs. Bernice Pardo, 2416 N. Mason av., won first prize of a $50 bond. Other winners were Stanley Aley, 5104 Deming pl., and Elmer Hartel, 5228 Parker av., whose combined entry won second prize of a $25 bond, and Roy Poulsen, 2648 Fitch av., and Joseph Kauffman, 1238 N. Waller av., who tied for third prize of $10 in stamps. Honorable mention and $5 in stamps went to Ralph Howard, 5528 Mango av.; Richard Kruger, 3513 Wrightwood av., and Peter Bernard, 4336 N. Newcastle av.

First prize in the second division went to G. Arthur Holmberg, 5530 Byron av. Prize winners received awards identical to those in the first division. Other winners were Barnet Hockstad, Des Plaines, and Otto Wunder, 2739 N. Le Claire av., whose combined entry won second prize; George Tomasic, 2936 N. Moody av., third prize; Ralph Howard, 5528 Mango av.; Richard Kruger, 3513 Wrightwood av., and Peter Bernard, 4336 N. Newcastle av., honorable mention.

NEAREST OF KIN GET MEDALS OF SONS WHO DIED

Next of kin of four service men from northwestern suburbs have received posthumous awards. They include Leopold E. Fleissner, Park Ridge, silver star for his son, Sgt. Paul E. Fleissner; Mrs. Luella A. Sander, Mount Prospect, silver star for her son, Sgt. Victor W. Sander; Mrs. Christine N. Bennett, Arlington Heights, air medal for her husband, Lt. L. S. Bennett, and Joe Herr, Palatine, silver star for his son, Sgt. Herbert J. Herr.

PARK ACTIVITY TO SNOW UNDER WINTER ENNUI

Cold Weather Blues to Get Brush-Off

Northwest side residents will find a fall and winter vacationland in the varied recreational program being offered by the park district. The program includes dancing, athletic activities, craft work, table games, and membership in various clubs.

Hobbyists can put long winter evenings to good use in a variety of artcraft activities. Painting, sketching, leathercraft, clay modeling, metal work, game making, knitting, pottery, puppetry, weaving, boat building, model airplane building, basketry, bone carving, photography, and Indian crafts are among those offered.

List Park Facilities

Game rooms are provided for those interested in chess, checkers, mahjongg, bridge, pinochle, billiards, and the like. Chess and checker clubs have been organized in several parks which sponsor local and interpark tournaments. Every Mother-to-be Should Wear A New-Lift

MATERNITY SUPPORT

DESIGNED FOR SCIENTIFIC PRE-NATAL CARE AND THE HEALTH OF THE YOUNG MOTHER-TO-BE

Designed for young mothers who dread wearing a heavy, boned garment . . . this NU-LIFT MATERNITY SUPPORT combines all the comforts of the garments you normally wear with the support that is so vital during this important time. There is no binding or pressure because the weight is carried from the shoulders. Adjustable side laces and darts. This is a two-in-one garment that can be converted for post-natal wear by interchanging the front panel. Thus you will be assisted in a more rapid return to your normal figure by NU-LIFT MATERNITY SUPPORT. (It is recommended by leading obstetricians.)

FOR POST-NATAL WEAR

With the above garment is an interchangeable front panel support that will help restore your figure to its former lines.

BETTER BODY BALANCE

Scientific inner band in back gives you restful comfort, helps avoid backache and allows you to maintain better body balance.

TELL OF GOLDEN WEDDINGS IN 3 N. W. SIDE HOMES

Honor G. J. Werners at Mass Tuesday

Two northwest side couples have observed their golden wedding in recent weeks, and a third couple will observe the anniversary date Tuesday.

Mrs. Werner

George Werner

An anniversary mass will be sung in Our Lady of Grace church, 2455 N. Hamlin av., in honor of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Werner, 4422 Altgeld st., Msgr. Victor B. Primeau will be celebrant, the Rev. H. Mache will be deacon, and the Rev. Thomas H. Lamie subdeacon. Following the mass a dinner and reception will take place in the Oak Park Arms hotel, Oak Park.

The Werners were married in St. Mel's church, 22 N. Kildare av., and have resided on the northwest side since. They have two sons, Joseph and Edwin; a daughter, Mrs. Joseph C. Stoesser, and five grandchildren.

Fete Des Plaines Couple

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Lauer, Des Plaines, were honored on their recent anniversary with a mass in St. Mary's church, Des Plaines. Their son, the Rev. Wilfred Lauer, S. J., was celebrant; their nephew, Father James Lauer, O. S. B., served as deacon, and a grandnephew, Father Eugene Lauer, O. S. B., served as master of ceremonies. Music of the mass was composed by their daughter, Antoinette Lauer, church organist, and sung by the choir which Lauer has directed for 30 years.

Following the mass 35 relatives and friends were entertained at breakfast in the Tally Ho tearoom, Park Ridge. In an afternoon open house the couple greeted 150 friends.

Given Supper Party

Mr. and Mrs. Alois Urbanec, residents at 4245 Elston av. since 1907, were honored on their anniversary with a supper party by the Edward Benes chapter of the Czech-American National alliance and its Red Cross unit. Three days later the family group met in their home for a turkey dinner.

CHURCH OPENS 50TH JUBILEE RITES TODAY

St. Peter's English Evangelical Lutheran church, Spaulding and Le Moyne avs., will celebrate its golden anniversary with a series of services and programs beginning this morning and continuing thru Nov. 7. Anniversary events will include talks by visiting clergymen and former pastors of the church, a banquet, and a musical and play.

Speaking at the service at 11 a. m. today will be the Rev. Paul Bishop, pastor of the church from 1921 to 1930 and now at Bay Shore Lutheran church in Milwaukee, Wis. The second event will be a banquet at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday. Among the speakers will be the Rev. Roland Reichman, former assistant student pastor and now pastor of the First Lutheran church in Decatur; the Rev. Armin G. Weng, president of the Illinois Synod of United Lutheran Churches; Mrs. Lars Undem, only living charter member of the church; the Rev. Freeman A. Kunz, present pastor, and his assistant, Jim Fresh, student of the Chicago Lutheran seminary.

Give Musical, Play Nov. 7

Banquet arrangements will be made by Mrs. Helen Nelson and Mrs. Alice Fergen.

The Rev. Mr. Weng will speak at the 11 a. m. service Oct. 21. Reformation Sunday services will be conducted Oct. 28 with the Rev. Mr. Kunz as speaker.

A musical by the senior choir and a play by the missionary society will close observances Nov. 7. The choir will be directed by the pastor and Mrs. Alice Husum will be organist. Mrs. Katherine Birkeland will direct the play, assisted by Mrs. Fergen, president of the missionary society.

St. Peter's was organized March 30, 1895, with nine charter members. The organization came about under the encouragement of the late Dr. H. W. Roth, its first pastor, and J. J. Clemens. Members met irregularly in store buildings on North av.

Buy Church Building in 1899

The Rev. Luther Hogshead served the congregation as student supply pastor from 1896 to 1897. In 1899 the Rev. H. B. Reed, who had been serving as a student supply pastor, was installed as the first permanent pastor and services were held regularly in a store at 3257 North av. The same year the former St. Simon's Lutheran church building was purchased. It was moved farther back on the lot and remodeled in 1910. The present main auditorium was built nine years later.

St. Peter's is a member of the Illinois synod of the United Lutheran Church of America and has a membership of more than 1,000.

NEWSPAPERS put you ON BUSY STREET

FOR A GIRL, 5, NANCY DOES A LOT OF FARMING

Milk, Feed Hens, Drive Tractor?—Sure!

When lessons for the day end at Crystal Lake Grade school, there's as much of a scramble for the door as at any other school. One of the first to get outside, altho she's small for her age, is 5 year old Nancy Parkyn, a 1st grader.

To most of these youngsters the end of the school day means time for play. Not so for Nancy. When she boards the school bus for home she knows her day is but half over. There are farm chores to think about—going to the pasture for the cows, milking, gardening, and feeding the live stock.

Early last summer Nancy determined she'd be a farmer. Her father, John E. Parkyn, who lives on the Delmar Stevens' farm between Crystal Lake and Woodstock, was in a position to teach her a few of the things she so desired to learn.

Mrs. Parkyn Objects

Under protests from both Parkyn and his wife, Nancy began parceling jobs out for herself. Mrs. Parkyn had a right to protest. She has three daughters, none of whom gives a hoot about housework. Of course, Jeanette is only 2, but there's Lois, 14.

The school bus has no more than left the farm drive when Nancy is half way to the house to change into comfortable corduroy overalls and a cotton shirt. She wastes little love on dresses and thinks life is much more enjoyable in overalls.

After a slice of her mother's home-made bread spread with plenty of butter and jam [Nancy has a good appetite] she's ready to begin. Down in the barn she gets the currying brush out and goes to work grooming Top Hat, Mrs. Stevens' three-gaited thorobred.

Cats Well Provided

Then she heads for the pasture a half mile away and rounds up 13 milk cows with stick in hand—just in case they get out of order. After she has put them in their stalls Nancy is ready to milk Big Guernsey, favorite of the three she milks, while her father tends to the other 10. She's been kicked several times but that only seems to encourage her.

Since to Nancy "Be Kind to Animal Week" is 52 weeks a year, the cats are always nearby at milking time. She provides them with twice their usual quota.

When the milk has been cooled and put in cans for the creamery the cows are turned out to pasture. Then Nancy and her father finish a few remaining details and head for the house where a man-sized supper is waiting for both of them. It's now well after 8 p. m. and Nancy has an appetite just as ravishing as any farm hand. A half hour or more of studying and she's ready to turn in.

Tries Hand at Tractor

Mixing chicken feed, gathering eggs, and a dozen other farm chores are no secrets to Nancy. Even her 2 year old sister knows a thing or two about gathering eggs.

Nancy gave her parents a bad scare one day last summer when she brought the tractor from the field unaided. The tractor probably wasn't going faster than 5 miles an hour but she had to turn a few corners and get down from the seat to manipulate the clutch. When she arrived at home she jumped off the tractor with a smile from ear to ear.

4TH GOLD STAR TO D. F. C. GIVEN TO NAVY PILOT

Distinguished flying crosses, symbol of extraordinary achievement by air force members, have been awarded northwest side service men.

As a navy pilot, Lt. [j. g.] David E. Robinson, 4508 N. Kilpatrick av., has won the cross with four gold stars and the air medal with 11 gold stars in lieu of similar awards. He has flown 138 combat missions. Lt. Robinson's squadron fought in the Mediterranean area and at Luzon, Iwo, and Okinawa.

Captain Wins Medal

Capt. Robert B. Logan, 4832 N. Sawyer av., veteran of 67 missions totaling 227 combat hours, was decorated at the Boca Raton [Fla.] air field. He has served as flight commander of a B-26 unit. He also has been awarded the air medal with 12 oak leaf clusters.

Lt. Herbert G. Spencer, Franklin Park, is credited with destroying three nazi aircraft during a single strafing mission shortly before the German surrender. Lt. Spencer received the award in England.

Three northwest side men were presented their awards from air force bases in Italy. At the 15th air force base Lt. Robert M. Finn, 6881 Tonty av., and Capt. George W. Cyr, 718 N. Central av., were decorated. Lt. Ray W. Spurling, son of Eric N. Spurling, 624 N. Albany av., was given his medal at a 12th air force base.

Flies Unarmed Missions

Bravery in flying unarmed over heavily defended German territory on observation missions was recognized in the citation of Maj. William A. Johnston, 4841 Addison st. The officer is a veteran of more than 60 missions, and wears the air medal with 11 oak leaf cluster.

In India Flight Officer Walter F. Gall, 3318 Pensacola av., was awarded both the flying cross and the air medal for his total of 450 flight hours over the India-China air routes.

Lt. Fred A. Hendricks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Hendricks, 2841 N. Albany av., received the medal on his return to the air field at Sebring, Fla., from the European theater.

Returns, Two Engines Out

Despite the loss of two engines from his Liberator bomber by flak, Lt. Robert M. Finn, 6881 Tonty av., continued in a bombing mission over Czechoslovakia. He was forced to return to his base unescorted. His D. F. C. was awarded in Italy.

Two recipients of the medal are at Boca Raton, Fla., after compiling distinguished records in the European theater. Lt. Edward H. Kopsel, 4904 School st., holds the cross with one oak leaf cluster, the air medal with 12 clusters, and the distinguished unit citation. Lt. George J. Kouchoukos, 2508 Linden pl., flew 200 combat hours in 30 missions as an observer. He holds the air medal with five clusters in addition to the flying cross.

PARTNERS IN "LIVING" SINCE 1875

YOUR LIFE HAS BEEN OUR LIFE FOR 70 YEARS

You see, it all started with your grandmother that day back in 1875 when she came to us for her bridal finery, and invited us to her wedding. That began our friendship. It wasn't long afterwards that your dad appeared on the scene—a lusty infant—and, thru the swift passing of time, we outfitted him for his confirmation, his graduation, his own wedding. . . . One day he came in to buy a sled. He had a brand new daughter, he said—and we chuckled a little at the things fathers buy for new daughters. That baby was you. Now, to us, it has seemed no time at all since that baby sled . . . your first party dress . . . your college wardrobe . . . and that beautiful, specially engraved watch our buyer selected for your engagement gift. Yet here you are today, selecting your own wedding dress and trousseau—ecstatically awaiting the return of that soldier boy to whom we've mailed so many remembrances from you.

We knew your family before you were born . . . and we've watched you grow up and raise your own family.

Yes, that's the way it's been, all down these 70 years, as one generation follows another. We've made thousands of fine friends. We've shared your greatest moments. We've been happy at your weddings, loved your babies, been proud of your successes, and now are rejoicing as your boys (and ours) come home. More than you think, these moments touch our hearts. That's why we say, in one way or another, your life IS our life.

A Great Store in a Great City

We've never been fishing with Dad or camera hunting with junior, but we feel we have from listening to their stories.

Kitchens have changed a lot in 70 years. It used to be "a woman's work is never done" . . . now "a woman's work is done for her" . . . with reservations.

We're celebrating our 70th Anniversary. Be sure and see our State Street windows designed by the same artist who made the above sketches.

TEXAS KID WITH DRAWL MAKES HIT ON RADIO

Tall, Slim Redhead Has Way with Mike

BY LARRY WOLTERS

Robert E. Burke

A new funny man is brightening the airways this season. He's that tall Quiz Kid from Texas, Robert Easton Burke, a redhead lad of 14 in cowboy boots with a voice that has some of the drawl of Gary Cooper and just a suggestion of Will Rogers. He's 6 feet 4 in his cowboy boots — that's at least as tall as Cooper.

Bob comes from San Antonio and is "up in these parts under protest." He calls himself a D. P. [displaced person] from Texas. He's going to school in Milwaukee and comes down each Sunday for the broadcast.

Bob has made eight appearances to date and it appears that he may stay a long time. He knows the answers and he has personality that has listeners cheering from coast to coast. His voice is deep, deliberate, and slow. He has a fine sense of timing and a deep south accent that don't hurt him, either. He's the best informed kid on aviation that has blown into the Quiz Kids' classroom.

Because of his drawl listeners have asked about his nationality. He's got a lot of Irish blood in him, some English, and some German. He is a great-great-grandson of Rufus Eaton, who was Thomas Jefferson's private secretary. His family, you can see, has been around for some time.

Comment: Fred Allen, despite a year's absence, seems to have lost none of his old touch. Listeners commented that he was in fine fettle last Sunday, apparently undismayed by the fact he has a brand new supporting cast except for Minerva Pious.

Request performance, which bowed in last Sunday, isn't up to Command Performance, the overseas show for American troops. It lacks the surprises and humorous turns the service men's request show has had thruout the war years. Diana Lynn, Frank Morgan, Hoagy Carmichael, and Rudy Vallee will contribute to R. P. tonight at 9 over WBBM.

Looking back on the series broadcasts: The games were carried around the globe on the largest network ever put together. Mutual sent it to some 500 stations in the United States and Canada. The Armed Forces Radio service relayed it to 150 of its stations overseas and it was picked up thru sound systems by navy ships. American short wave stations beamed it abroad. The series also was sent to a Cuban network in Spanish and the games were reconstructed in French for several stations in Quebec.

Numerous fans commented that they missed the experting of Red Barber and Bob Elson. Bill Slater and Al Helfer, who did the play by play, are known mainly in New York where they broadcast local games the past season.

Chicagoans on WBBM's Fort Sheridan Show

Welcome Home, a program from the Fort Sheridan separation center which is aired over WBBM at 11:45 o'clock Sunday nights, will consist of interviews with five Chicago men tonight. Sgt. Joseph Gerling, 1423 Oakdale av.; Corp. Dan Curtiss, 1008 N. Mason av.; Corp. Anthony Zigmont, 4400 S. Ashland av.; Corp. Michael Eannanino, 1429 Mohawk, and Corp. George Ryan, 224 W. North av., will be heard during discharge proceedings.

Reviewing Stand Topic Is Russia and Peace

"Russia and the Peace Settlements" is the topic of the Northwestern Reviewing Stand over W-G-N-Mutual at 11:30 a. m. today. Franklin D. Scott, William Card, and William Henry Chamberlin will participate.

Air True Story

Ozzie Nelson and Harriet Hilliard (Mrs. N.) portray the story of their own lives on their show over WBBM-CBS at 5 p. m. Sundays.

KERN OPERETTA SCHEDULED FOR THEATER OF AIR

"Music in the Air," Jerome Kern's operetta about Viennese life in the 19th century, will be offered on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network next Saturday from 10 to 11 p. m. Marion Claire, soprano, and Bruce Foote, baritone, will star in the presentation. Ruth Slater and Angelo Raffaelli will sing supporting roles.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak during the broadcast.

The Theater of the Air chorus and orchestra, directed by Henry Weber, will be heard in some of Kern's most popular tunes: "The Song Is You," "I've Told Every Little Star," "Love Was Born," "I'm Alone," "When Spring Is in the Air," and "There's a Hill Beyond a Hill."

PHILHARMONIC WILL HIGHSPOT SCHELLING WORK

The New York Philharmonic orchestra, under the baton of Artur Rodzinski, will highspot Ernest Schelling's orchestral fantasy, "A Victory Ball," on WBBM-CBS at 3 p. m. today. The program also will include Beethoven's Symphony No. 5 in C minor, the Prelude to Act 1. of Wagner's "Lohengrin," and Strauss' tone poem, "Till Eulenqpiegel's Merry Pranks."

Air Mozart's Jupiter Symphony Over W-G-N

The Chicago Philharmonic orchestra, conducted by Henry Weber, will present Mozart's "Jupiter" symphony over W-G-N and WGNB Tuesday night at 9:30 o'clock. The program also will include Improvisations from Strauss' Violin Sonata and five Etudes for Orchestra by Florian Mueller.

TOP STARS JOIN IN ARMY HOUR TRIBUTE TODAY

Bob Hope, Jack Benny, Katherine Cornell, Jane Froman, Dinah Shore, and other outstanding entertainers will appear on the Army hour over WMAQ-NBC at 4 p. m. today in a salute to the 4,378 performers who entertained American troops during the war. Special tribute will be accorded the 18 entertainers who died in the performance of their duty. The broadcast also will include talks by military officials and pickups from U. S. O. units overseas.

Dorothy Maynor on Sunday Evening Hour

DorothyMaynor will be soloist on the Sunday Evening Hour over WLS-ABC at 8 o'clock tonight. Miss Maynor will sing Cimara's "Stornellata Marinara," Beach's "Ah! Love but a Day," and Hageman's "Me Company Along." Accompanied by a chorus, Miss Maynor also will sing the Negro spirituals, "Steal Away" and "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray." Fritz Reiner will direct the orchestra in the Overture to "The Secret of Suzanne," by Wolf-Ferrari, a Symphonic picture from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," and other works.

Ingrid Bergman, Larry Adler with Benny Gang

Ingrid Bergman and Larry Adler, who accompanied Jack Benny on a U. S. O. tour overseas last summer, will join the Benny gang on WMAQ-NBC at 7 o'clock tonight when it entertains at the Santa Barbara redistribution center before men who have just returned from Jap prisons. Larry Stevens will sing, "If I Love You."

Review Stand Subject

"What Should Be the National Labor Policy?" will be the subject of the University of Chicago Round Table on WMAQ-NBC at 1:30 p. m. today.

WEST SUBURBAN RELIGIOUS STUDY COURSE TO OPEN

The Community Leadership Training School of Religious Education for the west suburban area will begin the first of six Monday night sessions at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night in Elmhurst college.

Courses are sponsored by the church schools of Du Page and surrounding counties. They are approved by the International Council of Religious Education. The school has been held each year since 1926.

Five courses are offered as follows:

"The New Testament; Its Contents and Values"; Prof. T. W. Menzel, professor of religion at Elmhurst college.

"Guiding Children in Christian Growth," Mrs. Sarah Mullen, teacher in week day religious education.

"Guiding the Religious Growth of Juniors," Mrs. Evelyn King, director of week day religious education.

RIDE HER, BOY! MORTON GROVE RODEO ON TODAY

Two Groups to Take Part in Show

A free rodeo with 20 classes of riding and many feature events will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Sportsman's Riding stables, Morton Grove. Joint sponsors of the 10th annual show will be George Jayne, owner of the stables, and the Sportsman's Saddle club.

Contestants, all amateurs, will come from schools, business firms, and professional offices to show their horsemanship and stunting ability. Trophies will be awarded winners of the men's and women's events in horsemanship, jumping, and the feature musical chair event.

Will Show Champion

Among attractions will be Pinky, blue ribbon winner of open jumping events in eight shows in Illinois this season. Owner is Nick Angelocus, 4434 North av., president of the club.

Frank M. Jayne Jr., 11, will put his horse, Jimmy, thru comedy paces. The youth aided his family in training the horse on Our Day farms, Elgin.

Nine head of Brahma cattle, shipped from Missouri, will challenge bronc busters Henry Woodrich, 5521 Forest Glen av., and George Singer, 1300 Argyle av. Edward Beck, 2038 North av., will take the "suicide ride," in which he will attempt to keep his seat on a fiery horse by holding to mane and tail.

Co-ed in Trick Riding

Trick riding, with its falls and drags, will be exhibited by a Northwestern university co-ed and a student of Loyola university. They are Miss Antoinette Grooss, 20, 9454 N. Hamlin av., and Neil Schmitz, 1423 Rascher av., respectively.

The entire membership of the two sponsoring groups will display their horsemanship, and ride grand march. Lawrence Ashbough, veteran member of the riding stables group and recently returned from 39 months overseas duty, will lead the march.

Announcer will be Tom Greenwood of Seneca [La Salle county]. Judges will be Si Jayne of Norwood Park and Alfred Hintt, Bowes Station, near Elgin.

Alpha Delta Pi Alumnae to Fete Past Presidents

Mrs. Kinsey O. English will be hostess to Alpha Delta Pi alumnae in her home, 6800 N. Oriole av., tomorrow at a tea to honor past presidents. Mrs. Howard R. Peterson will exhibit and talk on handmade jewelry she has collected in travels thru Europe, Alaska, Mexico, and South America.

Logan Square Group

The Sisterhood of Logan Square congregation, 3135 Fullerton av., will meet at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday. Mrs. Marcella K. Greenburg is president.

Recent Bride

[Toloff Photo]

Mrs. Walter Harting was Elaine Bonesz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Bonesz of Elmwood Park before her marriage. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Harting of Arlington Heights. The couple is residing in Houston, Tex., where Mr. Harting teaches at the Trinity Lutheran church school.

You'll Enjoy Your Own OUTDOOR FIREPLACE

Now it's EASY to have an outdoor fireplace in the privacy of your own grounds. Invite favorite friends to enjoy sizzling steaks broiled over glowing charcoal or wood . . . an early morning breakfast of pancakes and sausage . . . or an impromptu wiener roast!

And it's really simple to build with a Hancock SKELETON UNIT, which comes complete with genuine rolled steel frame and doors (not cast iron); and gray-iron firegrate, cooking grate, hot plate and front. Build brick or stone masonry around it, as simple or elaborate as your taste dictates, from the detailed plans furnished for each basic design. Accessory units, such as ovens and barbecue spits, available for those who wish them. Hancock Outdoor Fireplace Units are solidly constructed, long enduring, are standard equipment in many leading park systems.

HANCOCK IRON WORKS

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Oct. 15

Dutch bulbs have arrived in numbers. Among these are hyacinths, bulbous plants that are useful for growing in the home in pots or as bedding plants in the outdoor garden.

The bulbs do well when placed singly in special glasses that enable the roots to grow downward in water but which hold the bulb above water. It is essential that the root system be well formed as with tulips, crocus, and some other bulbs before bringing to the lighted window.

Grow a few pots of tulips or other bulbs that are available, for they will brighten up any window.

Tuesday, Oct. 16

If the ground is in condition to spade, be sure to turn it over now. By so doing so many insect pests will be killed thru the action of freezing and thawing. As the spading progresses, turn under a copious amount of humus in some form.

Decayed manure is about the best material for this purpose, but substitutes will do. Buy a bale of chopped alfalfa and straw and work some of it into each trench turned up.

Peat muck, decayed leaves, compost, which most gardeners never have, or any vegetable material will suffice. Humus is necesrary because of its bacterial action.

Wednesday, Oct. 17

If an amaryllis bulb is bought, put it to the neck, and water to settle the soil.

Bulbs growing in the garden should be lifted and dried off, then stored in a dry, dark place until they show activitiy. If thrips appear when the plants are growing in the field suitable sprays may be used to control them.

Peonies still can be planted. Roses can be planted up to heavy freezing, but never allow the roots to be exposed to the air and dig the holes large enough to spread out the roots. Firm the soil around and between the roots.

Thursday, Oct. 18

Many rock garden plants can be planted this month. Clear out or reduce the plants that spread too rapidly, otherwise the slower kinds will be crowded out. Wait until the ground freezes before applying a mulch to hardy plants, bulbs, and others.

All fall planted stock is greatly benefited with a mulch. Parsnips and oyster plants are safe if allowed to stand outdoors all winter. They will be quite tender when lifted in spring.

If any hardy chrysanthemums are in flower try lifting and planting in pots for indoor use. They are among the easiest of all plants to transplant.

Friday, Oct. 19

Trees may be fed at this time. Use any recommended formulae or purchase the special plant food that is available for them.

Lay in a supply of potting soil for early spring use. Some plants will need transplanting, and soil should be on hand.

Visit the grower who has a varied lot of plants and buy a few small ones to grow on in the window. Try some new begonia, for almost all kinds are ornamental even when in leaf.

Try a cyclamen, a few table ferns, and one of the best plants is the clivia or kaffir lily from South Africa.

Saturday, Oct. 20

Take care of the rubber plant, the screw pine, the Christmas cactus, the sansevieria. If the rubber plant grows quite large, cut it back in the spring when it resumes active growth, or discard all overgrown plants and replace with young, active plants.

LOYOLA NAMES AN ALUMNUS AS PUBLICITY CHIEF

The Very Rev. James T. Hussey, S. J., president of Loyola university, has announced the appointment of W. Daniel Conroyd, Norwood Park, to the newly created post of university public relations director.

W. D. Conroyd

A 1942 graduate of Loyola's commerce school, Conroyd previously was wage administrator for a Chicago mail order house.

At Loyola he was a director of student intramurals, held the dean's key for scholarship, was class officer for two years, and a participant in other campus activities.

Albany Park Lutheran Women to Mark 3d Year

Albany Park auxiliaries of the American Lutheran conference will meet for their third anniversary rally at 4 p. m. today in the Medill Av. Lutheran church, 4917 Medill av. Dr. Conrad Hoyer of the National Lutheran Council of America will speak.

MAINE TWP. HIGH JUNIORS TO GIVE RUSSIAN COMEDY

The junior class of Maine Township High school will present "Squaring the Circle," a modern Russian comedy by Valentine Kataev, Oct. 23 thru Oct. 26 in the school gymnasium. Virginia Marshall Duncan, dramatics teacher, is the director. Student directors and stage managers are Gene Conley, Margaret Phillips, Mary Hill, and Jean Zahr.

Principal roles will be played by David Fankhauser, Gwen Chadwick, Ramona Taylor, Scott Cameron, Paul Watson, and Bill North. The stage crew consists of Diane Boyer, Marilyn Nielsen, Lynnette Hubbard, Jeanne Nance, and Emmy Lou Rogers.

The stage setting will be a penthouse.

PULLMAN FREE SCHOOL WILL MARK 30 YEARS

Earliest Students to Attend Sunday

Students in the first class and original faculty members and employes will be among those attending the 30th anniversary of the opening of Pullman Free School of Manual Training, 250 E. 111th st., at 3 p. m. next Sunday. Urban G. Willis, principal, has announced parents of 18 alumni, killed in action, also will attend. A memorial plaque will be dedicated to the memories of the fighters.

Speakers will include Phillip Miller, president of the board of trustees and grandson of George M. Pullman, school founder; Francis M. Gunn, assistant to the president of Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing corporation; Sheldon W. Govier, clerk of the 1st district Appellate court; David Lofgren, commander of Roseland American Legion post, and Ald. Lindell [9th].

Legion to Be in Charge

Roseland Legion post will have charge of memorial exercises for the following alumni: Bruno J. Bednarek, son of Mrs. Margaret Bednarek, 309 E. 119th st.; William Bedzyk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Bedzyk, 10752 Langley av.; Walter A. Butkus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Butkus, 10512 Edbrooke av.; Willis R. Hillegonds, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hillegonds, 11729 Princeton av.; Raymond Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar R. Johnson, Oak Lawn.

Charles J. Kindberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kindberg, 9 E. 112th pl.; Anthony Krotiak, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Krotiak, 10730 La Salle st.; Harold P. Kuruzar, son of Louis J. Kuruzar, Blue Island; Stuart R. Loskill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Loskill, 11150 Wallace st.; Richard M. Napoli, son of Mr. and Mrs. Attilio Sartori, 11438 Calumet av.; Louis E. Nardi, son of Mr. and Mrs. Amedeo Nardi, 11932 La Salle st.; Arthur P. O'Leary, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur P. O'Leary, 7836 Cregier av.

Other War Heroes

Henry Platell, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Platell, 11000 Normal av.; Edward R. Sladek, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Sladek, 3549 W. 61st pl.; Richard H. Snyders, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Snyders, 228 W. 109th st.; Leno P. Trevisan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christ Trevisan, 11417 Forestville av.; Anthony Vandermark, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Vandermark, 104 W. 112th st., and Jacob Wondaal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Enneus Wondaal, 260 W. 106th st.

A memorial tablet with the heroes' names is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. O'Leary in honor of their son.

Pullman was opened in 1915 and since that time 8,000 students have been enrolled and 2,200 graduated from the four year course. Present enrollment is 525. The first two years of the course are general, but in addition to English, social studies, mathematics, and science, each boy receives instruction and practice in the drafting room, machine shop, electrical shop, and automobile shop.

Courses for Girls

After two years the student chooses the shop in which he wishes to specialize. If he chooses drafting he may take either architectural or mechanical drawing. During his third and fourth years he spends 4½ hours daily in vocational preparation for his chosen occupation.

For girls, in addition to courses in general education, there are home economics, stenography, typewriting, bookkeeping, office practice, and filing.

Board members include David A. Crawford, vice president; Louis S. Taylor, secretary-treasurer; Sewell L. Avery, Charles A. Liddle, Emery T. Filbey, and Harriet Lowden Madlener, granddaughter of George M. Pullman.

Atwood Heights PTA to Hear Talk on Friday

Mrs. E. J. Wocel, director of district 19 of the Illinois PTA congress, will speak before Atwood Heights PTA Friday night in the school. Her topic wil be "My Child and the PTA." Entertainment will include a playlet, "Pokey Hunters," and community singing.

MARINE LEGION POST TO SWEAR IN HOLDER OF MEDAL OF HONOR

Marine Capt. Joseph McCarthy, 5715 May st., congressional medal of honor winner, will receive a membership card in Chicago's Marine American Legion post at a dinner meeting at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Morrison hotel. Sen. Brooks [R., Ill.], post commander from 1925 to 1927, will present the card.

Capt. McCarthy

Other guests will be Col. Chester Fordney, commanding officer of the marine corps central procurement division; Col. Norman True, commanding officer of the Great Lakes marine detachment, and Maj. Alfred C. Cramp, commanding officer of marines in the naval air technical training center, 87th st. and Anthony av.

Post Comdr. Chester Caleb said all Chicago area marines and former marines are invited. Those interested in membership should contact Joseph M. Taussig, 29 S. La Salle st., finance officer.

Younger Generation Expresses Hearty Approval of Tibbar Club Exhibition

While enthusiastic adult rabbit raisers milled around a recent Tibbar club show, Kathleen Donnelly, 10705 Albany av., had a wonderful time with just two of the 250 rabbits attending. She chose a Chocolate Dutch and a Himalayan bunny. Kathleen knows quite a bit about rabbits, for her father, George Donnelly, is secretary of Tibbar (rabbit spelled backwards), a club for rabbit raisers. The club meets twice a month in the Hamilton park fieldhouse. Competition was keen between owners for blue, red, and yellow ribbons. The rabbits, however, took their winnings with typical placidity.

Raising rabbits has become a family affair with the Broberg clan and every Tibbarite is acquainted with the Broberg bunnies. The two brothers, their wives, and children turned out 10 strong with a couple of cases of rabbits for the show. Members of the clan (left to right, seated) include Joan, Karen, David, Kristan, Mrs. Henry Broberg, and Elaine; (standing) Henry Broberg, Mrs. B. C. Broberg, B. C. Broberg, and Marjorie. Joan, Karen, and Marjorie are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Broberg, 1723 E. 85th st., while the parents of David, Kristan, and Elaine are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Broberg, 8309 Luella av.

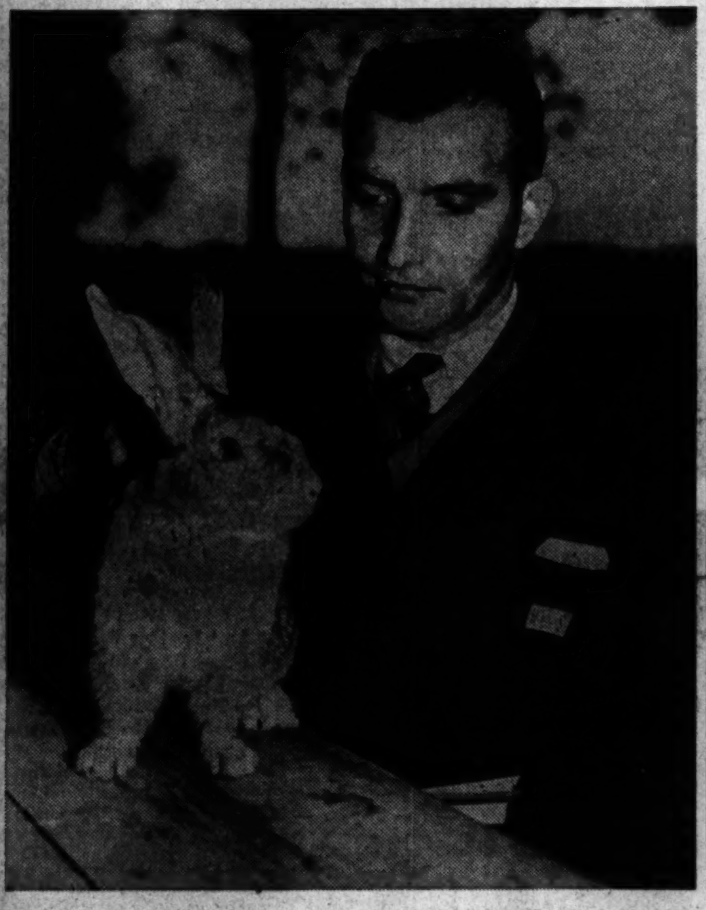
It was a great day for the rabbits, but they didn't seem to be aware of it. The mauling they got from both judges and proud owners only made them hungry or put them to sleep. Entries of New Zealand White bunnies were especially heavy and judges examined mounds of rabbit hair to award ribbons. For a one day affair the show was considered a success, but club members are looking forward to a three day event such as was held before the war. [TRIBUNE Photos]



One of the most expensive of rabbit pelts is that of the chinchilla. Frank Heinish, 5931 Maplewood av., proudly exhibited Rocky, his 7 month old heavyweight chinchilla while waiting to be judged. Rocky captured a prize at a recent show outside of Chicago.

The birds at the Jackson park sanctuary scarcely had time to meet their new boss, Richard Reichert, 731 W. 61st pl., when they had to leave for the south, but he feels it's probably just as well. Their absence will give him an opportunity to study up on them.

"O, I know a sparrow when I see one," he grinned, "but that's about all. The birds here at the sanctuary are all wild creatures and I probably would have done all the wrong things and scared them off."

Reichert came to the park about two months ago and shortly thereafter took his vacation. When he returned, armed with a couple of books on ornithology, the birds had gone. However, he hopes to be able to tell one species from the other by the end of the winter.

He Gets Around

Reichert has completed a unique triple play—from fishes to snakes to birds. Which is to say he started with the zoo in 1934 when the house was an aquarium. When the fish moved out and the snakes glided in three years later he stayed to take charge. And now, the birds.

"I didn't particularly care about snakes when I started," he said. "At that time jobs were rather scarce and I just made up my mind to like them."

Evidently a strong minded fellow, the former snake man is always ready to reminisce about his life among the serpents. He finally grew to like them. "Whenever we were expecting a shipment of new reptiles," he recalled happily, "it was all kind of exciting. We never knew just what we were going to get and were prepared for anything. Here at the sanctuary the birds come and go as they please."

Struck by Python

Reichert insists he's no snake authority. However, he found his handling of snakes determined whether they bit or not. "You must be careful and not get excited for that agitates the reptile," he advised. "Snakes seem to be a lot like people, they have different temperaments. They seem to be in a better mood sometimes than at others.'

"One time," he recalled, "When Dr. Young [Dr. Floyd S. Young, since retired] was still at the zoo he and I were trying to lift a python by means of a leather rope-like affair. The leather was wet and we still aren't sure what happened, but we think it slipped. Quick as a wink the snake struck, knocking me down and tearing Dr. Young's clothes. That was about the only time I had any real trouble."

If snakes like a calm, steady person they must have been fond of Reichert, for it is hard to visualize his being upset over anything.

Rows Out to Feed Birds

Life for him at the sanctuary probably will seem rather dull at first, what with no shipment of snakes coming in, or persons working with him. There's just the park district dog, Teddy.

He keeps busy however, setting out in his battered row boat twice a day to feed what birds are left. [It takes, by the way, 80 loaves of bread and close to 200 pounds of grain each week to keep the birds happy in the summer.] Tho the sanctuary is left to grow rather wild, it does take some keeping up. Between that duty and studying his new bird books Reichert hopes soon to become acclimated.

PAUL YARROWS GET MEDAL WON BY SON IN REICH

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Yarrow, 10867 Hoyne av., have received a bronze star medal awarded posthumously to their son, Lt. Donald W. Yarrow, who was killed in action in Germany on March 23. The presentation was made by Capt. F. M. Dolven at a ceremony at Morgan Park Military academy. Lt. Yarrow won the medal for heroic action Feb. 23 in Germany. In establishing an observation post he had to move thru heavy enemy fire. He and two comrades captured 16 Germans, four mortars, and ammunition.

Mrs. Cornelius H. Small is president of the society and the Rev. William A. Gorey is the spiritual director.

Gardens Won by Flossmoor, Palos Heights

Citizens of two southwest side communities recently pooled efforts to win prizes for exhibits in the recent garden roundup in Soldiers' field sponsored by the Chicago Horticultural society and Garden center. Laurance Armour, chairman, notified committees in Flossmoor and Palos Heights of the awards.

The prize consists of trees, shrubs, and other planting material sufficient to create a memorial garden. Planting will be done by volunteer gardeners who will pledge to care and maintain the garden in the future. A landscape architect of the Horticultural society will advise.

A committee of Flossmoor citizens headed by James Burdett and assisted by Dorthy Wickens and Clara Brinkerhoff heaped an array of vegetables in a giant Mexican basket. It contained beefsteak tomatoes, yellow tomatoes, golden bantam corn, savoy cabbage, giant lima beans, Kentucky wonder beans, wax beans, eggplant, Bermuda onions, beets, carrots, celery, and potatoes.

The Palos Heights exhibit consisted of peaches, grapes, and plums, all home grown. A bee hive with charts describing the activities of bees also was part of their exhibit. George Adams was chairman of the exhibiting committee which included Mrs. Frank Barta and Mark Garricson.

Committees of citizens representing civic and garden groups of each town will be chosen to select the site of the memorials and plan for their planting and care.

PURPLE HEARTS EARNED BY FIVE VETS OF PACIFIC

Japs Wound Three on Okinawa, 2 at Sea

Four southwest side service men who were injured in the battle of Okinawa and another wounded when a mine layer was sunk by the Japs recently were presented with Purple Hearts.

Pvt. John J. Lavin

CHILD SECURITY TO BE TOPIC OF PTA DISTRICT 19

Marquette Group to Hear FBI Agent

PTA district 19 will hold its annual fall conference Wednesday in Washington school, Chicago Heights. Theme of the all-day program will be "Security for Every Child."

The Rev. Frank Wright, pastor of First Christian church, at 10 a. m. will deliver the invocation. The welcoming address will be given by Ben A. Sylla, superintendent of schools. MARINE CAUGHT BY NIPS ON GUAM VISITS HIS UNCLE

Corp. Edward Maass, 24, a marine, who was on Guam when the Japs landed, and spent subsequent months in various Japanese prison camps, recently returned to visit his uncle, Edward Dillner of Dolton.

The marine enlisted in July, 1940, while he was attending Thornton Township High school. He was sent to Guam in April, 1941. Before the Japs landed he and two companions made their way into the hills, where they hid in a native hut. Several days later he was told by the natives that all marines had surrendered and he was taken to Japanese headquarters.

Maass was liberated from a prison camp in Osaka Sept. 10. He is now stationed at Great Lakes Naval Training center.

PETER RABBITS WRIGGLE NOSES FOR THE JUDGES

Few persons ever think of that plain drug store variety of bunny as being any particular breed, other than stuffed. But there are those who can recite the various brands of rabbits right off. "He represents a New Zealand White, judging by his soft white coat, large pink eyes, and long pink ears," they would say.

With such observers it is nearly always safe to assume they are members of the Tibbar club. Tibbar [a mystifying title until read backwards], a club for and of rabbit raisers, has members all over Chicago and in outlying towns. They meet twice monthly in the Hamilton park fieldhouse. Their slogan seems to be: "It's better meat than chicken." At least that's what they keep repeating to any one sceptical about the joys of raising rabbits.

250 "Furries" Entered

About 250 rabbits and their owners gathered recently for a one day show. Tibbarites arrive from miles around, each with a car load of bunnies, youngsters, or both. It was a great day for the rabbits. If aware of it, however, they took great pains not to let it be seen as they were weighed in for the judging, stared at, handled, and generally roughed up by both judges and proud owners. With typical bunnylike placidity they nibbled, dozed, and wiggled their noses hopefully at one another thru cage doors.

Competition was keen. Not between the cottontails, but between their owners. Many an animal was a disappointment merely because an ear wasn't quite right, his marking was slightly off, or he had a lazy tail. Red, blue, and yellow ribbons were awarded by two professional judges who grimly ploughed their way thru mounds of rabbit fur.

Some Are Specialists

Many of the hobbyiest raise several breeds. Others prefer to specialize. Proudly awaiting his chance with a judge was Frank Heinish, 5931 Maplewood av., carrying Rocky a 7 months heavy-weight chinchilla rabbit—fine eating and with a pelt more valuable than those of his brothers. Police Officer H. C. Geary, 1618 E. 84th pl., exhibited his prize checkered giant. A white animal with patches of gray and black on his nose, eyes, cheeks and ears, the entry was one of several Geary has raised in the last three years.

Tho the show was pronounced a success, members stated they were looking forward to one of the club's three day shows of pre-war quality. Plans for such a show will be made at future Tibbar meetings, said B. C. Broberg, 1723 E. 85th st., president. Other club officers include John Feltus, 2548 W. 109th st., vice president; George Donnelly, 10705 Albany av., secretary, and Norman Thorne, 6550 Laflin av., treasurer.

Two 2d District Groups to Meet on Wednesday

The 2d district law observance department with Mrs. Thomas G. Hannon, chairman, and the legislation department, Mrs. Willard R. Taylor, chairman, will hold a joint meeting at 10 a. m. Wednesday at federation headquarters, 30 W. Washington st. Mrs. Edwin Eells, chairman of the Illinois child labor committee, will speak on the "Child Labor Law and Its Advantages."

The garden department with Mrs. D. K. Penny, chairman, presiding, will meet at 10:30 a. m. Thursday at federation headquarters.

BRONZE STAR GIVEN LT. HOWARD KELLY, NEPHEW OF MAYOR

Lt. Howard F. Kelly, 7332 Union av., nephew of Mayor Kelly, recently received the bronze star for "outstanding and meritorious" service performed near Pilsen, Czechoslovakia, during the closing days of the war, it has been announced.

Howard Kelly

Kelly, detachment commander of a task force of aviation engineers of the 834th engineer aviation battalion, led his unit to Pilsen despite an uncertain enemy situation and immediately prepared a field for operational use.

He participated in air field construction operations in the United Kingdom, France, Belgium, Germany, Czechoslovakia, and Austria.

Bird Sanctuary Head and Helper

New head at the Jackson park bird sanctuary is Richard Reichert, 731 W. 61st pl., who after making friends with the park district dog, Teddy, bought several books on birds and proceeded to learn a little about his business. Formerly in charge of the reptile house at the Lincoln park zoo, Reichert says that from herpetology to ornithology is quite a jump. [TRIBUNE Photo]

ADAMS RESIGNS; BEVERLY Y GETS NEW SECRETARY

Board Fetes Retiring Chief at Dinner

Glenn D. Adams, executive secretary of Beverly Y. M. C. A., will resign Nov. 1 and assume a new post at the downtown Y offices until the end of the year. At that time he expects to go into business for himself. Adams was the first executive secretary of Beverly Y and was one of its founders 13 years ago.

Robert Freitag

Announcement also was made by Frederick W. Snider, chairman of the board, that Robert Freitag, general secretary of the Battle Creek, Mich., Y. M. C. A., will take over Adams' position.

Resolution of Thanks

Resolutions of appreciation and thanks, and a desk were presented the retiring secretary by Municipal Court Judge Smith, member of the board. The award was made at Beverly Y's 10th annual dinner in the Morgan Park Methodist church, 110th st. and Longwood dr.

A youth program, participated in by 2,000 boys and girls was discussed by John W. Jolly, board member and chairman of the dinner committee. An athletic program last year for high and grammar school boys offered foothball, basketball, volleyball, tennis, three track meets, boxing, and a tournament, swimming, and a bowling league. More than 300 boys planted vegetable gardens and 1,000 were in the spring marble tournament.

Every Mother-to-be Should Wear A New-Lift
MATERNITY SUPPORT
DESIGNED FOR SCIENTIFIC PRE-NATAL CARE AND THE HEALTH OF THE YOUNG MOTHER-TO-BE

Designed for young mothers who dread wearing a heavy, boned garment . . . this NU-LIFT MATERNITY SUPPORT combines all the comforts of the garments you normally wear with the support that is so vital during this important time. There is no binding or pressure because the weight is carried from the shoulders. Adjustable side laces and darts. This is a two-in-one garment that can be converted for post-natal wear by interchanging the front panel. Thus you will be assisted in a more rapid return to your normal figure by NU-LIFT MATERNITY SUPPORT. (It is recommended by leading obstetricians.)
12.50
FOR POST-NATAL WEAR

With the above garment is an interchangeable front panel support that will help restore your figure to its former lines.
BETTER BODY BALANCE

Scientific inner band in back gives you restful comfort, helps avoid backache and allows you to maintain better body balance.
NU-LIFT PANTIE SUPPORT FOR GENERAL WEAR
It's new! Detachable and adjustable crotch with firm front panel for abdominal support and control. Lacer for adjustment, and soft back with inner supporting band. Excellent for post-natal, post-operative and sportswear . . . also general wear. Come in and try one on!

U. S. O. COMPANY PERFORMS FOR 1 WOUNDED VET

Gives 500 Shows in Ten Months Overseas

BY EDNA CARROLL

The screen star who sang recently to an audience of one returned overseas veteran in Hollywood bowl had nothing on the U. S. O. troupe with which Eleanor Christian, 6507 Wood st., traveled in Europe. The troupe put on a complete show in a hospital ward in Italy where one veteran lay, too seriously wounded to be moved.

Eleanor Christian

Miss Christian, a tap ballet dancer, recently returned from a 10 month tour of army camps in Italy, Sicily, Capri, Germany, France, and Austria. The company played to audiences ranging from the one wounded soldier to 2,000 fighters packed in bomb shaken theaters.

GI Gives Coat to Singer

Leaving New York in November, the troupe played its first show on a makeshift stage in Italy. Altho the temperature was usually near freezing with a brisk breeze whipping across the stage, Miss Christian said the girls danced in brief costumes. Her legs were often blue from the cold when she finished her number, she recalled.

She also recalled one occasion when a sympathetic GI placed his great coat around the shoulders of a shivering U. S. O. vocalist while she was singing.

Miss Christian praised the receptiveness of the soldier audiences, selecting combat troops as the easiest to please. She noted, however, a different attitude in audiences in the European theater following V-E day. The soldiers seemed to be pre-occupied and their laughter and applause was less spontaneous. Invariably two or three children were perched on the soldiers' laps.

Artillery Fire Forms Background

Their most receptive audience, she said, was the first group of prisoners to be liberated in Italy. Following their usual custom, the girls had coffee with the soldiers in the mess hall after the performance, and "the boys couldn't talk enough to us," she said.

She estimated the troupe put on 500 shows on the tour, with two shows scheduled six days a week. In Europe, she said, their schedule was a little easier because they gave both daily shows in the same place.

Some of the shows were put on as close as two miles to the front, with artillery fire and exploding bombs as a background. The stages frequently were hurriedly assembled from mess hall tables. Once, north of Florence, Italy, an infantry division extended itself in laying a concrete stage. The concrete was still soft when the show started and Miss Christian said there were little holes in the stage at the conclusion of her tap dance. So far as she knows, the concrete still is soft, information gathered from U. S. O. shows that played there subsequently indicates.

Soldiers Give Her Pet

The troupe lived in bombed out hotels and houses and traveled by plane, jeep, or weapons carrier. Once in Germany the trip in a weapons carrier was so rough it caused the reeds of the accordion to fall in and the show had to be put on without music. Miss Christian said the troupe would have done the show if they'd been forced to whistle the accompaniment because it was the first entertainment that particular infantry company had had.

In Germany Miss Christian acquired a nondescript dog named Aphrodite, the gift of some soldiers going into battle who wanted a good home for their pet. Miss Christian smuggled the pup home in a suitcase.

Miss Christian's husband, Lt. Norman F. Stockho of St. Louis, Mo., pilot of a B-25, was killed two years ago in a crash in Tampa, Fla. His death occurred three weeks after their marriage.

Ready for Citizens Show

CITIZENS SHOW SPOTLIGHT ON DU SABLE HIGH

Du Sable High school will be saluted on the Citizens of Tomorrow show over W-G-N from 9:30 to 10 a. m. Saturday. The program will be recorded at 1 p. m. Wednesday in the school auditorium, 4934 Wabash av., before guests.

John E. Meegan, principal, will pay tribute to the 1,152 students who were in the military service from Du Sable. Six students were killed. They are: James Lee Black, steward's mate 1st class; Corp. John C. Hicks, Lt. Raymond McEwen, Pvt. Carl Nelson, Pvt. Lonnie Smith, and Pvt. John Yoind.

Will Honor Scholars

Philip Maxwell of THE TRIBUNE who will be master of ceremonies, will add the names of two more students to the honor roll: Reatha Herndon, 4824 South Park way, and Thomas K. Hostetler of Decatur [Ill.] Senior High school.

Reatha has been an honor student for three and a half years, is president of the senior class, and chairman of the Junior Red Cross. Hostetler has a straight A average. He is editor of the newspaper and was elected president of the Champaign district, State Association of Student Councils.

Gilda Burns, 16, 4751 St. Lawrence av., will be the student star entertainer. A lyric soprano, she will sing "Vissi d'Arte" from Puccini's "La Tosca." Members of the Special Voice chorus will sing Schubert's "To Music," and Nagell's "A Faithful Shepherd Is My Lord." E. M. Turley will direct.

Name Quiz Entrants

Taking part in the quiz will be James Andrews, Raymond Harth, Reatha Herndon, Rose Locker, Virgil Matthews, and Karon Watson. Cheerleaders will be Louis Baker, James Seay, Frances Suthern, Doris Purvis, Marjorie Williams, Eleanor Wright, and Lillian Young.

Guests who have been invited to witness the recording of the show include: Marjorie S. Jayner of Walker Beauty college; Irvin C. Mallison of the board of education; John Johnson, editor of Negro Digest; John Sengstacke, publisher of the Chicago Defender, and Ald. De Priest [3d].

NEWSPAPERS put you ON BUSY STREET

PARTNERS IN "LIVING" SINCE 1875

YOUR LIFE HAS BEEN OUR LIFE FOR 70 YEARS

You see, it all started with your grandmother that day back in 1875 when she came to us for her bridal finery, and invited us to her wedding. That began our friendship. It wasn't long afterwards that your dad appeared on the scene—a lusty infant—and, thru the swift passing of time, we outfitted him for his confirmation, his graduation, his own wedding. . . . One day he came in to buy a sled. He had a brand new daughter, he said—and we chuckled a little at the things fathers buy for new daughters. That baby was you. Now, to us, it has seemed no time at all since that baby sled . . . your first party dress . . . your college wardrobe . . . and that beautiful, specially engraved watch our buyer selected for your engagement gift. Yet here you are today, selecting your own wedding dress and trousseau—ecstatically awaiting the return of that soldier boy to whom we've mailed so many remembrances from you.

We knew your family before you were born . . . and we've watched you grow up and raise your own family.

Yes, that's the way it's been, all down these 70 years, as one generation follows another. We've made thousands of fine friends. We've shared your greatest moments. We've been happy at your weddings, loved your babies, been proud of your successes, and now are rejoicing as your boys (and ours) come home. More than you think, these moments touch our hearts. That's why we say, in one way or another, your life IS our life.

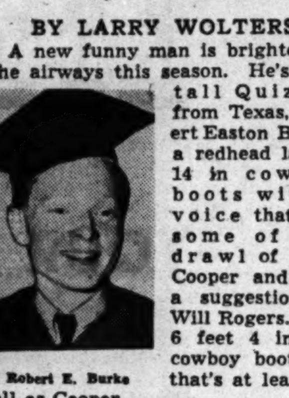
TEXAS KID WITH DRAWL MAKES HIT ON RADIO

Tall, Slim Redhead Has Way with Mike

BY LARRY WOLTERS

A new funny man is brightening the airways this season. He's that tall Quiz Kid from Texas, Robert Easton Burke, a redhead lad of 14 in cowboy boots with a voice that has some of the drawl of Gary Cooper and just a suggestion of Will Rogers. He's 6 feet 4 in his cowboy boots—that's at least as tall as Cooper.



Robert E. Burke

Bob comes from San Antonio and is "up in these parts under protest." He calls himself a D. P. [displaced person] from Texas. He's going to school in Milwaukee and comes down each Sunday for the broadcast.

Bob has made eight appearances to date and it appears that he may stay a long time. He knows the answers and he has personality that has listeners cheering from coast to coast. His voice is deep, deliberate, and slow. He has a fine sense of timing and a deep south accent that don't hurt him, either. He's the best informed kid on aviation that has blown into the Quiz Kids' classroom.

Because of his drawl listeners have asked about his nationality. He's got a lot of Irish blood in him, some English, and some German. He is a great-great-grandson of Rufus Eaton, who was Thomas Jefferson's private secretary. His family, you can see, has been around for some time.

Comment: Fred Allen, despite a year's absence, seems to have lost none of his old touch. Listeners commented that he was in fine fettle last Sunday, apparently undismayed by the fact he has a brand new supporting cast except for Minerva Pious.

Request performance, which bowed in last Sunday, isn't up to Command Performance, the overseas show for American troops. It lacks the surprises and humorous turns the service men's request show has had thruout the war years. Diana Lynn, Frank Morgan, Hoagy Carmichael, and Rudy Vallee will contribute to R. P. tonight at 9 over WBBM.

Looking back on the series broadcasts: The games were carried around the globe on the largest network ever put together. Mutual sent it to some 500 stations in the United States and Canada. The Armed Forces Radio service relayed it to 150 of its stations overseas and it was picked up thru sound systems by navy ships. American short wave stations beamed it abroad. The series also was sent to a Cuban network in Spanish and the games were reconstructed in French for several stations in Quebec.

Numerous fans commented that they missed the experting of Red Barber and Bob Elson. Bill Slater and Al Helfer, who did the play by play, are known mainly in New York where they broadcast local games the past season.

PHILHARMONIC WILL HIGHSPOT SCHELLING WORK

The New York Philharmonic orchestra, under the baton of Artur Rodzinski, will highspot Ernest Schelling's orchestral fantasy, "A Victory Ball," on WBBM-CBS at 3 p. m. today. The program also will include Beethoven"s Symhony No. 5 in C minor, the Prelude to Act I. of Wagner's "Lohengrin," and Strauss' tone poem, "Till Eulenqpiegel's Merry Pranks."

Review Stand Subject

"What Should Be the National Labor Policy?" will be the subject of the University of Chicago Round Table on WMAQ-NBC at 1:30 p. m. today.

Air True Story

Ozzie Nelson and Harriet Hilliard (Mrs. N.) portray the story of their own lives on their show over WBBM-CBS at 5 p. m. Sundays.

NBC ORCHESTRA WILL PRESENT NEW SYMPHONY

The Fifth Symphony of Don Gillis, production director of the Symphony of the Air hour, will be played for the first time by the NBC Symphony orchestra, under direction of Frank Black, over WMAQ-NBC at 5 o'clock today. Black also will conduct the orchestra in Richard Rodgers' "Carousel Waltz," Dinicu's "Hora Staccato" as arranged by Jascha Heifetz, and the Polka and Fugue from Weinberger's "Schwanda."

Dorothy Maynor on Sunday Evening Hour

DorothyMaynor will be soloist on the Sunday Evening Hour over WLS-ABC at 8 o'clock tonight. Miss Maynor will sing Cimara's "Stornellata Marinara," Beach's "Ah! Love but a Day," and Hageman's "Me Company Along." Accompanied by a chorus, Miss Maynor also will sing the Negro spirituals, "Steal Away" and "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray." Fritz Reiner will direct the orchestra in the Overture to "The Secret of Suzanne," by Wolf-Ferrari, a Symphonic picture from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," and other works.

Chicagoans on WBBM's Fort Sheridan Show

Welcome Home, a program from the Fort Sheridan separation center which is aired over WBBM at 11:45 o'clock Sunday nights, will consist of interviews with five Chicago men tonight. Sgt. Joseph Gerling, 1423 Oakdale av.; Corp. Dan Curtiss, 1008 N. Mason av.; Corp. Anthony Zigmont, 4400 S. Ashland av.; Corp. Michael Eannanino, 1429 Mohawk, and Corp. George Ryan, 224 W. North av., will be heard during discharge proceedings.

Gertrude Lawrence Is Hall of Fame Guest

When Gertrude Lawrence visits the Radio Hall of Fame on WENR-ABC at 6 o'clock tonight, she will sing "Limehouse Blues" and star in a scene from her autobiography, "A Star Danced." Paul Whiteman, his orchestra, and Martha Tilton are regulars on the show.

KERN OPERETTA SCHEDULED FOR THEATER OF AIR

"Music in the Air," Jerome Kern's operetta about Viennese life in the 19th century, will be offered on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network next Saturday from 10 to 11 p. m. Marion Claire, soprano, and Bruce Foote, baritone, will star in the presentation. Ruth Slater and Angelo Raffaelli will sing supporting roles.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak during the broadcast.

The Theater of the Air chorus and orchestra, directed by Henry Weber, will be heard in some of Kern's most popular tunes: "The Song Is You," "I've Told Every Little Star," "Love Was Born," "I'm Alone," "When Spring Is in the Air," and "There's a Hill Beyond a Hill."

Ingrid Bergman, Larry Adler with Benny Gang

Ingrid Bergman and Larry Adler, who accompanied Jack Benny on a U. S. O. tour overseas last summer, will join the Benny gang on WMAQ-NBC at 7 o'clock tonight when it entertains at the Santa Barbara redistribution center before men who have just returned from Jap prisons. Larry Stevens will sing, "If I Love You."

Air Mozart's Jupiter Symphony Over W-G-N

The Chicago Philharmonic orchestra, conducted by Henry Weber, will present Mozart's "Jupiter" symphony over W-G-N and WGNB Tuesday night at 9:30 o'clock. The program also will include Improvisations from Strauss' Violin Sonata and five Etudes for Orchestra by Florian Mueller.

Bergen-McCarthy Guest

Hildegarde will be a guest on the Edgar Bergen-Charlie McCarthy show over WMAQ-NBC at 8 o'clock tonight. Music and song furnished by Ray Noble's orchestra and Anita Gordon, teen-age vocalist.

NOISE CONTROLS TO MAKE HOME MORE LIVABLE

Even Plaster Will Help Reduce Sound

BY LOUISE BARGELT

There will be many more controls found in new and remodeled houses in the future than we have enjoyed in the past.

There will be better control of noises in a house—partly by materials used in construction—in the finishing and furniture of rooms, in the careful planning of floor layouts, and in the scientific designing of storage and work spaces.

Plasters More Quiet

Sound absorbent plasters already have been developed and can be used on walls and ceilings at very little additional cost. It also is possible, if one is building new walls or remodeling interior partitions, to have the plasterer employ resilient clips on walls and ceilings.

These will help to reduce noises between rooms, as the plaster base is held away from the studs by these clips. There likewise are sound absorbent insulating boards for basement game rooms and areas where noise is going to be a problem.

If a house is planned so that rooms for relaxation are separated from workrooms or spaces where there will be considerable activity of one sort or another, those areas where quiet is desired will be noticeably freer from unwelcome sounds.

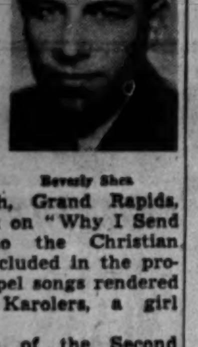
For Better Fire Control

Fire control in a house can be greatly increased by the use of fire resistant or fire retardent materials. Also by wisely planned space for fire extinguishers and by thoro sealing of foundation walls against possible entry of rodents. These pests like to nibble on matches and enjoy the taste of electric wire insulation.

These various controls will add to the enjoyment of a house and increase the deep sense of satisfaction and security which should come from home ownership.

GOSPEL SINGER TO VISIT CHURCH ON S. WOLCOTT

Beverly Shea will sing several of his favorite gospel songs at 8 p. m. Thursday in Hope Reformed church, 7800 Wolcott av. The purpose of the program, sponsored by a group of Chicago laymen, is to stimulate a greater interest in Christian education.



Beverly Shea

The Rev. William C. De Jong of the Seventh Reformed church, Grand Rapids, Mich., will speak on "Why I Send My Children to the Christian School." Also included in the program will be gospel songs rendered by the Kings Karolers, a girl quartet.

Peter Meekma of the Second Christian Reformed church, Roseland, is chairman of the Chicagoland Christian schools committee, sponsors. The Rev. William Masselink, pastor of Second Christian Reformed church of Englewood, 72d st. and Peoria av., is chairman.

Jewish Center

Jean Reisapsel, danseuse, will be guest of the Women's division of the Jewish Community center of Hyde Park at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow at the center, 5227 Blackstone av.

You'll Enjoy Your Own OUTDOOR FIREPLACE

Now it's EASY to have an outdoor fireplace in the privacy of your own grounds. Invite favorite friends to enjoy sizzling steaks broiled over glowing charcoal or wood . . . an early morning breakfast of pancakes and sausage . . . or an impromptu wiener roast!

And it's really simple to build with a Hancock SKELETON UNIT, which comes complete with genuine rolled steel frame and doors (not cast iron); and gray-iron firegrate, cooking grate, hot plate and front. Build brick or stone masonry around it, as simple or elaborate as your taste dictates, from the detailed plans furnished for each basic design. Accessory units, such as ovens and barbecue spits, available for those who wish them. Hancock Outdoor Fireplace Units are solidly constructed, long enduring, are standard equipment in many leading park systems.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Oct. 15

Dutch bulbs have arrived in numbers. Among these are hyacinths, bulbous plants that are useful for growing in the home in pots or as bedding plants in the outdoor garden.

The bulbs do well when placed singly in special glasses that enable the roots to grow downward in water but which hold the bulb above water. It is essential that the root system be well formed as with tulips, crocus, and some other bulbs before bringing to the lighted window.

Grow a few pots of tulips or other bulbs that are available, for they will brighten up any window.

Tuesday, Oct. 16

If the ground is in condition to spade, be sure to turn it over now. By so doing so many insect pests will be killed thru the action of freezing and thawing. As the spading progresses, turn under a copious amount of humus in some form.

Decayed manure is about the best material for this purpose, but substitutes will do. Buy a bale of chopped alfalfa and straw and work some of it into each trench turned up.

Peat muck, decayed leaves, compost, which most gardeners never have, or any vegetable material will suffice. Humus is necessary because of its bacterial action.

Wednesday, Oct. 17

If an amaryllis bulb is bought, put it to the neck, and water to settle the soil.

Bulbs growing in the garden should be lifted and dried off, then stored in a dry, dark place until they show activitiy. If thrips appear when the plants are growing in the field suitable sprays may be used to control them.

Peonies still can be planted. Roses can be planted up to heavy freezing, but never allow the roots to be exposed to the air and dig the holes large enough to spread out the roots. Firm the soil around and between the roots.

Thursday, Oct. 18

Many rock garden plants can be planted this month. Clear out or reduce the plants that spread too rapidly, otherwise the slower kinds will be crowded out. Wait until the ground freezes before applying a mulch to hardy plants, bulbs, and others.

All fall planted stock is greatly benefited with a mulch. Parsnips and oyster plants are safe if allowed to stand outdoors all winter. They will be quite tender when lifted in spring.

If any hardy chrysanthemums are in flower try lifting and planting in pots for indoor use. They are among the easiest of all plants to transplant.

Friday, Oct. 19

Trees may be fed at this time. Use any recommended formulae or purchase the special plant food that is available for them.

Lay in a supply of potting soil for early spring use. Some plants will need transplanting and soil should be on hand.

Visit the grower who has a varied lot of plants and buy a few small ones to grow on in the window. Try some new begonia, for almost all kinds are ornamental even when in leaf.

Try a cyclamen, a few table ferns, and one of the best plants is the clivia or kaffir lily from South Africa.

Saturday, Oct. 20

Take care of the rubber plant, the screw pine, the Christmas cactus, the sansevieria. If the rubber plant grows quite large, cut it back in the spring when it resumes active growth, or discard all overgrown plants and replace with young, active plants.

CITIZENS BROOD IN VILLA PARK OVER CHICKENS

War Time Crowing Is Held Un-Peacelike

Villa Park has joined the list of west suburbs seeking reconversion in the matter of chicken raising. According to complaints brought before the village board, many nonkeepers of poultry feel that during the war time food shortage crowing roosters in the early morn were not to be criticized. Now, they crave a return to undisturbed hours of sleep.

Among anti-chicken raisers who have contacted Mrs. Marion Noble, village clerk, by phone, one insisted the crowing in his neighbor's yard started as early as 3 a. m.

Forest Park took the initiative some weeks ago by instructing chicken raisers to get rid of their fowls by Jan. 1. A village ordinance restraining poultry raisers had not been enforced during the war.

Theodore F. Ashford, village attorney of Villa Park, explains that while there is at present no village ordinance banning chicken raising, unless it is declared a nuisance, such an ordinance could be drafted.

Alfred A. Hinkelman, Villa Park village president, has arranged for a pro and con discussion of the chicken raising subject at the village board meeting tomorrow night.

Artist to Lecture Before Chicago Lawn Women

Mrs. Melita Ervin, artist, will lecture on "You Have Creative Ability," before the Chicago Lawn Young Woman's club tomorrow night in Marquette park fieldhouse. Mrs. Ervin will illustrate her talk with drawings. Mrs. E. S. Fairfield, 3d district art chairman, will be a guest.

Am Echod Sisterhood

The Sisterhood of Am Echod will hold their earning fund reward luncheon at 12:30 p. m. Wednesday in the Sherry hotel. Mrs. G. A. Vinik is president.

'The Winter's Tale' Coming to Blackstone Oct. 29

Shakespearean Play to Open Guild Season

By Claudia Cassidy

"The Winter's Tale," which trumpets the Theater Guild season into the Blackstone Oct. 29, is so rarely performed nowadays even in the most comprehensive Shakespearean revels that guild emissaries are gravely handing out synopses of the plot as they visit the newspapers. Such literary digest of the pastoral-comical-tragical-historical school is subject to some of the flaws that make it difficult to tell the story of, say, "Il Trovatore" or "The Masked Ball" in a few well chosen words. Suppose we skip it for more sketchy reminder.

The general idea might be that in his mellow autumnal mood of idyllic romance Shakespeare got to thinking of all the characters he had condemned to high tragedy and mused on how things would come out with a happy ending. Say, for example, he worried a little about Othello and decided the man deserved a better break. So this time he removed the soot from both skin and 'scutcheon. He called him Leontes, King of Sicilia, cut Iago right out of the script, and allowed his green eyed hero, after a mere 16 years remorse, to regain the wife and repudiated child his jealousy had cast into exterior darkness. Sacrificed to the gods of theatrical justice—for you can't stop old habits overnight—is Leontes' son, who dies of grief for his mother, thinking her dead when actually she is only posing as a statue.

Now that is "The Winter's Tale," or at least the best the guild and I can do for you in this amount of space, and don't tell me you remembered it all, anyway. Only John Kieran remembers things like that. The rest of us will have rusty recollections refreshed when the revival comes riding in on Stewart Chaney's gala décor, with Henry Daniell of the cold steel eyes as Leontes, Jessie Royce Landis as his hapless but all forgiving Hermione, Florence Reed as her loyal friend, Romney Brent as the clown, Autolycus, and Whitford Kane as the shepherd who cares for the child Perdita [Geraldine Strook] on the Shakespearean "seacoast of Bohemia," where in true idyllic style a prince sees her and falls in love.

According to industrious couriers who have burrowed in the files and emerged blowing great gusts of dust and tradition, it would have been a neat quarter of a century since a professional "Winter's Tale" was given in this country—except for Boston. Boston says the Stratford players gave it there in 1931, thereby frustrating a resonant phrase. But the guild sticks firmly by its statistical guns in declaring that since the opening performance at the Old Globe May 15, 1611, "The Winter's Tale" has been played 13 times over here and 49 times in England. Naturally, England got a head start.

Just 209 years after the premiere, or, if you don't want to bother with a pencil, on May 15, 1820, one Mrs. Bartley played Hermione in the first American performance at New York's Park theater. There were revivals in 1830, 1851, 1852, 1856, 1858, and 1860, a statement which sounds precisely like one of Mr. Kieran's replies to Mr. Fadiman. After the Civil war it disappeared until 1871, and from then on more is known about specific productions.

For instance, a few people may remember the Hermione of the Polish star, Mme. Janouschek, who played the role in 1881, and no doubt many cherish recollections of lovely Mary Anderson, who at Wallack's in New York in 1888 played the dual roles of mother and daughter, parts she chose for her theatrical farewell when she retired at the peak of her fame.

In 1899 Kathryn Kidder played the two roles in a production with Louis James and Charles B. Hanford, and my indefatigable Theater Guild diggers in the archives report that of this venture the critic, Alan Dale, remarked, "the production was a creditable one; the scenery was newer than were the methods of the actors." Of Mr. Hanford's way with Leontes, he added, "he flung himself all over the stage and ate so much of the scenery it is lucky the play is not to be repeated before Friday night."

Viola Allen's production came in 1904 [she also used the dual roles for her farewell to the stage] with Henry Jewett and Warner Oland, later of "Charlie Chan" fame, in her troupe. Ellen Terry was Hermione to Sir Herbert Tree's Leontes in London of 1906, and in 1910, the play was revived at New York's New theater, later the Century, with Edith Wynne Matthison as Hermione and Rose Coghlin as Pauline. A couple of silent movies were devoted to the subject, if devoted is quite the right word, and Karl Goldmark wrote an opera based on the play, tho no one seems to know much about it.

Aside from Boston, which clings to the last word with its Stratford visitors, the most recent American production is said to have been one that featured Dorothy Johnson as Hermione, in 1921. England has kept the play more vividly alive. In 1923 it was revived with Lilian Braithwaite as Hermione, with Frank Cellier, George Howe, and Baliol Holloway. Ten years later it was done at London's Old Vic with Roger Livesay and Peggy Ashcroft, and it bobbed up again in 1936 with William Devlin and Vivienne Bennett. A full length broadcast was done there in 1935 with Laurence Olivier as Leontes and beautiful Diana Wynyard as Hermione.

So if the Theater Guild's first venture into the realm of classic repertory in the general style of Old Vic should prove the success most playgoers hope it will be, there's a nice juicy precedent for telling "The Winter's Tale" some of these Sunday nights over the guild's own radio hookup. But from what I hear of the way the settings and Jessie Royce Landis look, maybe they should wait for television.

The Reason Szell Refused to Conduct "Parsifal"

SUPPOSE we drain the rumor market of those fantastic tales as to why George Szell refused to conduct "Parsifal" for the Chicago opera. The facts are simple. In the spring Fausto Cleva, general director of the company, announced promising plans for revival of Wagner's festival drama, which included augmented orchestra and chorus and plenty of preparation. Mr. Szell made specific requests, particularly in the matter of that orchestra's quality, in order to give Chicago the distinguished Wagner with which in the last two seasons he has electrified audiences at the Metropolitan. One of those requests was that the Chicago Symphony's Florian Mueller play first oboe. When Mr. Szell arrived to begin rehearsals he found that his specifications had not been met, possibly for reasons quite beyond Mr. Cleva's control, and he withdrew, leaving any announcement that was to be made to the discretion of the opera company. The company made none, even when requested to do so.

The point of telling this story is that Mr. Szell did not stamp out in a flurry of temperamental nonsense. He left quietly because he was unwilling to conduct a performance which he would have considered hopelessly inadequate. Perhaps, if we are lucky, he will come with the Metropolitan in the spring, for he has now completely recovered from the double mastoid operation that upset his bookings last spring and summer. You remember he had to cancel Ravinia because his doctor flatly refused to let him travel on an air conditioned train so soon after that serious operation.

Losing Mr. Szell means that only Bruno Walter and Eugene Goossens remain as known quantities on Mr. Cleva's staff, while such singers as Lauritz Melchior, Helen Traubel, Lily Pons, Lotte Lehmann, Eleanor Steber, and Licia Albanese are eloquently among the missing. It is too early to know what to expect of an opera season that got off to such a dismaying start and perhaps it is too early to make any guesses about a Chicago Symphony season that began with what must have been the most inauspicious concert in its 54 years of once distinguished history. But the suspicion will not be downed that Chicago music is becoming habitually second rate. It can be rescued from this supine slump only by the vigilance and devotion of Chicagoans who know the difference—and care.

Ballet Russe May Restore "Raymonda"

If the Ballet Russe comes back in the spring, and the chances are good, it will have several new ballets and possibly the restoration of "Raymonda," the Petipa work in the grand style commissioned long ago from Glazounoff by the famed Maryinsky. Originally the idea was to revive fragments of the ballet, but the deeper George Balanchine and Sergei Denham delved into its three acts, the more they became convinced that the public would like it all. So the project is cooking over a slow but steady fire.

Meanwhile the complete balletomane will want to know about the new book on Alexandra Danilova, written by A. E. Twysden and just published in London by C. W. Beaumont for the mysterious sum of 21s. net. Miss Twysden is an Englishwoman who has been in Chicago in pursuit of copy about her idol, and you must take her book with the occasional grain of salt necessary to season any work of such adoration. But it makes lively reading and it is packed with information about Danilova from her days at the Imperial ballet school to the present and it holds such typical Danilova touches as the time she got so plump a rival ballerina asked if she had toothache and when she asked Balanchine, then her husband, about her dancing, he said, "Well, you are much too fat and you danced abominably." Cruel words even from a husband, but, ah, look at the lady now.

Anyway, I hope this book is carefully read by a girl who told me she thought Danilova's role in "Coppelia" should be split up among the other dancers "to give them a chance." Danilova's first solo after years of the most gruelling training was the tiny prayer danced in this year's "Coppelia" by Chouteau, and Danilova thinks she got that because of her long, wavy hair. And do you know that she didn't create the role of the street dancer in Massine's "Beau Danube"? Furthermore, when she took it over she was warned by Delarova that the costume was hideously unbecoming, being the wrong color and the wrong length. Danilova thought it lovely, like "the foam of the sea," and she disposed of the awkward length by saying, "I will play with it." The result is one of the most bewitching bits in ballet.

Nathan's Theater Book Out This Week

George Jean Nathan's "Theater Book of the Year" for 1944-'45 will be out this week [Alfred A. Knopf, $3] and, as usual, it is one of the spicy indispensables of the shelf you never have to dust because you use the books all the time. As you know, this is Mr. Nathan's salty record of the New York season, complete with dates and casts and full of fascinating ramblings by a man who declines to be stuck with a dull subject when he can be brilliant on a lively one. I particularly like the review of "Embezzled Heaven," which turns into a treatise on glamor girls, stage and Hollywood vintage. It defines Tallulah Bankhead as "a nitroglycerine sandwich, three decker with mustard." Every other woman in the world is going to be envious.

From the Mail Bag

Letters: From Duncan Hines his fascinating cook book [moral to me, remember Danilova!] and the fact that he has his attorney trying to do something about those outmoded signs. I know just how he feels. Ancient broken down shows keep on quoting the shiniest of first night reviews. . . . From Lt. Walter Dakin Williams, near Calcutta, thanks to the OVERSEAS TRIBUNE for keeping him informed on his brother's play. Seems Tennessee Williams is more apt to write plays than letters. . . . From Michelette Burani, indignation that I inadvertently called her an Italian, for which gross error I apologize in my very best French. . . . From Thomas C. Chalkus, a tantalizing program of Lehmann's San Francisco "Rosenkavalier," with the note, "I shall always cherish the performance as one of my great moments in opera." . . . From Eddie Dowling, "Am getting 'St. Lazar's Pharmacy' ready for you. I will open it in Montreal, then Toronto, then Chicago for a run. I want it to be perfect when Chicago sees it." Amen to that, sir.

One Symphony and 2 Operas on His List

By Albert Goldberg

Chicago will have the most extended opportunity yet afforded it to study and profit from the art of Bruno Walter when the famous conductor will direct four performances of the Chicago Opera—"La Forza del Destino" on Oct. 29 and Nov. 7, "The Marriage of Figaro" on Nov. 10 and 17—and in the interval will be heard here for the first time as a symphonic conductor when he leads the Chicago Symphony orchestra in a special pension fund concert at Orchestra hall on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 4.

Mr. Walter belongs to the steadily diminishing race of musical giants who have carried over into our generation the musical glories and traditions of a day that has gone forever. He may, in fact, be considered the last representative of Germany's golden age of music that flowered in the first part of the century up to the accession of power by the Nazis.

Mr. Walter was one of the first victims of Nazi persecution. One of the earliest acts of the new regime in March, 1933, was to cancel a concert at which Mr. Walter was scheduled to conduct the famous Leipzig Gewandhaus orchestra, of which he had been appointed permanent conductor three years previously, on the grounds that it "threatened public order and security." Incidentally, it was Richard Strauss who at once picked up the baton which had been taken from Walter's hands and went on with the concert, and it is typical of Bruno Walter's lofty and impersonal attitude toward his art that he continued to play those works of Strauss which he considers musical masterpieces. His explanation is characteristic: "I dislike Strauss as a person, and I abhor everything for which he has stood in recent years. But Strauss is a genius and some of his works are masterpieces. I cannot in all honesty boycott masterpieces because I detest their composer."

Bruno Walter's career is an interesting example of the long period of development and incubation to which the talents of even the most talented musicians were subjected under the old European system, producing artists of a completeness and versatility that our present short cut methods of education, with the stress on degrees and diplomas and the early and uncurbed appetite for sensational publicity, have thus far failed to bring forth.

Born Bruno Walter Schlesinger in Berlin in 1876, the future conductor was graduated from the Stern conservatory as a gifted pianist. [He still is a pianist, and now that Chicago is belatedly making progress in its discovery of Mr. Walter, it may be that we shall some day hear him play and conduct a Mozart concerto, or hear him accompany Lotte Lehmann in a lieder recital, as he still does on occasion in New York.] But his main interest was conducting and he went thru the customary apprenticeship in provincial German opera houses until he was summoned to Hamburg as coach, chorus master and general assistant. The presiding conductor in Hamburg was Gustav Mahler, and this contact proved to be the strongest influence in the young musician's entire artistic life. He became a friend and disciple of Mahler, learned from him the great traditions of both operatic and symphonic music, and watched the birth pains of the long succession of gargantuan symphonies whose beauties are still unfamiliar to the public at large, and in the service of which Mr. Walter has faithfully devoted no small part of his musical efforts.

Mahler called the young Walter to Vienna in 1901 to assist him in his duties as director of the Royal Opera, and Walter was associated with him for the rest of Mahler's connection with the famous institution, a period in which operatic production in that city of music reached heights which are said never to have been equaled since. Walter continued in Vienna after his chief's departure until 1913, when he was engaged to become Felix Mottl's successor as general music director in Munich. This was the beginning of his international fame, which was augmented by his notable contributions to the Salzburg festivals, beginning in 1922. In 1925 he was appointed director of the Charlottenburg Opera in Berlin, which thereafter soon became one of the great opera houses of Germany, principally due to Walter's efforts.

After the Nazis ejected the conductor from Germany he returned to Vienna, to take over the post vacated by Felix Weingartner at the Vienna Opera. But two years later the Nazis caught up with him there. Walter found refuge in Paris, but soon again he was on the move. He came to the United States in 1940 to find not only a welcome as a citizen but ardent admiration for his operatic conducting at the Metropolitan as well as occasional symphonic conducting appearances, usually in such towering works of the repertory as Beethoven's Ninth symphony and Bach's B minor Mass, music which affords his mature mastery full scope.

Mozart, as every one knows, is Walter's god, and Chicago will have not only the opportunity to hear him direct "The Marriage of Figaro" with the resident opera troupe, but his program with the Chicago Symphony also will include a major work of that composer, the "Jupiter" symphony. Other items on the list will be Beethoven's "Egmont" overture, Wagner's "Siegfried Idyll," and Brahms' Second symphony in D major.

The pension fund of the Chicago symphony orchestra, which will benefit by the concert, is a worthy charity which in recent years has not received the amount of attention it deserves. The first concert given in behalf of the fund was under Frederick Stock's direction in 1908, with the programs illustrated by pantomime and dances arranged by Joseph Linden Smith, and the most recent was the concert conducted by Arturo Toscanini at the conclusion of the 50th anniversary season in 1941, an event that reaped a box office of $13,000.

A series of gifts and bequests followed, headed by Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge's $200,000 and Bryan Lathrop's $25,000. Other gifts and activities have brought the principal of the fund to $607,121.27, which is still insufficient to provide pensions of an adequate amount. At the present time there are 52 pensioners, 28 of them widows of former members of the orchestra. During the life of the fund 71 beneficiaries have received a total of $402,199.18.

Season ticket holders to the orchestra's three subscription series and sustaining members will have first call upon tickets for the Bruno Walter concert. The prices will be $120 for a box [seating six], $12 and $7.20 for the main floor, $4.80, $3.60, $3 and $2.40 for the balcony, and $1.80 for the gallery. Tickets will be placed on sale to the general public on Oct. 22.

Two More Operas Added to Repertory This Week

'Barber' Will Be Presented on Wednesday

The second week of the Chicago Opera season will bring two additions to the season's repertory, Rossini's "The Barber of Seville" on Wednesday night and Wagner's "Parsifal" at the Saturday matinee.

Josephine Antoine

John Brownlee

"The Barber" has not appeared on the Chicago Opera's schedule since 1942, when two performances featuring Josephine Tuminia were sung, one with Nino Martini as the tenor, the other with Felix Knight. The present cast lists Josephine Antoine as Rosina, a role she sang with the company in 1936 and 1941; Nino Martini as Count Almaviva, the role in which he made his debut here in 1941, and which he sang twice again with the resident company and once with the "Met"; John Brownlee as Figaro, a role in which he appeared here in the above mentioned "Met" performance in 1943; and two beloved singers in characterizations for which they have long been famous: Virgilio Lazzari as Don Basilio, the music master, and Vittorio Trevisan as Don Bartolo. Doris Doe will be the Bertha and Wilfred Engelman, the Fiorello. Nicholas Rescigno will conduct.

"Parsifal," tho mounted by the "Met" here in 1944, has not been given under the auspices of the resident company since it was conducted by Egon Pollak in the 1931-'32 season with Rene Maison in the title role and Frida Leider as Kundry. Parsifal will be sung by the former Chicagoan, Emery Darcy, whose debut as a Wagnerian singer and transformation from a baritone to a tenor was made when he substituted for Lauritz Melchior in this role at the Metropolitan two seasons ago. The Amfortas will be Martial Singher, Nicola Moscona the Titurel, Emanuel List the Gurnemanz, Gerhard Pechner the Klingsor, and Kerstin Thorborg the Kundry. Fritz Stiedry, former Wagnerian conductor at the State Opera in Berlin, will make his debut here as conductor.

The remainder of the week's bills will be repetitions of performances given during the first week: "Rigoletto" on Monday night, with Tibbett, Helal and McCormack; "Manon" on Friday night, with Sayao, Tokatyan and Moscona, with John Brownlee replacing Richard Bonelli and Wilfred Engelman singing De Bretigny in place of Stefan Kozakevich; and "Il Trovatore" on Saturday night, with Kaye, Castagna, Warren, Baum, and Lazzari.

The current week's activities of the Chicago Symphony orchestra include the first Milwaukee concert of the season tomorrow night, the Thursday-Friday concerts without a soloist, and the first "Pop" concert of the season on Saturday night. Désiré Defauw will conduct all concerts.

The Thursday-Friday programs list Frederick Stock's "A Musical Self Portrait," a work written by the late conductor in 1931-'32 and performed under his direction for the only time in the latter year; the first complete Orchestra hall performance of Florent Schmitt's ballet, "The Tragedy of Salomé," in which a chorus of women's voices from Northwestern University a Cappella choir will participate; Franck's symphonic poem, "Le Chasseur Maudit," and Sibelius' Symphony No. 5, in E flat.

On Saturday night's "Pop" program the following music will be played: Berlioz' overture, "Le Carnaval Romain," Wagner's "Siegfried Idyll," Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," and Tschaikowsky's "Pathétique" symphony.

A chamber orchestra of members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, conducted by Hans Lange, with Maria Kurenko, soprano, as soloist, will give the first University concert of the season in Mandel hall at the University of Chicago on Friday at 8:30. The year's programs will feature a Mozart cycle, and the forthcoming concert will present the Symphony in A major [Köchel No. 201], and the Motet for soprano and orchestra, "Exsultate Jubilate." The symphony is an early work which has never been played on Chicago Symphony programs, and the three movements of the motet rarely are sung in their entirety. The closing movement of the motet is the well known "Alleluia." Miss Kurenko also will sing Bach's Cantata No. 51, for soprano and orchestra, "Jauchzet Gott in allen Landen," a composition which has been presented in Chicago during the last 20 years by only three singers—Elizabeth Rethberg, Ria Ginster and Agatha Lewis. The remaining orchestra piece will be Ibert's "Divertissement" for chamber orchestra.

"The Parade of Champions," meaning the nation's most famous barber shop quartets, will be presented at the Civic Opera house in two performances next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 and in the evening at 8, by the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Singing in America, Inc. A chorus of 100 members will participate in the program.

U. of C. Press Head's Maxim: Hear Two Sides

By The Rev. John Evans

"Audi Alteram Partem!" or "hear the other side," the maxim warning against snap judgments, always has guided the book publication career of William Terry Couch, who resigned as director of the press at his alma mater, the University of North Carolina, to succeed Joseph A. Brandt as director of the University of Chicago press.

While this hear-the-other-side policy of Mr. Couch has been intemperately designed as "contrariness of spirit" by those who disliked having the clay feet of their idols exposed, nevertheless, he has demonstrated that it is possible successfully to publish books on the south's most controversial subjects—race, religion, and economics.

This urge to get both sides of a question out into the open was early evinced by Mr. Couch. As an undergraduate, he became editor of the student literary publication the Carolina Magazine which gave him opportunity to go off the deep end over such subjects as the Scopes trial, prohibition [pro and con], fraternities, the Gastonia strikes, and honorary student clubs. He had the temerity even to debunk some of the courses described in the university catalog.

A year before graduation, Mr. Couch was asked by Louis R. Wilson, librarian to the university and director of its press, to take over during the latter's leave of absence. In 1924 he was appointed assistant director, and in 1932 director.

His dialectic urge for fair play now found an ampler field. When "The Wave of the Future" appeared he published an answer, "The Wave of the Past"; to "The Road to Serfdom" he published "Freedom Under Planning." He has published books on Negroes and books written by Negroes, an accomplishment which has been assailed with contumely by the less tolerant interests in the south.

Mr. Couch, son of the Rev. John Henry Couch, was born in Pamplin, Va. To earn money to enter the university he took a position with the Southern Power company. He worked his way thru college typing papers and theses for other students, bussing tables in the dining hall, and as a chaser, shelver, and book distributor in the university library.

Operetta, "Polonaise," Makes Its Broadway Bow

Music Good, but Kiepura's Acting Is Not

By John Chapman

NEW YORK [Special]—It may be that in "Polonaise," the musical about Thaddeus Kosciusko, the great Polish warrior, more fighting went on backstage than it does before the floodlights of the Alvin theater. On its tryout tour "Polonaise" did very well financially, but along with the box office statements came reports that the show was surcharged with temperament and strife, and before the New York opening the original director demanded that his name be erased from all ads, billboards, and petites annonces. When a director doesn't want his name mentioned there must have been some kind of scrap.

Well, to go back to the show as it finally was revealed to firstnighters: When Marta Eggerth and Jan Kiepura are singing Frederic Chopin's melodies, "Polonaise" is all right for an operetta. When David Lichine's dancers and all but one of his ballets are on the stage, it is very good. But when Kiepura is pretending that he is Kosciusko, the dashing Polish patriot, it is acutely tiresome. And when Curt Bois is trying to be funny it is downright dreadful, for Bois has been stuck with what may be the longest and most unfunny comedy turn in music-show history, a number titled "Motherhood."

On the credit side of "Polonaise" is the drawing power of its two stars. Kiepura and Miss Eggerth appeared a year or so ago in what was to me a dispirited revival of "The Merry Widow." At the time I commented that it was not merry; so, just to make me look like a bum prophet, it ran about a year and had a healthy tour.

Also on the credit side is the music, of course, and some of the lyrics by John Latouche; the production is generous, with handsome sets by Howard Bay and gay costumes by Mary Grant, and among the principals there is one, Rose Inghram, who can be understood. [English is a little difficult for Kiepura and Miss Eggerth.]

"Polonaise" is history, yet the plot authors, Gottfried Reinhardt and Anthony Veiller, have not tried to ram it down one's throat, dates and all. Their book is far from exciting, but it evades some of the mistakes it could have made. It begins with George Washington raising Kosciusko to the rank of brigadier general for his military and engineering aid in the Revolution. From there on, except for an epilog in Philadelphia, it tells of Kosciusko's wars for liberty of Poland and against Russia and Prussia.

This makes for a legitimate tie-in with recent and current war problems; for Kosciusko fought for liberty and democracy as we know it.

The history books tell that the great Polish leader, a skilled military tactician who temporarilly whipped the powerful Russians with a citizen army equipped with scythes, was no great conqueror in love. The father of the girl he first wanted to marry had him beaten up, after which he called quits, and the father of the second just said "No" and that was enough.

Nevertheless, the plotters of "Polonaise" have managed to make Kiepura's affair with Miss Eggerth romantic enough without doing any great harm to fact. She plays a peasant girl who falls in love with the leader, and Miss Inghram portrays a wicked countess who tries to take him away from her. No dice.

Miss Eggerth is lovely, sings well and with warmth. Kiepura can sing like a man possessed, and I do not know of any other tenor with a first class voice who would attempt what he is doing, eight performances a week, but he just can't act.

He poses. He gets up on wagons so he will be higher than anybody else. He makes entrances no less elaborate than those Mae West devised for herself in "Catherine Was Great." At his first appearance, G. Washington and some of the Continental army are lined up waiting for him; and at his second, a ballet, an entire Polish revolution had to take place before he could dash in triumphantly. [This ballet, by the way, was the only one in which Lichine went overboard, and it was very silly.]

Kiepura takes every song cue as a direction to step to the leading edge of the stage, smack in the middle; to face his audience squarely and begin to give with high notes. It may be noted here that, whenever there is a duet between himself and his wife [Miss Eggerth], the program lists his name first.

In most folk operettas, whether they are "Robin Hood" or "The Bartered Bride," the peasants assemble in the old town platz in their dirndls and Buster Brown pants and give off with dancing. They always try to look as gay as New Year's eve at Texas Guinan's, but they always look as tho their chief worry is keeping out of the way of the clumsy hoofer behind.

In "Polonaise" Lichine has devised some enchanting group numbers, notably a mazurka, in which everybody operates like watchworks. The dancers, including Rem Olmsted, Ruth Riekman, Shawn O'Brien, Sergei Ismaeloff, and Tatiana Riabouchinska, are splendid.

HOUSE OF ENG

Louis Prima Brings His Band to Sherman Friday

Carl Marx, the College Inn's Clown, Lauded

By Will Davidson

If only this band were going into the Ambassador East I could say they were going to Prima the Pump room, but Louis is bringing his hot and somewhat corned up orchestra into another famous Byfield-Bering room, the College Inn of the Hotel Sherman. [Anyhow, the more correct pronunciation of Louis' name, I am told, is Preema, so it was a bad gag—worse than usual, yet.]

Carl Marx

Prima opens on Friday night and on the basis of his recent theater triumphs, should be a major attraction in the Sherman's famous jam closet. It so happens, by a well thought out coincidence, that I have devoted today's "RECORDially Yours" column in the Graphic Section to Prima, and that is where you'll find more advance dope on the boy.

The Blackhawk shuffles its show this week, bringing in a comedian, Joey Rardin, to team with the acrobatic Novellos, beautiful Jeanne Shirley, and handsome Harry Cool and his band.

Looking a little farther ahead, the Palmer house, after several false starts, finally has settled upon Oct. 24 as the final night for show-stopping John Sebastian, the harmonica player. John will be replaced by Gene Sheldon, comedian, for the balance of the show, which gives way on Nov. 15 to a holiday revue, featuring George Olsen's music.

In the meantime Sebastian is nightly adding to his stature as an entertainer, and to his popular following. His latest bit has nothing to do with the harmonica, but is a pantomine skit of a man eating a peanut butter sandwich. I have not yet caught this new act, but knowing John I can imagine how funny it is. He will use it on his concert tour.

The Trianon ballroom will bring back another of its most favored bands on Nov. 9, when Benny Strong returns for a run that will take him up to the holidays. Art Kassel, who gives way to him, will return then to continue his tremendously popular run. Out at the north side Aragon Henry King will carry on in happy fashion thru Nov. 25.

When Louis Prima opens his first show at the Sherman Friday his drummer will start things out with a time honored College Inn routine. He will roll the drums as Carl Marx, famous clown, does his juggling act with a battered hat, and then Carl will dance offstage, his flashlight nose blinking happily.

In Chicago cafe business Carl Marx' act is unique. For nine years now Carl has been amusing patrons of the inn with his false stemmed flowers, his startling appearances, his surprising habit of escorting unsuspecting young women to the dance floor. It is a great act, for it never wearies you.

And no wonder, Carl is a great artist. He was born in Denmark in 1893 and early joined the circus owned by his father and uncle. Under the great clown Crock, Carl learned the difficult technique of clowning, and in 1911 was brought to this country by Barnum and Bailey circus. He trouped all over the country, making people laugh, learning his trade, raising his family. [His son Lee has been in the navy.]

Then in 1936 he was signed as an act in a College Inn floor show, and he has been there ever since. Last Tuesday Carl was guest of honor at a ninth anniversary party in the College Inn, and I am sincerely sorry that things beyond my control prevented my being there to don one of the false noses supplied to the guests, and to pay tribute to a very fine gentleman. Carl Marx should have a medal for bringing happiness to thousands of persons—especially the wounded he so generously entertains—and for sticking to his belief that humor can be clean and still effective.

The new Glass Hat room of the Congress has been opened and Milt Herth now is providing his stimulating music for the patrons. There was one of those inevitable construction delays attendant upon the formal opening, but I understand that now the room is complete with its large glass topper over the bar, the shimmering spun glass drapes, the fanshaped glass background for the band, tinted in changing colors by a special lighting system that ostensibly, at least, follows the mood of the music.

It has been more than five years since Milt Herth played a Chicago hotel room, and his trio of electric organ, piano and drums is a welcome sight indeed. During the daily tea dance sessions Don Taylor's band plays.

Space didn't allow a rundown last Sunday on what was scheduled to open on last Friday's over-crowded evening. There was the Stevens show, featuring Clyde McCoy's music, Bob Hall, Corinne and Tito Valdez, the zany Whitson Brothers, LeBrac and Bernice, and the Boulevar-Dears. Across the street at the Blackstone, Myrus, the mentalist, and singing Victoria Cordova, are the new show acts, and Ernie Hecksher's band is on the stand. The Rio Cabana brought in Willie Shore, Karen Cooper, Dave Lober and Dorothy, and the Rio lovelies in Donn Arden numbers featuring Inez Clavijo, and Johnny Allen, soloist. The new 51 Hundred club show includes Day, Dawn, and Dusk, Jan Murray, and Doryce Drew. And to make it even more crowded, the Latin Quarter called in Billy Vine to replace the Radio Aces in the show starring a rejuvenated Harry Richman, and the Vine Gardens brought in Joe Morrison.

Boswelling the Bistros:

Pence James, who as a night club critic was host to press agents, is now one himself — having joined forces with Bill Eppel. . . Tim Gayle, who fathered The Baton into prosperity, has a new magazine, Preview, which looks good. . . . It is nice to see Ivan Muzyka back in town from the wars. The popular chap is now head waiter in the La Salle's American room.

Look for a great new radio show featuring Professor Backwards [Jimmy Edmonson] who did such a wonderful job recently at the Sherman. Jimmy has one of the rare new and unusual comic talents in the business and with good writers, good music and all the trappings of a radio show, should be a top line star in short order. . . . Phil Itta, the friendly head waiter in the Stevens hotel's Boulevard room, has announced a new time for the second shows—11:45 p. m. instead of midnight. The dinner show still goes on at 8. . . Maurice and Maryea, dancers, very popular here, have just finished a great run at Boston's Latin Quarter.

What with the removal of building restrictions, probably a lot of midwesterners will now be dotting the landscape with Cape Coddages.

AT HEIDELBERG

Winifred Heckman, winner of the vocal contest in the 1945 Tribune Chicago Music Festival, is now appearing as the special feature of the nightly musical programs at Old Heidelberg restaurant.
[G. Nelidoff Photo]

Film Actress Claims 22 as Lucky Number

HOLLYWOOD—Joan Newton, who was born on Sept. 22, 1922, offers proof that 22 is her lucky number. On her 22d birthday she signed a long term picture contract and on June 22, 1945, she won the feminine lead in "Riverboat Rhythm." She says everything of importance has happened on the second or 22d of the month, including her first trip to Europe and her first stock engagement.

"The French Touch"

Arlene Francis, radio's favorite blind date, will play opposite Brian Aherne in "The French Touch," a play by Joseph Fields and Jerome Chodorov about to go in rehearsal.

Drama Notes

"The Student Prince" opens its annual Chicago engagement at the Studebaker Sunday night, Oct. 28, with a cast including Toby Durst, Laurel Hurley, Alexander Gray, Detmar Poppen, Nina Varela, and Josephine Lambert. This visit marks the 20th anniversary of Sigmund Romberg's popular operetta and the engagement, listed as limited, is probably scheduled to fill the three weeks before the arrival of "Foolish Notion."

Laurel Hurley

The Theater Guild is holding the bag on "A Bell for Adano," as the play has decided not to tour, after all. Meanwhile, Bonita Bimrose, the Chicago girl who went from our troupe of "Oklahoma!" to play Ado Annie in the overseas company, takes over the part in New York tomorrow night. Yesterday "Oklahoma!" passed "Pins and Needles'" record to take second place in New York's long run list of musicals, and the guild is now hot in pursuit of the champion "Hellzapoppin."

The Jack and Jill Players, 180 E. Delaware pl. opened their season yesterday with "The Haunted House," written and produced by Marie Agnes Foley. The company moves around the various suburbs, so telephone the resident theater for where and when.

Ethel Barrymore is in New York to work with Arthur Hopkins on the revival of Philip Barry's "The Joyous Season." Appearing with her will be Frank Conroy, Henry Wadsworth, Don Keefer, Lida Kane, and William J. McCarthy, among others.

"Billion Dollar Baby" is now the name of the new musical put together at a reputed cost of $200,000 by the producers of "On the Town." In it will be Mitzi Green, Joan McCracken, and Chicago's Bill Tabbert, and the tryout takes place in New Haven Nov. 17.

Notes of Music and Musicians

Harry Sukman, who frequently has been heard as soloist on the Tuesday evening broadcasts of Henry Weber's Chicago Philharmonic orchestra, and on other W-G-N programs, will give his first recital here in Orchestra hall on Monday evening, Jan. 28, under the Harry Zelzer management.

The Chicago Alumnae chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota, national musical fraternity, will present Esther Goetz Gilliland in a lecture of musical therapy at the People's church, Sheridan rd. and Lawrence av., on Wednesday at 8.

Simon Barere, Russian pianist, will give his first recital here in several seasons at Orchestra hall Sunday, Oct. 21, at 3:30.

Plans for organizing an American Legion Symphony orchestra and a women's orchestra, both to be composed of musicians who served in the two World wars, are being formulated by the Illinois department of the American Legion. Every town and village in the state will be canvassed thru the Legion's district commanders for possible talent.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra, Désiré Defauw conducting will play a program of popular music at Orchestra hall this afternoon at 3:30 before the "key leadership" of the Community and War Fund "Victory Campaign."

A new concert management known as Philruth, Inc., announces four concerts to be presented in Kimball hall. Naomi Watson, contralto, will sing on Tuesday, Oct. 30, at 8:15; Allen Brown, pianist, Monday, Nov. 19, at 8:15; a piano contest for a tuition scholarship on Monday, Jan. 7; and Josephine Harreld, pianist, on Monday, Jan. 29.

Jacques Homier has been appointed conductor of the Chicago Mendelssohn club to succeed Walter Aschenbrenner. Other leaders in the 52 year history of the male chorus have been D. A. Clippinger, Harrison M. Wild, and Calvin Lampert.

An announcement of uncommon interest is that Maggie Teyte will make a recital appearance in Orchestra hall on Friday, Jan. 4, under the Harry Zelzer management. Altho of English birth, Miss Teyte has come to be recognized as one of the outstanding interpreters of French music. A pupil of Jean de Reszke, she appeared at the Opera Comique as Melisande at the age of 19, and with Mary Garden became one of the most famous interpreters of that role.

IN 'GUEST WIFE'

Don Ameche and Claudette Colbert have the leading roles in "Guest Wife." Oriental.

Opera Schedule

The Chicago Opera company will give the following performances at the Civic Opera house during the second and third of a six week season. Evening performances begin at 8, matinees at 2, except "Parsifal" which will start at 1:30 p. m.

THIS WEEK:

Monday night—Verdi's "Rigoletto," with Elvira Helal, John Brooks McCormack, Lawrence Tibbett, Virgilio Lazzari, and Rosalind Nadell. Fausto Cleva conducting.

Wednesday night—Rossini's "The Barber of Seville," with Josephine Antoine, Nino Martini, John Brownlee, Virgilio Lazzari, Vittorio Trevisan, Wilfred Engelman, and Doris Doe, Nicholas Rescigno conducting.

Friday night—Massenet's "Manon," with Bidu Sayao, Armand Tokatyan, John Brownlee, Nicola Moscona. Fausto Cleva conducting.

Saturday matinee—Wagner's "Parsifal," with Martial Singher, Nicola Moscona, Emery Darcy, Emanuel List, Gerhard Pechner, Kerstin Thorborg, and Doris Doe. Fritz Stiedry, conductor.

Saturday night—Verdi's "Il Trovatore," with Selma Kaye, Bruna Castagna, Leonard Warren, Kurt Baum, Virgilio Lazzari. Nicholas Rescigno coduncting.

NEXT WEEK:

Monday night, Oct. 22—Puccini's "Tosca."

DOWNTOWN

TO THE THEATRE-GOERS OF AMERICA

With the dropping of the first atomic bomb on Japan, we of 20th are permitted to present "THE HOUSE ON 92nd STREET."

Produced in secrecy, behind closed doors, the story of this motion picture was adapted from cases in the espionage files of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and was filmed with the complete cooperation of the F.B.I.

It is the story of the protection of the atomic bomb . . . and how its secret was almost stolen by the enemy.

Told with a new technique of dramatic picture-making, we believe its action, suspense and human interest have seldom been equaled.

To J. Edgar Hoover and his great F.B.I. organization, to Producer Louis de Rochemont, to Director Henry Hathaway, go my highest compliments and admiration.

Darryl F. Zanuck
DARRYL F. ZANUCK
Vice-President in Charge of Production for 20th Century-Fox

A Little About the Movies on City's Screens

"Captain Eddie." The inspiring story of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, whose life has been full of adventure from his childhood pranks on up thru the second World war, is told on the screen. Lynn Bari portrays Capt. Eddie's wife. Fred MacMurray and Thomas Mitchell also are featured. Apollo.

"Guest Wife." Happily married, Richard Foran and Claudette Colbert halt their belated honeymoon for an old friend, Don Ameche. There's a mixup and the friend, in a tight spot, introduces the not-so-new bride as his wife. Oriental.

"The Dolly Sisters." June Haver and Betty Grable, like two peas in a pod, portray the famed sisters who with their song and dance team left the name of Dolly high in the annals of vaudeville history. John Payne is the romantic leading man. Chicago.

"Uncle Harry." Ella Raines, Geraldine Fitzgerald, and George Sanders are the outstanding players in this mystery drama. Uncle Harry, after his scheming sister has prevented his marriage, plots her death. But the law allows him to go free in spite of his pleas that he is guilty. Palace.

"Easy to Look At." A light musical film starring Gloria Jean, Kirby Grant, and the Delta Rhythm boys. Palace.

"Pride of the Marines." This is the real story of Al Schmid, a marine hero of Guadalcanal, his love for the girl back home, and his insistence upon giving her up when he is blinded. The leading roles are taken by John Garfield, Eleanor Parker, and Dane Clark. Roosevelt.

"Love Letters." Joseph Cotten is the leading male character who marries the lovely widow of his best friend. He is confronted with the hard duty of restoring the girl's memory after she has been accused of murdering her first husband. Jennifer Jones is another top performer. State-Lake.

"Abbott and Costello in Hollywood." Bud and Lou in their newest film perform their antics right on the M-G-M lot in Hollywood; and there you'll find the theme of the story. Garrick.

"Johnny Angel." A suspenseful mystery surrounding the disappearance of an old sea captain. George Raft, whose father is the missing man, becomes a sleuth tracking down a killer. During his search he encounters Claire Trevor and Signe Hasso. Hoagy Carmichael also has a prominent spot. Woods.

"Anchors Aweigh." A technicolor musical starring Kathryn Grayson, Frank Sinatra, and Gene Kelly. The boys on leave from the navy arrive in town for a gay time during which they attempt to arrange a screen test with Jose Iturbi for Miss Grayson. United Artists.

"Valley of Decision." Marcia Davenport's best seller comes to the screen and her outstanding characters are portrayed by Greer Garson as the Irish servant girl and Gregory Peck, her wealthy lover. Lionel Barrymore, Marsha Hunt, and Preston Foster have prominent roles. McVickers, Varsity, Southtown, Avalon.

"Colonel Blimp." Starring Anton Walbrook, Deborah Kerr, and Roger Livesey, outstanding English players, this technicolor movie carries thru with the life of the gallant Clive Candy from the Boer war to the present. World Playhouse.

"Conflict." Humphrey Bogart and Rose Hobart, believed to be a perfectly matched couple, quarrel over Alexis Smith. A murder ensues in which the husband kills his wife. A psychologist friend of the family devises methods of haunting Bogart, causing him to return to the murder scene and admit his guilt. Jeffery, Ogden, Grove, Beverly, Met, American, Broadway Strand, Center, Devon, Vogue, Crystal, Biltmore, Belpark, Senate, State, Manor, La Grange, Maryland.

Chicago theater. The stage show holds over for the second week with Phil Regan's Irish ballads as a stellar attraction. Lou Breese and his band tour musically with "The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe," and Fred Lowery, blind whistler, and his songstress, Dorothy Raye, cover the gamut from "The Whistler and His Dog" to the "William Tell" overture. Otherwise there are the Gaudsmith brothers and their French poodles, and Tip, Tap and Toe, Negro tap dancing team.

STORY OF CHINA WILL DELIGHT READERS

A Small Boy Grows Up to Be a Leader

"THE SMALL GENERAL," by Robert Standish. (Macmillan, $2.50.)

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

"The Small General" is a tale of modern China written, not, as was "Rickshaw Boy," by a native Chinese, but by a westerner who claims "no profundity in my own" knowledge of the Chinese. It, like "Rickshaw Boy," is a story of the native Chinese. Only in a few fleeting scenes does an actual westerner appear, altho the influence of all foreigners is a mist of apprehension and distrust which fills the atmosphere. It is, however, the Japanese who are most mistrusted and whose treachery is disclosed as the tale of a new China emerges as a dream, if not as a reality, in its pages.

If the reader wishes a tome with profound political significance or implications, he must turn to other shelves of the books on modern China. "The Small General" is primarily a delightful tale of what will seem to westerners a strange way of life [but nothing like so strange as foreign ways seem to the Chinese, apparently]. It is a tale full of practical jesting, of legitimate and amusing chicanery, as well as an engaging picture of extremely engaging human beings.

There are two parts to "The Small General." They almost might be labeled China, Old and New, for the first part deals entirely with the artful Sung of Sung's island [father of "The Small General"], whose fortune piled up from the fact that on his island three silk cocoons grew where only two had any right to grow. All of the silk growers of China tried to find out Sung's secret. Sung used their curiosity to good advantage. He secured for himself the finest houseboat in the neighborhood in exchange for seedlings of his mulberry trees. He sold to the prowling and baffled Japanese mulberry seeds for a fabulous sum. Sung added to his riches, confounded his enemies, and had a merry and luxurious life by the exercise of his wits. What Sung's secret was I shall not tell you. It was so simple that nobody guessed it.

The second part of the book is the story of Sung's son, "The Small General," so named because when he was a little boy he had charge of the thousands of ducklings which were part of the island's produce. Sung's son was sent away to school, and came home with ideas about a new China. He grew up as the revolution had become a reality if not a success, and he became a member of a brotherhood which eventually, as the book closes [with the sound of the Japanese bombardment in the distance], has hopes of some sort of unity for China.

The second half of the book has a more serious import than the first half but it is no less deliciously funny at times. The tale of the tracking down and punishment of informers is as thrilling as a mystery story, and infinitely funnier.

How accurate a picture of modern China this is I do not know. It both endears the modern Chinese to the reader and makes them, in a sense, seem even more impossible ever to judge by western standards, for their psychology, according to Mr. Standish, is a part of the land. But that "The Small General" is a delightful book I do know.

Russian Horsemen

The history of Russia's famous cavalrymen is told in "The Cossacks," by Maurice Hindus, which Doubleday, Doran will publish on Nov. 2.

Story of an Enduring Love Set on Background of War

"EVER AFTER," by Elswyth Thane. [Duell, Sloan & Pearce, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

This is the third volume of what the publishers now speak of boldly as "the Williamsburg Pentalogy."

"Dawn's Early Light" concerned the Revolutionary war; "Yankee Stranger" moved down to the Civil war; "Ever After" centers around the Spanish-American war. Will "The Light Heart" and "Kissing Kin," both of which are in preparation, deal, respectively, with World Wars I. and II.?

I shall tag along with "The Light Heart," but Miss Thane will probably lose me on "Kissing Kin," for it is one of my few stubbornly cherished convictions in matters of art that one cannot write decent fiction about the political concerns of the passing hour.

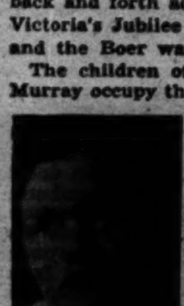
However, I am not reviewing "Kissing Kin." "Ever After" is a less compact and more uneven novel than "Yankee Stranger." It shuttles back and forth across the Atlantic; Victoria's Jubilee is on in England, and the Boer war is brewing.

The children of Eden and Cabot Murray occupy the foregound, along with Fitzhugh, son of Sedgwick Sprague, whom Eden's sister, Susannah, loved and lost in her youth, and loved everlastingly, even [in "Ever After"] to the length of refusing the vastly eligible Sir Gratian, whose story remains, consequently, in its relationship to the rest of the novel, curiously loose-endish.



Elswyth Thane

Cabot, the "Yankee Stranger," now a great newspaper man, dies in Cuba, but the end of the book finds both Sue and Eden still alive. Fitz, a young composer, marries Gwen, a music hall singer of the days of Tony Pastor, Victor Herbert, and the wax cylinder phonograph records, but the more interesting love story is that between Bracken Murray and the Lady Dinah, to whom he gives his heart before he has been freed from the worthless Lisl [who deserted him], and when Dinah, indeed, is still too young to be told of love.

There is some melodrama in Gwen's story, and more in the murder of Lisl, at the very end, which is quite unprepared for, but which Miss Thane uses to bring Dinah's love story to a climax, thus building the incident into the structure of her book. Conventional romance motives are much in evidence. The author is clearly an Anglophile. Few characters miss an opporunity to guzzle a drink at any convenient opportunity. Being allergic to descriptions of military campaigns, your reviewer was obliged to skim a part of the Cuban section. The human feeling thruout is warm and endearing.

Above all else, I think Miss Thane ought to take out a patent on her Very Young Girls. Certainly her specimens of that frequently excruciating variety are among the most enchanting in fiction. I have been in love for years with Sabrina, the young heroine of "Tryst." For Dinah Campion's sake, I might perhaps be unfaithful.

Old Southern Scene

"Plantation Parade," by Harnett T. Kane, tells in pictures and text the story of life on the Louisiana plantations. Morrow will publish the book early in November.

A Brilliant Novel Reveals Life in Characters' Minds

"SEVEN TIMES THE LEADING MAN," by Egon Hostovsky. [Fischer, $2.75].

Reviewed by Paul Engle

This is a brilliant novel. It has a depth of psychological analysis which might fairly be called European. The book moves slowly and deliberately, stopping to fill in the mind of a character at length, however much that may clog the action. But in the end it turns out that the only action was in the minds of the characters, that external events were useful and moving, but that they were less the real structure of the novel than the changes in the minds of the people who committed the actions.

The book has many themes, but one of the dominant motives is the effort to show the impact on an intellectual of the brute force of naziism. The central character is the writer Kavalsky. He is shown first being attracted by the Germanic new order, and then being repelled by it when he attends a secret meeting of Nazis at which a speech by a nazi leader for the first time reveals to him the true and devastating degree of ruthlessness behind the grand talk about a new way of life.

So he abandons any hope in naziism, but without finding any other cause for conviction, with the result that when the Germans take over Czechoslovakia, Kavalsky has no other solution than to flee, abandoning not only his country but his friends. These friends are the seven of the book's title, seven men and women in whose lives the strongest force is their affection, often unwilled, for Kavalsky, who dominates them by pure power of his personality.

Egon Hostovsky

And yet it is Kavalsky who writes a book which pre-figures the future, a book about a life lived entirely underground by the healthy people of the world, driven there by the rise to power of the unhealthy. The meaning is quite obscure, until suddenly one realizes that this subterranean life is quite literally the underground which opposed Hitler in Europe, and that Kavalsky has created the legend of a heroic conduct which he, in his actual life, was never able to sustain.

One by one the seven around Kavalsky are betrayed by their love for him. His wife abandons him in the end, after years of humiliation and devotion, because she despises his taking the weakest way out. His mistress leaves him for another man, altho she will never recover from the shocking disorder which her life with Kavalsky has brought her. His friend the actor becomes a nazi propaganda speaker on the radio. The doctor who had worried about his health leaves him in disdain and in regret, joining the Czech army and sharing in its frustration as it is called back from the frontiers. The rest have equal failures.

The young writer, who tells half the book in the first person, is the only person who sees Kavalsky's flight for what it actually is. He says, "I do not reproach him for deserting us; he deserted himself and he will never return." The book ends with the young writer describing how he has found in actuality those underground passages [of armed resistance to the invader] of which Kavalsky had written symbolically without knowing what they really were.

This is a powerful and illuminating novel; I can only urge readers to be patient with the slow and obscure beginning.

Six Dostoevsky Novels

Six short novels, most of which have been out of print for years, are included in "The Short Novels of Dostoevsky," which the Dial Press will publish early in November.

An Elevating Book of 55 Short Stories

"TRIAL BALANCE," by William March. [Harcourt, Brace, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Any collection of short stories is of course bound to reveal something of the author's range, of his power, and of his limitations. The bigger and more representative the collection, the more full, naturally, the revelation will be. "Trial Balance," a close-packed book containing 55 stories written between 1928 and 1944, very definitely shows William March to be one of the distinguished story writers of our time.

He is not one of the great writers. In his work there are none of those magnificent signs—irresistible sweep, full and vibrant sense of life, rich weight of meaning, or even verbal brilliance — by which the highest writing is marked. But there is a kind of determined objectivity, sometimes grim, sometimes wry, an almost ruthless sticking to things as they generally are, and a remarkable spread of subject-matter from war to the adventures of traveling salesmen, from shop-girl philosophizing and small-town involutions to bleak domestic frustration and tragedy.

Sometimes March's style is a little gnarled. Sometimes his values are extremely debatable. Sometimes a story doesn't quite come off; reading, you feel that the effect has just been missed. But always you know that this is an honest man's work. And even when you don't agree with an honest man you feel elevated by his presence. Indeed, maybe such honesty as this becomes an even more admirable virtue when you see it maintained consistently for years during a time when so much of our short fiction has stayed dishonest stuff, adulterated either by the sugar of sentimentality or by the spice of false melodrama.

Some of the work here published is already known thru anthologies. But "Trial Balance" is assurance that a good many other worthy stories—particularly some of the fine Reedyville pieces, and that bitterly accurate rendering of American radio, "Send In Your Answer"; and the excellent study of family deterioration, "The Static Sisters"; and "Happy Jack," one of those rare short stories which successfully sum up a lifetime—will now surely receive the wide and appreciative reading which they deserve.

Book Club Choice

A new book by Robert Gibbings, "Lovely Is the Lee," is one of a dual selection by the Book of the Month club for December. It tells about the lives and simple faith of the people in Ireland, in a mixture of anecdote, story, and folklore. Dutton is the publisher.

Carl Sandburg Is to Live on North Carolina Estate

By Harry Hansen

New York

ASHEVILLE, N. C., which now suns itself in the light of Thomas Wolfe's reputation, is looking forward with considerable interest and curiosity to the arrival in its neighborhood of Lincoln's famous biographer, Carl Sandburg. Not only will the Sandburgs make their new home in Hendersonville, only 21 miles away, but they will actually take over one of the historic estates of Civil war times, the house of Christopher G. Memminger, who became Confederate secretary of the treasury under Jefferson Davis after he had fought against secession and lost. Thus the most famous of the damyankee biographers of Memminger's chief enemy will own and inhabit his house.

Northerners are no novelty to the Asheville region, long noted as a health resort. The Vanderbilt estate, Biltmore, is close by, and 10 miles from Hendersonville is the house in which Bill Nye, the humorist of the Laramie Boomerang, lived out his days. Bill is buried near-by. Tourists have visited the mountain inns of this region for years, but Carl Sandburg will easily be the most distinguished man among them. His farm also will be an object of interest because of the goats, which will be transferred from Harbert, Mich., to the Appalachian hills.

Can a Midwesterner Change?

I suppose New York has seen as much as Chicago of Carl Sandburg in these war years, when he has been giving active support to radio programs and meetings intended to keep our spirits up. But more than any other of the important writers who became established in the 1920s he has been identified as a midwestern man. Residence in North Carolina won't change that, and I'll wager that even in the salubrious January sunshine of North Carolina he will be homesick for the snow prairie grass, the snow covered sand dunes, and the catarrhal blasts from Lake Michigan. In fact, he'll be just as homesick in the east as Lincoln was.

Gunther Gets Around

When John Gunther issues his next book, which will deal with the United States, there will be people in every state in the union who have been consulted by the author. Talk about research—this work is based on the most careful and comprehensive research, and if it doesn't get down to basic facts, the blame will rest solely on the author's use of his information. John was telling me the other day, when he was clearing his desk preparatory to another journey of discovery, that he has already visited 41 states and talked to individuals high and low on every subject that affects the American future.

The seven states still to be visited are near New York—Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, West Virginia, Ohio, and Pennsylvania. "I'm talking with a lot of different Americans, running the whole gamut," said he. "Governors, mayors, teachers, clergymen, labor leaders, and the rank and file, business and professional men, students and newspaper men. Here's a sample itinerary for a day in Denver: at 10:20 I met the CIO; at 11 I talked with a local tycoon, then had lunch with a group of newspaper men. I had a date with the governor for 4:30 and followed that with the Farmer's union. At 5:30 I met the archbishop and I had dinner with a Republican national committeeman." Actually this is only verification of studies made before Gunther reaches a city, including much correspondence and long questionnaires. As to what slant he will take, that's his secret.

Publishing Business Is Exciting

John Farrar started his lecture course on book publishing at Columbia university with a full registration, and the same full house will greet him when he begins his course on modern writing at Town hall tomorrow. This is his first activity since he ended his work with the OWI, with which he was associated for several years. The Columbia course, which is part of a comprehensive program in the department of creative and applied arts, pleased him mightily, for he saw present a number of the younger members of New York publishing houses. Mr. Farrar has never lost his intense interest in the planning and making of books. He said: "There is only one thing more exciting than the birth of a best seller; the reading of a great, unpublished manuscript, whether it becomes a best seller or not—but so many of them do. To have read "Three Soldiers," "John Brown's Body," "The Seven Pillars of Wisdom," and "Anthony Adverse" before the fact was more exciting than when the first 1,000 copy order came in. Is it the most exciting business in the world? I think so."

Golden Oak and Red Carpets

Mr. Farrar has opened an office in one of the huge parlors of the Murray Hill hotel, that ancient brownstone inn near the Grand Central terminal that still exudes the aroma of the 1890s. [And no wonder, the original upholstery is still there.] Today it's a busy place, with the O'Dwyer campaign offices also near-by, and Tammany workers dashing in and out with that pork barrel look. The hotel has some famous guests. Possibly the most famous is S. S. McClure, who turned the magazine world upside down with McClure's magazine, which he founded in 1893. Mr. McClure is now 88 and one of the oldest graduates of Knox college. The Murray Hill hotel is the meeting place of the Baker Street Irregulars, who celebrate the achievements of Sherlock Holmes amid golden oak furniture, red carpets, and pipe smoke. David Randall tells me the irregulars are hoping to arrange a January meeting if Vincent Starrett can attend.

Room in a Barn

Add this to your anecdotes of room shortage: We were going up the elevator in the Harvard club and H. V. Kaltenborn called for the fifth floor, where the swimming pool is located. "Going for a swim?" asked a friend. "No," replied Mr. Kaltenborn. "The swimming pool is now a dormitory. We have filled it with cots."

Offices are so hard to get that one new publisher found he would have to share quarters and use a party switchboard. He is Louis Greenfield, whose first book, "What Men Don't Like About Women," by Thomas D. Horton, has been making women a bit angry. Mr. Greenfield is at 45 East 17th st., but when booksellers look him up in the 'phone book they don't find him, and won't till the next issue, which loses sales. He was formerly with the Saturday Review of Literature and Frank Henry of Essential Books.

A Panorama of Midwest Literature

"AMERICA IS WEST," edited by John T. Flanagan. [University of Minnesota Press, $3.75.]

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil

Prof. John T. Flanagan of the University of Minnesota says that he had always wanted to compile an anthology of middle western writing, and he has made the most of his opportunity. His book is something more than a mere collection of choice bits from representative writers. The stories, poems, essays, and excerpts from books that go to make up "America Is West" were selected to illustrate the history, as well as the life of the present day, of that great valley drained by the Mississippi river and its tributaries.

Consequently, writers of earlier days are cheek by jowl with contemporary authors. From Louis Hennepin to Lew Sarett; from Peter Cartwright to Vincent Sheean, from Henry Rowe Schoolcraft to John Dos Passos, and from Edward Eggleston to Sinclair Lewis, the interpreters and recorders of the midwestern scene make a sweeping literary panorama.

A look at the section headings shows what the editor is trying to do: The Great Valley, Folklore, and Legends, The Indian, Explorer and Traveler, The Frontier, The Woods, The Farm, The River, The Small Town, and Interpretation.

To me, at least, the collection is not a pure delight. Some of the selections are more important as history than as literature, and not the most entertaining sort of history, either. Yet brief selections from early chroniclers are scarcely a substitute for serious study of early times; nor do they equal in enjoyment the colorful work of later writers who base their re-creations of early days on careful research.

Nevertheless, I know of no single book that does more to illuminate the past and present of the midwest, or would be a more valuable auxiliary to other regional literature. Its 664 pages are crammed with a wealth of material; it is the sort of book that you can put by the side of your bed and dip into again and again, for much of it will bear repeating.

I'd like to add that, in a day when badly manufactured books disgrace prominent names in publishing, "America Is West" is a fine example of a well made book, with the sturdiest binding I have seen in a long time on a new book.

Life on Plantations Before the Civil War

"THE SOUTH CAROLINA RICE PLANTATION," edited by J. H. Easterby. [University of Chicago Press, $5.]

These are the family letters and business papers of Robert F. W. Allston, one of the leading rice planters in the Georgetown district of South Carolina just before the Civil war. The material is a mine of information on the rice plantations and the mode of life in the tidewater area. For the casual reader the letters of the overseers and the slaves will be most interesting. These notes give an intimate view of the period. JOHN RANDOLPH.

How Armaments Affect War and Plans for Peace

"ARMAMENT AND HISTORY," by Maj. Gen. J. F. C. Fuller. [Scribner's, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Col. C. H. Lanza

The title of this little book suggests that it is a story of weapons during the ages of history. It is, but it is more that that. It discusses the influence of armaments as causing wars. In nontechnical language the distinguished British author explains his idea.

Gen. Fuller believes that our machine age will force new wars, each more frightful than the preceding one. He sees no possibility that markets can be found for all the goods our economy can produce. There is bound to be extensive unemployment. We had it, and it will come again.

Pressure of the unemployed upon governments leads them to seek war, rather than risk anarchy at home. The object of the war is to destroy the industrial power of rival nations, and capture their markets. Peace is a preparation for the next war, which is surely coming.

This theory was set forth by Adam Smith, in his "Wealth of Nations," as long ago as 1776. Gen. Fuller now presents the modern view as shown by the events of history. It is an important subject. The reader will be well repaid by reading this carefully prepared and clearly explained book.

American Woman Probes Mind and Heart of France

"FRANCE, A TRIBUTE BY AN AMERICAN WOMAN," by Florence Gilliam. [Dutton, $2.50].

Reviewed by Will Davidson

America has always had a deep affection for France—an affection separate from and far more vital than any political affiliation. Not that we always understand her, for we don't, but we usually seem to love her for her very great attainments in the art of living.

Florence Gilliam is an American who spent 20 years in France, 8 months under German rule, and in her capacity as a reporter and critic of the arts she has come to know the country and the people intimately. She has achieved an understanding of the nation that is far richer than mere hero worship. The depth of that understanding is measured by her statement that the more she knows about and loves the French nation, the more American she feels. It is a recognition of the unique quality of the French mind and soul, a tribute to France as the geographical and spiritual battleground of the world.

Miss Gilliam's book is ambitious. It covers the political, religious, and economic history of the nation. It probes the French mind and heart. In some of its finest pages it traces the development of the arts, especially the arts of the theater. Sometimes a bit of florid prose hampers the writing, but on the whole it is an effective study.

600 Pages Full of Tidbits for the Extrovert

"THE PRACTICAL COGITATOR," by Charles P. Curtis Jr. and Ferris Greenslet. [Houghton Mifflin, $3.00.]

Reviewed by John Abbot Clark

In laying out this nearly 600 page spread for "the extrovert thinker," these two distinguished gentlemen from Massachusetts were guided by a few broad rules: Nothing too familiar, nothing purely inspirational, nothing sentimental, nothing cynical, nothing that isn't rereadable. As between the ancient and the modern, they plumped for the latter, using older things only when they knew of nothing better since. The form of the selection made no odds to them — "treatise, textbook, letter, novel, speech, verse, anything is given equal welcome."

Ferris Greenslet

Charles P. Curtis Jr.

This delightful volume, so easy to look at, so easy to hold, is "set on the firm basis of personal choice." The selections are arranged under such fluid heads as "Man in Search of Himself," "He Solicits His Past," "He Turns to Nature," "And Scrutinizes Her," "And Himself," "He Lives with His Fellows," "He Seeks Solace and Beauty."

We have, we trust, been reading this "Thinker's Anthology" in the same spirit in which it was compiled, and here are a few tidbits we've come up with. What could be more provocative, to put it mildly, than this from the reputed father of pragmatism, C. S. Peirce: "Ethics, then, even if not a positively dangerous study, as it sometimes proves, is as useless a science as can be conceived. But it must be said, in favor of ethical writers, that they are commonly free from the nauseating custom of boasting of the utility of their science." What more devastating than John Jay Chapman's blast at pedants and Ph.D.'s: "The pedant is as old as history, but no age has even taken him so seriously as we do. . . . If some one of these investigators should really hear a strain that once issued from Saint Cecilia's pipes or a tune sung by Orpheus, what organ would he play it on? He would reproduce it with perfect self-assurance on his typewriter." Or what more deliciously tonic for these jet-propelled times than Jane Austen's "'I hope everyone had a pleasant evening,' said Mr. Woodhouse, in his quiet way. 'I had. Once I felt the fire rather too much; but then I moved back my chair a little and it did not disturb me.'"

On page 97 of "The Practical Cogitator," G. K. Chesterton observes that the Sentimentalist is the man who wants to eat his cake and have it. "He will not see that one must pay for an idea as for anything else. He will have them at once in one wild intellectual harem, no matter how much they quarrel and contradict each other." This book is more than a wild intellectual harem; but it's right up the alley of Mr. Chesterton's cake-eater.

34 Stories of War by U.S. Reporters

"MY FAVORITE WAR STORY," compiled by the editors of Look. [Whittlesey House, McGraw-Hill $2.50.]

This reader found these 34 tales by American war reporters disappointing. Altho many of the stories were written by well known correspondents, the book is dull. A specially drawn illustration, a photograph of the writer, and his biography accompanies each tale.

A BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB SELECTION

➡ This is the warm and understanding story of an American marriage. With the same relentless satire with which Sinclair Lewis portrayed small towns in Main Street, mediocrity in Babbitt, isolationism in It Can't Happen Here, and organized virtue in Gideon Planish, he returns to the Minnesota he knows and loves, to make a searching study of husbands and wives.

No one can write of the American scene like Sinclair Lewis. Every page of this corrosive, humorous portrait of a married couple and their friends gives thrilling evidence of the master's touch. As Frederic Babcock says in the Chicago Tribune, "CASS TIMBERLANE is his greatest novel since Dodsworth."

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

WILLIAM TERRY COUCH, who became director of the University of Chicago Press on the first of October was introduced to the Chicago literary press on Monday at a luncheon at the University club. . . . Mr. Couch comes from the University of North Carolina Press at Chapel Hill, one of the best known of the university presses. . . . He succeeds Joseph Brandt who has just left for New York, where he is the new president of Henry Holt & Co. . . . Mr. Brandt, who is 46, has had a spectacular career in college circles. . . . He was director of the University of Oklahoma Press for 10 years, director of Princeton University Press for three, went back to Oklahoma as its president in 1941, but left his alma mater to become director of the University of Chicago Press last year.

Mr. Couch has been more stable in his loyalties. . . . He began working at the University of North Carolina press a year before he graduated. . . . Soon after graduation he became assistant director, and in 1932 director of the Chapel Hill press. . . . He left that position to come to the University of Chicago. . . . While he was at Chapel Hill he attracted much attention by publishing books on subjects which have sorely tried his fellow southerners for generations—race, religion, and economics. Mr. Couch has been highly instrumental in giving the lie to the old saw:

Alas for the South, her books have grown fewer,
She never was much given to literature. . . .

Ernest C. Colwell, the new president of the University of Chicago, introduced Mr. Couch. . . . Also present were William Morgenstern, the university's director of public relations; Rollin D. Hemes, assistant director of the Press; John Scoon, editor. . . . [Incidentally, John Grier Hibben Scoon, to use his full name, has a definitely academic background himself. . . . His grandfather, John Grier Hibben, was president of Princeton university from 1912 until his death in 1933, and his father, Robert Scoon, chairman of the department of philosophy at Princeton]; Doris F. Flowers, assistant to the director of the Press; Elizabeth Wright, advertising manager; Loel Shuler, assistant sales manager, and Jeannette Lowrie and Chester Opal of press relations.

Assured of Losing Money!

After telling President Colwell that "I can assure you that I will accommodate you in losing money," Mr. Couch outlined the proposed future of the Press. . . . The first job of a university press is, he said, to publish scholarly books . . . "to conserve what knowledge we have and to add to it . . . the next problem is to find a wider audience for matters hitherto considered of only limited interest." There will be no major changes in policy, we gathered. . . . Mr. Couch answered the question of whether the press would publish fiction by saying that he thought it highly inappropriate for university presses to publish novels. . . . It may consider entering the field of poetry, however.

The next issue of Poetry magazine is one of the year's most interesting literary documents. It contains translations of some of the great resistance poems written by the French during the bitter years of occupation. Many of them are translated by George Dillon, editor of Poetry, now in Paris with the army signal corps. . . . In this issue are excerpts from letters from him. In one he says that Paul Eluard's poem "Liberté" [his translation of which is printed] "is probably the most famous poem of the resistance," and that Henri Michaux [translations of whose poems by George Dillon are also printed] is considered by many "the most original temperament that has appeared in France since Rimbaud and Lautreamont." Comte de Lautreamont, as the poverty-wracked Isidore Ducasse ironically signed himself. . . . [Incidentally, Lautreamont's "Chants de Maldoror" are, I have often been assured, the most violent pieces of poetic pessimism ever written in French.]

A Lecture by T. S. Eliot

Dillon also sends an interesting account of a lecture given in Paris [in French] by the great American born English poet, T. S. Eliot . . . the subject, "The Social Role of the Poet." . . . Mr. Dillon writes that Eliot "looked as handsome as ever, apparently unageing." [He's 57.] . . . Eliot said "the people who do not even know the names of their great national poets are nonetheless profoundly influenced by what the poets have written."

Dillon also sent a clipping of an article from the front page of Ce Soir, the leading afternoon paper, which appeared in the issue which announced the atomic bomb. . . . The article, by Jean Richard-Bloch, almost a column long, says in part, "Without minimizing the value and infinite consequences of this invention, may it not turn our eyes from another source of energy which has proved itself in the course of these terrible years. . . . The brain of the poet is also a formidable machine. It is also capable of secreting explosive products, to which the enslaved peoples owe in part their recovered energy and their reconquered freedom."

How those explosive products were secreted is the subject of another fascinating article, "The Conspiracy of the Poets," by Pierre Seghers . . . translated by William Jay Smith, a navy lieutenant who has just returned after 14 months overseas.

This spectacular issue of Poetry will be out soon.

Good Reading Is Career of John Ogilvie

"THE NORTH WIND OF LOVE," by Compton Mackenzie. [Dodd, Mead, $2.75].

Reviewed by Kenneth Horan

To make the acquaintance of that distinguished playwright and man of the world, John Ogilvie, is a distinct privilege. Patterned after some great unknown — neither Coward, Priestley, nor even Galsworthy or Barrie—John is a successful man, and able to spend the rest of his days in the pursuit of particular ideals.

The mellowness of the Forsyte saga is repeated in this family chronicle, tho the hero remains untouched, or rather unhurt by life, as was old Soames, because he has developed a philosophy in which he takes refuge.

Tho the north wind drives down on him, in his early forties, and he loses beautiful Athene—who, like the other characters of this book, we met in its preceding stories—still he is so interested in the world about him, that his life is not shattered. For one thing he is trying to change Scotland to dominion status, and there are pages of lively conversation with Scottish friends, all a little baffling to the reader unacquainted with the dialect.

Also he takes a trip to Poland and comments on Danzig, Warsaw, and Crakow, just before the war. American and British politics are another subject for conversation. In fact, talk and letters form a great part of John's story, which moves with the majesty of an elephant thru the 10 years preceding World War II.

This is good reading, because the plot is so natural, and because of the insight presented into the arts, the customs, the manners of the times. John has grown in stature since the first book concerning him, and he is now a mature, likable gentleman whose life is tuned to certain principles of conduct. He is a man of such strong faith that he has enjoyed metaphysical experiences, and these induce him to believe that this life is but a preface to a life to come. The pattern of his days remains then, undisturbed, even by rumors of war, which are forever in his ears.

Introspection then is combined with action in this finely conceived story of a distinguished gentleman and how he lived his life.

New Reference Work on Proverbs of Greece

"A PROVERB FOR IT," edited by B. J. Marketos. [New World, $3.]

Proving that the Greeks had a good many words for it, this collection of Hellenic proverbs covers a wide range of subject matter and, like all collections of such sayings, gives the careful and thoughtful reader an insight into the life, the thoughts, the spirit of the Greek people from ancient times to her unhappy today. Translated by Ann Arpajoglou, illustrated by John Vassos, this volume will be a welcome reference for many.

Good Egg Does Her Best as Chicken Ranch Wife

"THE EGG AND I," by Betty MacDonald. [Lippincott, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Marguerite Lyon

Betty MacDonald's mother taught her that it is a wife's bounden duty to see that her husband is happy in his work. "Never," said mother, "should a selfish wife tell her husband how and where he should earn the family living." Consequently, Betty doesn't quibble when Bob, her handsome young bridegroom, decides to run a chicken ranch under the snobbish noses of the Olympic mountains! But by golly, mother hadn't said she should like it.

No rural romanticist is Betty, reveling in such misfortunes as smoky stoves, prolonged rainy spells, being chased by a cougar and putting up with neighbors who are [1] obscene, worthless, irresponsible or [2] nasty nice. Betty develops a set of cuss words, wonders how her ability to dress a chicken in two minutes could be demonstrated socially, and admits that the happiest day of her life was when the pressure cooker blew up, wreathing stewed chicken on the picture frames but releasing her from the hateful task of canning.

Baby chicks are stupid smelly little boneheads, with cannibalistic tendencies, and they do not improve with age. And as for country scenery and sunshine, who has time to enjoy them! On a chicken ranch, declares Betty, there never dawns a beautiful day that isn't immediately spoiled by some great big backbreaking task. In short, Betty MacDonald's experience with that 'little place in the country' is as realistic as the Congressional Record and gayer than Olsen and Johnson.

Betty MacDonald

If you know a dewy-eyed prospective chicken raiser, buy, beg, borrow, or steal this book for him! With all of Betty's hilarity she tells just how her Bob makes money with his eggs and chickens, and when the book ends, the MacDonalds are going on to a bigger and better chicken ranch. Any man who sifts these gems of chicken raising wisdom from Betty's gay chatter will probably say to his wife:

"Look, honey, it needn't be like that! Now if we'd just start a little chicken ranch in . . ."

When that happens in your home, pray for the gallant sportsmanship of Betty MacDonald, and her terrific sense of humor!

Here's a Story for Parents of Lost Sons

"A KNIGHT THERE WAS," by Mary England. [Macmillan, $1.00].

Reviewed by Arthur Frederic Otis

This is, if you please, a novel 60 pages in length. It is a story of a mother and a father and a boy—his growing up, and his going to school, and his going to war.

It is an honest story of hearts laid bare, of intimate, true, courageous thoughts. A thousand pages could have been used in the telling, and other characters could have been added, but to no purpose.

"The boy sat in the class room. He had finished his prep, so his mind was free to wander. . . . How filthy the back of Rogers' collar is, he mused; he always was a bit scruffy, but he's a good bowler. And what funny ears Parker has—all sticking out and showing the dirt at the back. Silly things, ears, such an awful shape for keeping clean."

See what I mean by intimate thoughts?

Not all parents are as brave as the boy's parents. Not all boys are as responsive. But there is a pattern of thought in this beautifully written little piece which deserves wide reading. It is a dangerous recommendation to make, but if you have lost a boy, or if friends of yours have lost a boy, a reading and re-reading of "A Knight There Was" may help. At any rate, it's worth trying. Anything is worth trying.

Britain Looks to America for More Help

"AMERICA'S STAKE IN BRITAIN'S FUTURE," by George Soule. [Viking Press, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Dr. Melchior Palyi

The title is a misnomer if there ever was one. "Britain's Stake in America" would be more correct. Indeed, it would be difficult to find one sentence on the elegantly written 225 pages that would indicate an American stake, unless one counts the short concluding paragraph that puts the burden for Britain's future at our doorstep on the moral ground that it was "ignominious" to stand aside while she was skirting the edges of defeat.

The reasoning is simple and has been used for some time by the British. They are in plight, not being able to balance their foreign trade.

To do so they must resort to exchange restrictions and the building of a self-sufficient sterling bloc, discriminating against us, unless we support Britain generously [she is not asking for credits, says Mr. Soule], open our doors wide for imports, and especially maintain a policy of full employment along the lines of William Beveridge's well known program.

What that means is not explained; it means planned economy with governmental control of the major economic sectors and arbitrary rule by administrative organs, financed by unrestrained paper money inflation.

The double purpose is obvious. On the one hand we are threatened with British isolationism [of the nazi kind, mind you] if we do not accept full employment à la Beveridge, cost what it may. What Mr. Soule ignores completely is the obvious: that her policy of economic isolation would hurt Britain a hundred times more than us, even if we do not proceed to retaliate.

On the other hand, by selling the idea of full employment to America, the hands of the British leftists should be strengthened in their own political backyards. The propaganda is camouflaged by long arguments and by a profuse but somewhat dilettantic use of statistics. However, it is not even cleverly done, overlooking the best arguments in favor of supporting Britain, such as her importance as the largest export outlet for international raw materials and as a bulwark of European political stability.

A Veteran Satirizes Army's Red Tape

"THE CHAIN OF COMMAND," by Barrie Stavis. [Bernard Ackerman, $1.]

In a slightly Rabelaisian vein, Barrie Stavis takes an amusing pass at the army he has so recently left, hitting it in one of its most vulnerable spots—the mountainous paper work and endless routine and waste involved in that phenomenon known as the chain of command. Any soldier who is or was working at a desk, anywhere along the chain, probably will read this with relish. Even the untutored civilian will find considerable humor in the narrative of Maj. Jefferson's monumental idea for saving a certain type of paper.

Bring More Poise, Individuality and Progress ... This Quick, Interesting Way!

HOW we modern Americans dislike to be bored! We are indeed an active lot of people! We like entertainment, sports and adventure. One night we are off to the movies. The next night we play bridge. Even when we do spend an evening at home, we must turn on the radio. Anything, you see, to escape from boredom.

But a very significant change has taken place, and is continuing. Unquestionably, the war has been a factor; possibly the new trend is simply a natural reaction.

All over America thinking people are beginning to weary of the terrific rush . . . the incessant high speed . . . the endless round of bright lights, the feverish quest for diversion. Too many movies, too much bridge . . . too much running around . . . what, they ask, can be more boresome than that?

Interesting Conversation . . . the Secret

The result is that more and more intelligent Americans are beginning to relax. They are finding a new happiness. They are turning to the finer things of life. And that is leading to an ever widening desire for conversation.

True, not every man or woman knows the art of good conversation. But that's simply all the more reason why the interesting talker is so welcome in this new world of ours. He brings enthusiasm with him. Sparkle! Entertainment! Thrills! No more silly gossip about the neighbors . . . no more stupid remarks about the weather . . . no more tedious tales of family trouble. Instead bright, sparkling words that arouse attention and quicken the imagination.

You know, through your own observation, that good talkers always win attention. They command respect! They quickly become not only popular, but often very influential. All of which directly helps them to win the good things of life—while others are still vainly wishing for them.

Resolve now that you too will win. Decide now—this very day!—that you will take the first step by finding out how to become a good conversationist.

Just a Few Simple Rules

Conversation has certain fundamental rules and principles—just like any other art. The good talkers whom you admire know these rules and apply them whenever they converse. Learn the rules and make your conversation brighter, more entertaining and impressive. When you have learned the magic power of words, you may find yourself becoming more popular and winning new friendships in the business and social worlds.

The Famous Ethel Cotton Conversation Course

Several years ago a woman famous in adult education had a revolutionary idea. Impressed by the fact that thousands of men and women were needlessly retarding their progress through lack of good conversational ability, she decided to help them.

The result was the famous Ethel Cotton Conversation Course, a remarkably simple plan through which thousands have discovered powers of conversation they never dreamed they possessed. Indeed, many have written that their very lives have been transformed—they've opened the gates to new and fuller lives, rich with opportunity and golden promise.

The woman's name is Ethel Cotton. You may have heard her over stations of the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Formerly, only those living in such cities as New York or San Francisco could enjoy the benefits of Miss Cotton's now nationally famous Conversation Course. Today, the full Course, consisting of twelve thrilling lessons and twelve personal "Studio Talks" from Miss Cotton, is available by mail.

Countless students who have taken the Conversation Course tell us they have found nothing like it. They say that it is not only intensely practical, but also exciting and inspiring.

Dos Passos' Vivid Flashes at Two Wars

"FIRST ENCOUNTER," by John Dos Passos. [Philosophical Library, $2.]

Reviewed by Walter Simmons

During the first World war a young man of 22 emerged [as he said later] "half-baked from Harvard" and headed for France to become an ambulance driver. Afterward he wrote a book giving his observations of that war.

Read now, close to 30 years later, the book seems oddly episodic, strangely and largely disharmonious with war as we have known it in these days.

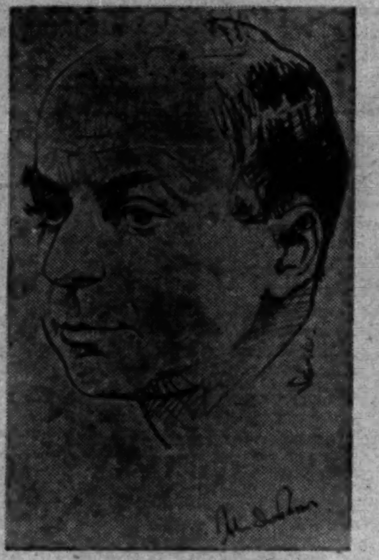
It is a stage lighted by random flashes, showing here an old woman, there some men drinking wine, stretcher cases whizzing past, soldiers thumbing greasy cards, girls hopeful of assignations, pale German prisoners, men in gas masks, all this under a thundering umbrella of shellfire, criss-crossed by a stacatto of conversation.



Sketch of John Dos Passos

That is not to say the Dos Passos recently back from the Pacific war shouldn't have brought out and published this work of his immature years. Frequently it is touched with his later genius, but it is most rewarding in its evocations of past years, of that war we entered so naively, with such illusions.

"Last winter," Dos Passos says in an effective preface, "talking to the young men out in the Pacific, I found that most of them just hoped that what they would return to would not be worse than what they had left."

Here he has well expressed the attitude of two generations of the American soldier.

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock

New York

LISTEN to the current talk in the book business:

That Somerset Maugham is finishing off a novel, for publication early in the new year, and that it may be a sensation.

That the man who wrote "The Townsman" under the pseudonym, John Sedges, is doing a post-Civil war novel, likewise for publication early next year, without yet revealing his identity. [But some persons have a pretty good idea of who he is. Consensus: he's a publisher whose wife is an internationally known author.]

That James Ramsey Ullman, who told all about mountain climbing in "The White Tower," gets dizzy when he nears the top of a skyscraper.

That Charles Jackson's nearly completed novel, "The Fall of Valor," is a study of marriage.

That Kenneth Horan's "Papa Went to Congress" will top all her previous performances.

That a collection of letters from overseas, to be published under the title, "With Love, Jane," includes a sparkling one by Chicago's Gretchen Kroch.

That the best comment on the critical storm raised by Heinrich Hauser's "The German Talks Back" was made by Harry Hansen in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE: "Can it be that Americans also don't want printed books that oppose our point of view?"

That Robert Wilder's "Written on the Wind," scheduled for publication next January, is about a leading tobacco family in North Carolina; the founder, who fought his way up from the soil, and a neurotic descendant, who married a girl on her way to stardom. [Do you happen to recall a celebrated case involving an heir to the R. J. Reynolds tobacco fortune and Libby Holman, torch singer?]

That Eleanor Roosevelt has written a book called "If You Ask Me."

That Jan Struther's next will be "A Pocketful of Pebbles."

That Edward Wagenknecht's "The Fireside Book of Christmas Stories" will be a "dividend" of the Book of the Month Club for November-December.

That a lot of writers who were telling how the war should be run have been left high and dry by the war's sudden ending. [One of them, known for his pomposity, had an article in a weekly magazine on how difficult it was going to be to lick Japan. The article appeared a week or so after the Japs had caved in.]

That, as soon as enough paper is available, new titles, along with reprints and the classics, will come off the presses in unprecedented numbers; that before long the book industry may move into the Big Business classification, and that, in anticipation of such a move, some pretty strong financial interests are getting set to horn in on the harvest.

An Absorbing Romance by Hebrew Poet

"SONG OF THE DNIEPER," by Zalman Shneour. [Roy Publishers, $3].

Reviewed by Dr. Felix A. Levy

There is a widespread belief that a poet rarely achieves competency in the field of novel writing and that the romancer seldom succeeds as a maker of verse. The author of this book is better known as a singer of Hebrew strains — one of the best among the contemporary fashioners of the literary renascence of the language of the Old Testament—yet he tells an absorbing story of Jewish life in a small village on the banks of the Russian river, a life that is disappearing, if it has not already gone from eastern Europe, the great reservoir of Jewish strength.

The book was written in Yiddish and published a few years ago but only in part, under another title, that of its central figure, Noah Pandre—a simple butcher, but kindly and generous. His development against the almost medieval physical background, the clash of his interests and desires with Jew and Gentile, his love for the unattainable Mary, who later deceives him, their reconciliation, his instinctive Jewish reactions, particularly in protecting his people, his experience in jail—all of these episodes are well told and reveal a mastery of his craft by their creator.

Noah is a different kind of a Jew from the one that one usually meets in fiction of this kind. He is not an emaciated bookworm afraid of the world from which he runs away. On the contrary Noah is lusty, fleshy, strong, and passionate, and is given almost heroic stature on the anvil of life.

Only time can tell how "great" this book is or whether the author according to the blurb on the jacket deserves comparison with Fielding, Tolstoy, and other masters. This much we can say of "The Song of the Dnieper," that its reading is a unique literary experience and that the book has reality.

New Series on Saints Written for Children

"NEW SIX O'CLOCK SAINTS," by Joan Windham. [Sheed & Ward, $1.75.]

An English author here provides children with the third of a series of stories of saints for the evening reading hour. She writes with a sprightly humor and intimacy that portrays attractively the cheerfulness, humility, faith, and kindness of the men and women honored as saints with special days by the Catholic church. Included are William of France, Irene of Hungary, Kenneth, Veronica, Owen, Ronald, and Joseph of Arimathea.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Delos Avery

LURCHES AND CHURCHES

THE time has come to redeem a promise made months ago to Henry Dierkes, poet and editor, who wrote a pathetic letter saying: "Won't you please find an error in Living Poetry [that's his magazine] and give us a few thousand dollars' worth of free publicity? Please look hard." He sent us a free copy and we searched it thru without finding a flaw, but promised to try again if he sent us his autumn number.

Well, here it is at our elbow, propped open to page 9, with a poem titled "Office Girl," written by Mr. Dierkes himself, and he is caught in flagrant délit, as the French say when what they mean is shameless sin. He rhymes his lurches with his churches.

For years and years we have been preaching against this sort of thing, but nobody ever pays the least attention. Rake the whole field of poetry, and whenever you find a lurch at the end of a line you will find a church at the end of the next. Is this necessary? No! For look—

We would whack with a birch any bard who'd besmirch
With such two-worded rhyming his poem,
When a moment's research would bring down from their perch
Half a dozen—and poets should know 'em.

Aside from her lurches and churches we are fond of Mr. Dierkes' office girl. She has a shiny nose, rebellious hair, and she is untidy with her toast and coffee. Her girdle makes trouble for her and her slip shows. So does the poet's.

Dr. Rousseau Van Voorhies of the Boswell institute points with pride to [and encloses copy of] a letter from Harry S. Truman, former Vice President of the United States, accepting the institute's honorary degree Sapientiae Mundanae Doctor. Mr. Truman, at one time a haberdasher in Kansas City [Missouri] in partnership with a Mr. Jacobson, is now a trusted white collar employe of the government in the District of Columbia. His friends are sure he will wear his new honors modestly.

By curious coincidence, the same post that brought Dr. Van Voorhies' stimulating success story about the retired clothier brought also a message from V. V.'s boon companion and alter ego, Frère Jean of l'Abbaye de Thélème, enclosing an English version of verses originally written in French [some years ago] by François Rabelais, a lusty fellow who also wrote books. The rhymes are worth quoting:

KIND readers, who vouchsafe to cast an eye
On what ensues, lay all prevention by.
Let not my book your indignation raise:
It means no harm, no poison it conveys.
Except in point of laughing, it is true,
'Twon't teach you much: It being all my view
To inspire with mirth the hearts of those that moan,
And change to laughter the afflictive groan:
FOR LAUGHTER IS MAN'S PROPERTY ALONE!

The excellence of the translation impelled us to wonder who might be the craftsman who achieved it, and we borrowed the book from Dr. Kelsey Guilfoil, who had borrowed it from V. V., who had received it as gift [posthumous] from Rabelais himself, as the flyleaf inscription tells, dated Feb. 9, 1938 [indicating that some sort of spirit writing must have been employed, perhaps with a quill from the wing of Pegasus, dipped in ectoplasm].

But as to the identity of the translator we remain in doubt. For the title page says no more than the following: "The Works of Rabelais, faithfully translated from the French, with variorum notes and numerous illustrations, by Gustave Doré."

We had long known, of course, that Doré was skilled in the métier of the draughtsman, but we are not inclined to accept [without confirming evidence] the postulate that he knew enough English to compose such a trilogy of rhymes as moan-groan-alone.

Perhaps V. V., after a conference with Frère Jean, may find the answer.

Since the atmosphere of this column seems to be more than usually churchly today, it is perhaps a good time to record the fact that the Rev. Irwin St. John Tucker, familiarly known as "Friar Tuck," who serves a newspaper on week days and parishioners of "The Little Church at the End of the Road" on Sundays, is about to publish another book, with the title "Out of the Hell-Box," an intriguing phrase familiar to printers, to whom it means a place for discarded type. Since many good things have gone into the hell-box, why shouldn't some good things come out?

Munro Leaf Writes Against the Cheaters

"LET'S DO BETTER," by Munro Leaf. [Lippincott, $1.50.]

This newest in Munro Leaf's literary efforts to make good conduct attractive to children shows how boys and girls can help to banish war. He uses his usual expressive drawings to trace the troubles mankind has got into by following leaders who are selfish cheaters. Children are encouraged to grow into strong, kind, and unselfish thinkers. The kindergarten portion of Mr. Leaf's following will find the idea too mature. F. D. H.

A HANDYMAN'S GUIDE

"THE HOME MECHANIC'S HANDBOOK," by a group of experts. [Van Nostrand, $5.95.]

This book is designed for those who like to be handy around the house or putter about in a home workshop. It will be particularly helpful to those who undertake such work with reluctance. The directions are simple and clear, ably supported by pictures of tools and materials and diagrams of procedures.

There are extensive sections on painting and decorating, woodwork, metalworking, plumbing, concrete work, brick work, and electrical work. Each section is written by an expert and carefully broken down so that every essential detail of direction is covered.

"The Home Mechanic's Handbook" should prove to be the male counterpart of the cook book in the household. Every aid is given to insure a workmanship job and fun in doing it. Each section is introduced by a brief summary of how best to utilize the information given. An excellent index lists every item which is likely to come up in the care of the home and in the workshop. FOLKS SAY
"Recently retired from service, starting out as a subsistence farmer—no previous experience—I find Country Book an answer to a prayer."
"Don't see how you do it, but there on the cover were a quartet of the top agricultural writers of the United States. I like your slant which seems to me to be aimed at the intelligent and agriculturally-interested public. I think Country Book is the 'class' publication of the agricultural field."
"Covers an amazing amount of ground, there are so many articles in it of interest to me."—H. Hartogensis, Head, Editorial Section U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, REA
"Greatly appreciate your charming as well as utilitarian magazine. Since my husband's discharge we have bought a house in a tiny village and are having a merry time adjusting ourselves to the rural way of life. Your magazine is the only one of its kind I've encountered that a thoroughly city-bred person can enjoy, and, much more to the point, understand."

Country Book is the American counterpart of the world-famous English "Countryman". Each issue contains some of the most valuable information on soil, crops, farm management, building, and gardening available in this country. Here are the latest ideas and experiments for the expert farmer; fundamentals for the beginner, discussed in the light of new developments; care, feeding, and development of farm animals and herds; articles on trees, shrubs, and flowers which will delight the horticulturist and thrill the amateur; and for the city-apartment-armchair-farmer one of the pleasantest escapes to rural life ever invented by man.

Intimate View of 3 Villages Inside China

"EARTHBOUND CHINA," by Hsiao-tung Fei and Chih-i Chang. [University of Chicago Press, $3.75].

Reviewed by A. L. Bader

We need more books like this one. Two Chinese sociologists, Professors Fei and Chang, have given us a study of the rural economy of three villages in interior China, and by their presentation of sober, scientifically gathered fact have invalidated much romantic impressionism by western writers.

The three villages chosen by the authors for their study vary in type from the purely self supporting agricultural community to the community which depends partly upon local industry and outside markets for its economy.

There are two aspects to the book. One is that of straight sociological investigation. The authors tell us who owns the land, who works the land, what crops are planted, what the land returns, and what social stratification results from ownership and tenancy respectively. The authors reiterate that while China is primarily an agricultural nation she can barely support her population.

The second and larger aspect of the book appears when the authors discuss the implications of their study for the future of Chinese economy. They have no faith in the industrialization of China which they maintain would merely repeat the worst evils of the industrial revolution in Europe. Rather they advocate a combination of agriculture and coöperative small industry to that practiced in war time Free China.

"Earthbound China" is an interesting and scholarly contribution to our knowledge of a country only beginning to emerge as a great world power. It has been admirably produced.

How a Desert Army Blocked Hitler Drive

"THE GOLDEN CARPET," by Somerset de Chair. [Harcourt, Brace, $3.50.].

Reviewed by Walter Simmons

The war has produced only one book in the tradition of T. E. Lawrence, and this is it. Somerset de Chair, who is not as sedentary as he sounds, wrote it after accompanying the British column which in 1941 crossed the western desert, took Baghdad, then backtracked and invaded hostile Syria.

Somerset de Chair

These doings were necessary because Hitler obviously was planning to punch thru the middle east and envelop India. Already the way had been paved with subtle propaganda. No Arab tribesman would have given a piastre for Britain's chance of winning the war. The Iraquis hastened to get on the bandwagon with their 40,000 British trained troops. The Vichy Frenchmen of Syria were already there.

At this late hour Brigadier Joe Kingstone was sent across the desert with 750 men to capture Baghdad. Helped by the Arab scouts of the mysterious Glubb Pasha, he did it—something no army had ever done.

De Chair served as intelligence officer of Kingcol, as Kingstone's column was known. No regular, he maintained his insigne was "a carafe of brains being dashed out on the sand." After the Baghdad operation he took part in the invasion of Syria until wounded by bullets from a French plane. A talented, restless, egoistic man, he has written an absorbing account of the middle east maneuvers.

A Delightful Tour Thru Modern Home

"TOMORROW'S HOUSE" by George Nelson and Henry Wright. [Simon & Schuster, $3.]

This is a delightfully conducted tour thru a modern house—from radiant heated floors to insulated roofs—for the prospective home builder or home modernizer. It's not the run-of-mill "book of plans"—in fact there isn't a complete floor layout in the volume. It's a closeup picture of modern residential living, with sequences showing what one can do with the 1945 gadgets, equipment, and countless innovations either available now or soon to be, in building or rebuilding a home. It tells how to reach the goal of a good looking, well built, economical, comfortable, and efficiently planned home. Superbly illustrated.

Fascinating Books on Noted Americans

"JOHN QUINCY ADAMS: BOY PATRIOT," by Ann Weil.

"ROBERT FULTON: BOY CRAFTSMAN," by Marguerite Henry. [Bobbs-Merrill, $1.50 each.]

The Boston lad who grew up to hold the most important offices of any American and the 7 year old gunsmith's assistant of Lancaster, Pa., who was one day to make the first practical steamboat are as delightful as their 22 predecessors in the Childhood of Famous Americans series. Both stories give an entertaining and inspiring picture of life when our nation was young. They promise to become as thumb-marked by the children in the reviewer's household and neighborhood as the previous volumes in this excellent series. FRANCES DUNLAP HERON.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

BERNARD SHAW once argued that public library reading rooms should be well stocked with books about rogues and knaves—"the most infamous characters in fact or fiction." His explanation, Freudian in concept, will occur at once to amateur psychiatrists; to wit, since literature is an escape from life, those who read about crime become vicariously the criminals about whom they read, and their latent criminal tendencies are harmlessly wasted thru the imagination. "Do not listen to the people who wish to purify public bookshelves," the Shavian utterance concluded; "they are sitters on safety valves."

Possibly so; but he might have carried the argument a step farther and adduced a plausible reason for the popularity of the detective story. If it is true that there is a latent criminal in most readers, it is also true that the criminal impulse is more than balanced by the instinct to support the rule of order. Readers flee with the hare, no doubt, but also they hunt with the hounds. I venture to think more readers identify themselves with the detective in a story than with the criminal, because, in general, it is more flattering to themselves. Either way, I have seen no dearth of crime literature in public reading rooms. Even 25 years ago, when Shaw made his remark, I think he was—as usual—just calling attention to George Bernard Shaw.

All the Great Criminals

Be this as it may, Ellery Queen has seized on the quoted words as an excuse for dedicating his new book, "Rogues' Gallery" [Little, Brown] to the Irish publicity seeker, and a grand volume of entertainment it is—the first anthology bringing together all the great criminals of modern fiction. Here are murderers, thieves, confidence men, crooked lawyers, art fakers, smugglers, pickpockets, cardsharpers, and assorted criminals, from Raffles and Arsène Lupin, two old masters of impropriety, to the latest slickers on New York's Broadway. Out of the past comes Col. Clay, from Grant Allen's "An African Millionaire," the first picturesque swindler in the modern manner; George Randolph Chester's "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," of happy memory, and Frederick Irving Anderson's "Infallible Godahl," a brilliant rascal too little known in our day. Austin Freeman's Danby Croker is here, and O. Henry's Jeff Peters, and Melville Davisson Post's Randolph Mason. Among the lesser reputations are William Hope Hodgson's Captain Gault and T. S. Stribling's Dr. Xenophon Quintero Sanchez, two dashing crooks in whose exploits your latent criminal impulses will delight. Two noted authors whose contributions to this sort of literature will perhaps come as a surprise are Howard Spring and Arnold Bennett. The indefatigable Queen has even found a masterly crime short story by the early Sinclair Lewis, which Mr. Lewis probably had forgotten he ever wrote.

If, as Bernard Shaw once thought, there is an insufficiency of criminals on the shelves of public reading rooms, this would be an excellent book with which to start a shelf.

Mystery from Africa

Incidentally, as good a beginning for a mystery story as any writer ever extracted from his latent criminal mind was handed to Ben Lucien Burman, author of "Rooster Crows for Day" [Dutton], without benefit of cerebration. The incident occurred under his nose, more or less, in his home in New York City.

When Burman was in Africa, in 1941, the French commissioner at Bouka, in Ubangi-Shari, the only white man in hundreds of miles, gave him a ju-ju, and the author brought the idol home with him. For years—at least since 1941—the surface of the thing was perfectly smooth; but recently the writer happened to glance at it and saw that a hole, about the diameter of a thick lead pencil, had appeared in the ju-ju's left shoulder. It twisted far down into the interior, as tho a small snake, or something dwelling within, had broken free.

An elaborate search of the Burman apartment followed promptly, but nothing significant was discovered, or had been discovered at last reports. Whether the hole was caused by the loosening of a plug concealing a charge of poison, injected perhaps by an African witch doctor, or whether a giant termite gnawed its way to freedom and is still about the place, the novelist doesn't know—but he is moving warily about the premises after dark.

The best solution would be for Mr. Burman to write a story about it; that is the surest way to rid one's self of an obsession.

New Ways of Dying

"Death hath 10 thousand several doors for men to take their exits," said Webster's Duchess of Malfi, when she was faced with her stranglers, and most of them—including strangling—have been used by writers of mystery stories, ad nauseam. The search for a new and strange means of death goes forward constantly, however; it is almost a mystery monger's principal occupation away from his desk. In this connection, two admirable textbooks for writers—altho that was not the intention of the authors—have been published by Prentice-Hall, "The Unknown Murderer," by Theodor Reik, and "Spies and Traitors of World War II.," by Kurt Singer. No bookshelf of crime should be without them, just as good reading; but writers of crime fiction will find them invaluable source works, packed with the materials of a hundred tales.

Mr. Singer's book of true spy stories is better than a dozen novels by Oppenheim, and Dr. Reik is very learned on the motivation of murders.

How Many Redheads

A correspondent who has been reading G. K. Chesterton's Father Brown omnibus [Dodd, Mead], has been greatly struck, he says, by the fact that almost every story contains a redheaded character. "Is this," he asks, "an accident, or is there some underlying psychological significance?"

I should be more impressed by the phenomenon if I were certain it were true. My reading of the Father Brown stories doesn't bear out the fact alleged. In a recent cursory examination of the book I found barely enough redheads to make a quorum; but possibly I was too hasty.

No Great Contempt for Rogues

This week's column appears to be largely about crime and criminals; but—"The World, my Dear, hath not such a contempt for roguery as you imagine," as old Mr. Peachum observed in "The Beggar's Opera."

"FROM MY LIBRARY WALLS," by William Dana Orcutt. [Longmans, $3.]

Reviewed by Russell MacFall

Readers of Mr. Orcutt's previous books know of his interest in fine printing, in writing, and in the company of celebrated men. He has touched upon all of these topics in random papers assembled into "From My Library Walls," from previous appearances in the Christian Science Monitor.

William Dana Orcutt

Mr. Orcutt, if he were an Englishman instead of a Bostonian, would be what the literary historians call a Georgian. He grew up in a society still dominated by our Victorians—Holmes, Emerson, Lowell, and Norton. He was associated with Mark Twain, Howells and Cable in America, and in London with Barrie, Caine, and Wells, among others. In the course of his duties as a book designer, he traveled extensively and came to know distinguished scholars in libraries abroad. All these personalities are wheat for his winnowing into anecdotes.

Several of the reminiscences, such as the one in which he recalls how J. P. Morgan helped the British museum buy a manuscript which Morgan himself coveted, and the picture of the peace of Monte Cassino before it was torn to rubble by the allied advance in Italy, are of more than passing interest.

Mr. Orcutt's remarks about William Morris are also of some significance, because the interest in modern fine book making, of which Mr. Orcutt has been a notable exponent, stems from Morris. Mr. Orcutt, however, has succeeded in carrying out Morris' original purpose of bringing well made books to the people, where his master inconsistently made expensive ones.

Most of the other reminiscences are pleasant reading, urbane, Bostonian, and the sort of thing any man of letters can enjoy.

How Conflicting Forces Disturb Our Mentalities

"OUR INNER CONFLICTS," by Karen Horney. [W. W. Norton, $3.]

Reviewed by Laurence T. Heron

Why does a solicitous mother forget her child's birthday? Because, says Dr. Horney, the mother has an inner conflict between her desire to appear a solicitous mother and her suppressed indifference or aversion to the child. That's how neuroses occur, according to the author, who has taught psychoanalysis in Berlin, Chicago, and New York.

As she sees it, three basic drives, which impel a person in opposite directions, cause these troubles. The normal person consciously resolves the problem of conflicting drives by yielding first to one drive, then to another, according to expedience. This, the neurotic cannot do.

The three types of drives are: Those which move one to comply with the will of others; those which impel one to combat the wills of others so as to make one's own will prevail, and those which prompt one to detach oneself from other persons and from their wills.

Dr. Horney's theory is more complex than that of Freud, who always could blame the libido which he invariably would find hiding in the woodpile. She is more optimistic than the great Viennese, however, for she declares it possible to change a man fundamentally and abate a conflict by making a good man of him.

Film Classics Planned

Grosset & Dunlap announces a new series of books from which popular movies have been made. Altho these reprints will sell at a low price, they are more handsomely made than the usual "movie" editions. The first four titles of the series are "State Fair," by Phil Stong; "Week-End at the Waldorf," novelized by Charles Lee; "Love Letters," by Chris Massie, and "Our Vines Have Tender Grapes," by George Victor Martin.

New Pollyanna Coming

"Pollyanna at Six Star Ranch," by May Moffitt, will be published by L. C. Page & Co. next spring.

Tale of Whig Orator with Feet of Clay

"SEARGENT S. PRENTISS, Whig Orator of the Old South," by Dallas C. Dickey. [Louisiana State University Press, $4.]

Reviewed by Avery Craven

The American frontier was a lawyer's paradise. Land disputes and personal violence, as a normal part of every day life, gave ample practice, and success before juries opened the way to public office. The man with rugged courage, abundant energy, and the ability to speak in public was certain of both fame and fortune.

Seargent S. Prentiss was such a man and he found his opportunities down at Natchez, Miss., in the days when that region was young. Born in Maine and educated at Bowdoin college, Prentiss studied law for a time in the office of one Judge Pierce in Gorham and then, at 19, turned westward, first to Cincinnati and then to Natchez. For two years he taught school on plantations and in spare time prepared himself for the bar examinations. When these were passed he hung out his shingle in the little river town.

Success came early. Fees, such as no young lawyer in New England ever dreamed of, were extracted and the sums of money sent back to the home folks in Maine must have widened their eyes. Soon he moved to the more promising town of Vicksburg and added speculation in lands and town lots to his undertakings. Then he went to the state legislature and to congress.

Meanwhile he had developed his political creed and had become the outstanding orator of his region in its defense. He was a Whig, which implied allegiance to Henry Clay and opposition to Andrew Jackson. He favored the National bank and its recharter; defended the protective tariff; opposed the repudiation of Mississippi's bonds when the state had overstretched its financial resources, and gradually came to defend the institution of slavery as a necessary part of plantation economy.

But it was as an orator rather than as a thinker that Prentiss made his reputation. It was a day of long speeches embellished with classical references, flowery phrases, and lavish symbolism. Men would stand by the hour while such an orator reduced himself to a state of utter exhaustion and sometimes waited while he temporarily recovered and continued his efforts. Speeches were demanded on all occasions and gifted individuals soon became professional orators capable of being turned on at a moment's notice. Prentiss was such an orator.

Weakness for drink and gambling soon reduced him to bankruptcy.

He literally talked himself to death at the age of 42. His permanent accomplishments were few but no man of his day better represented the frontier lawyer than Seargent Prentiss and few men had a more colorful and active life.

Prof. Dickey has told the story well.

Jewish Problems Are Surveyed in Competent Essay

"A PARTISAN GUIDE TO THE JEWISH PROBLEM," by Milton Steinberg. (Bobbs-Merrill, $3.)

Reviewed by Dr. Felix A. Levy

To an awkward defender of his pet theory about Jews Israel Zangwill once rejoined, "I am afraid, Mr. Soandso, you do not understand yourself." All too frequently is this true about statements made about Jews by themselves and by others. Rabbi Steinberg's book does not suffer from this defect. He understands the various Jewish questions and answers them with a logical as well as literary clarity.

His division into problems of status, self-assertion, tradition and homeland permits him to treat the wide range of topics that impinge upon his general thesis, that the Jew must order his life to live in the modern world, both as an individual and as a member of a group, as a professor of a unique religion as well as a child of a historic people.

In different countries there will be different adjustments. Palestine is a guarantee of Jewish survival but only a small percentage of Israel can settle there. In this country the Jew can be sympathetic to Palestine, as the Irishman is to Eire, but the Jew lives as a part of America, participating in two cultures, the Jewish element of which is predominantly religious.

The discussion of anti-Semitism is sane and judicious. The chapters on "reform" in Jewish religious practice, on the whole are equally so. Few will dispute the main assertions of the book, which is partisan, not in the sense of being unfair or refusing to see the other side, but in that it springs from deep and for the writer and his people, sound convictions. There is a verve and an ingratiation in the author's scholarly presentation that will win many friends to his way of thinking.

The work deserves a large circle of readers and these will not be disappointed for their perusal of this competent essay.

LUSTY WIND FOR CAROLINA

By Inglis Fletcher

NOT for many a year has there appeared such a rich, flamboyant adventure-romance as LUSTY WIND FOR CAROLINA—an epic novel that takes you back to the days of duels, thrilling sea battles and rough, bawdy living on the fringe of the American pioneer wilderness. In its pages a whole gallery of fascinating characters comes to life—Anne Bonney, celebrated pirate queen, whose exotic, untamed beauty was matched only by her devilish cruelty—swarthy libertine Stede Bonnet, Anne's paramour in passion and tool in crime—Gabrielle Fountaine, captivating French heroine, and her handsome soldier lover, David Moray, who found romantic fulfillment in the New World.

All these and a host of other colorful, devil-may-care characters crowd a huge story-canvas and claim your rapt attention for over 450 pages of action-packed drama, hair-raising exploits on sea and land, tender and passionate moments of love. This new and popular novel will be sent to you FREE as soon as you join the Dollar Book Club—which you can do merely by mailing the coupon below.

AS THE battle raged to a bloody climax with the ruffians howling for mercy, suddenly a slender figure leaped on deck. Here was Anne Bonney, infamous pirate queen, her blonde tresses streaming, her mouth twisted in fury, "God's death to you cowards!" she taunted, lashing her men with a murderous whip. . . . Only one man knew the dark secret that goaded Anne to violent adventure and bloody vengeance!

CHINA TO ME—by Emily Hahn

EMILY HAHN started out with her sister on a world tour. All went "strictly according to plan" until their boat docked at Shanghai. The moment Emily Hahn stepped on Chinese soil something happened to her. She herself couldn't explain it—the mystic enchantment of that noisy, cluttered Oriental city—the strange feeling that here lay her destiny. Instead of going on with her sister, she stayed in China—stayed eight years and lived through the most astonishing series of adventures ever to befall an American woman.

This is the story of those eight years—how she "married" into a Chinese family, part for business, part for deviltry, and later owed her life to this weird "paper" transaction—how she bought a gibbon named Mr. Mills, outfitted him in diapers and shocked the dowagers of Shanghai by bringing him to society tea—how she won the friendship of the three famous Soong sisters, ruling family of China—and, finally, how she determined to have a baby even though she wasn't married—and did. Her daughter, Carola, was born just a few weeks before the Japs took Hong Kong, and the father, a British officer, was taken a Jap prisoner of war somewhere in occupied China. This witty and exciting best-seller will be sent you now as your first Dollar Book Club selection for only $1.00.

BAD MEN OF DELIGHT

By FREDERICK R. BECHDOLT

(Copyright: 1945: By Frederick R. Bechdolt)

INSTALMENT I.

THE spring afternoon was drawing to a close and the news which was to take Barbara to the sleepy little town of Delight was on its way; tidings as unsuspected as the dangers and the love which were awaiting her down there by the Mexican border. She was bringing the sheep to the bed ground that afternoon, and a belated blizzard had swooped down on the raw Utah uplands. She welcomed the howling wind. The clouds of flying snow kindled new hope in her heart for she had been expecting another messenger than the one who was coming, and the thought of the summons which he was due to bring made her flinch. Now the drifts were gathering fast and the chances were all against any driver attempting the rough dirt roads.

The horses plodded slowly dragging the sheep wagon against the gale. The flock followed, a huge dull shadow crawling across the sage brush flat. The dogs were racing back and forth along its edges, bullying the sheep toward the lee of the rim rock bluffs somewhere beyond the limits of the gray circle into which the world had shrunk.

Barbara came behind. Sorority sisters, with whom she had lived until calamity snatched her away from the campus of the state university, would not have recognized her now. She was in overalls, booted, cloaked to the knees, and she carried a rifle in the crook of her arm. Occasionally the sharp yelps of the dogs and the quavering bleating of the sheep reached her thru the droning of the wind.

It was near lambing time and many of the animals were heavy with their unborn young. An old ewe, weary with the weight in her belly and blinded by the beads of ice which had gathered in the wool above her eyes, sank down beneath a clump of sage brush. While she was lying there a gray shape emerged out of the flying snow. It was so near that she saw the lolling tongue, the fierce white line of its teeth. The dimness was cleft by a thin red flash. The wind whipped the sharp report of the rifle away and the coyote became a heap of fur which quivered for a moment and then was still.

Barbara tucked the weapon back into the crook of her arm and drove the ewe on before her. It was growing dark when she reached the bed ground and there were moments when the wind subsided here under the wall of the bluff. A lighted lantern within made the canvas wagon cover glow. The inviting tang of wood smoke and the comfortable sound of the horses munching their feed announced the ending of another day. She set to work dragging dead branches of juniper down from the summit of the bluff. She piled a heap on each side of the bed ground and kindled them, sentries of leaping flame to guard the sheep from prowling animals during the night.

The glowing canvas wagon cover flared wide beyond the wheels. The ends were enclosed with wood, and when she opened the door in the rear a gush of warm air flavored with frying meat enveloped her. The neighbor's small boy who had driven the team all day looked up from the cook stove. His face was freckled, his hands were chapped, his brown eyes were solemn with pride. He said:

"I bet none of the other herders brought their flocks thru as well as we did. I bet you." And for a moment then her face was radiant.

"There isn't one of them has a better camp tender than you," she told him.

The dull reaction which came with warmth and rest began to assail her while she was taking off her heavy coat, and the fear which had been riding her during the last few days returned. Two hours later, the little boy was asleep in his bunk upon the overhang above the wheels and she was sitting on her bed, still trying to fight off the dread, when the drumming of a tractor's motors came thru the noises of the wind. She rose and went to the door and flung it open. The rays of the spotlight were in her eyes and the man who was coming toward her was only a dark form among clouds of snow that rode the wind. She heard the voice of the cat skinner from the darkness behind him:

"That the girl you're looking for?" And she heard the man laugh as he called back, "I could look further and find worse."

The spotlight was bathing her slim form. The driving wind whipped the heavy overalls tight to her limbs. It revealed the splendor of her young breasts, the defiance in her wide gray eyes beneath the dark crown of stirring hair. She waited until he halted at the doorway before she spoke.

"If you're going to take the flock you'll have to wait till morning. The bank can't turn me out tonight."

"The flock?" His voice was puzzled and, as he shook his head, she saw the overseas cap for the first time, the O. D. overcoat. "Nobody's looking for your sheep, leastways not me. I'm hunting for Barbara Curry." Her hands flew to her breasts and she stood there silent for the suddenness of the relief had left her dazed, and when she found her voice at last she asked:

"You're not from the bank?"

"Not from the bank. And if you don't let me freeze out here, I've got good news."

That final declaration was so completely opposite what she had been expecting that it left no room in her mind for what she was doing or what she said. She was sitting on the edge of her bunk beside him a few moments later without memory of having asked him to come in. She heard him say,

"I didn't know you had a brother." She shook off her bewilderment then.

"A neighbor lent him last fall to help me out. I'd never have gotten thru without him," and added bitterly, "We could have made it if the bank had waited till shearing time. I thought you'd come to take possession——"

She glanced at him, and afterward she remembered that moment, the first time she saw his smile. He had laid aside his overcoat. She saw the two rows of service ribbons, the four little stars on one of them, and she was conscious of the pallor in his face, the set look which comes to one who has endured a heavy load.

"You see," she went on, "my father died last fall and I had to take over, but I'd been away four years. He had been dead set on getting me thru college and he'd spent more money than he could spare on it. Things were in bad shape, but I could have paid in full if they'd have given me just two months' leeway until shearing time."

"Your father came from Arizona?" he asked. She nodded.

"Ever say anything about his folks?"

"All I know is that his mother brought him up and he came to Utah after she died. I don't think I ever heard him say a word about my grandfather. They used to live in a little town near the border, called Delight. Why do you ask?"

"I want to be dead sure that you're the girl I'm looking for." It was the frank admiration in his eyes which made her catch the unintended meaning she could give that answer. Then she forgot the worry which had been riding her, and the perplexity concerning his errand here. She laughed for the first time in weeks.

"And am I?"

"You are." There was something in the way he said it that reminded her how much of life she had been missing during these last six months. She felt the color rising to her cheeks. I wouldn't mind, she caught herself thinking, if he really meant it as it sounded.

"I come from Delight myself," he went on. "I'm going back there now—on furlough. They shipped me from New Guinea where I'd stopped a couple of Jap slugs and I had malaria. While I was in the hospital in California I got a letter from my uncle, he's president of a bank in the county seat, asking me to look you up here on my way home. So I spent the day in town, checking on you, and before I shove off tomorrow I'm to arrange with the local bank for an account in your name."

"But who did that?" she cried.

"You'll meet him later on," he told her, "and that's all I'm allowed to let you know, excepting that he's spent quite a bit of money looking you up, and he's going to send for you to talk things over with him in Delight."

She hadn't grasped the fullness of his tidings yet and she didn't dare to let herself believe the incredible hopes which had begun to possess her. The dull realities with which she had been contending during the last six months confronted her again. It might be two or three days before the blizzard was over and then the man with the foreclosure papers would arrive.

She said, "I've got to stick here until I get things cleared up. I don't know how long it's going to take, but I'll have to hunt a job of some sort in order to do it."

"If it's debts that are bothering you, forget it." He was smiling again, and, thinking back as she often did in days to come, she always had the picture of him announcing the sum which he was to leave for her to draw upon. The joy which he was bringing her had extinguished the traces of suffering and the color had returned to his young face. She saw him, lean and capable, and she was sure that neither danger nor hardship could tarnish that smile of his.

The figure which he named left her gasping, but when she stood in the doorway a few minutes later, listening to the roaring of the tractor's motors while the light swung and vanished, taking him away into the night, she wondered if she wouldn't be willing to trade her good fortune for the chance to see him again.

He was still in her thoughts on the hot June noontide when she got off the train at Tuscorora to board the stage for Delight, and if she had been as alert as an FBI agent she wouldn't have detected the faintest hint of the danger which was brewing on that hot depot platform.

She had come around the long way to southern Arizona by railroad thru San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Yuma; and ever since she had awakened that morning she had been traveling across wide flats which were interrupted by abrupt little mountain ranges. The level expanses were strewn with fragments of lava, and they were dotted with naked ocatilla shrubs and savage cholla cacti. Forests of giant cactus stretched away on the sloping uplands, and the steep flanks of the mountains were bare rock. Then the train had coasted down from the summit of a low pass to the floor of a valley where there wasn't a stone to relieve the even monotony.

The little town of Tuscorora lay in its midst, a scattering of sun-smitten wooden buildings surrounding a low brick roundhouse and a brief web of railroad yards. The queue of passengers who were boarding the stage for Delight and points beyond stretched into the waiting room. There was an expensive black sedan beside the platform. There were three men in the sedan. When Barbara took her place in the queue, there wasn't a soul here who was meditating on violence. Before she had emerged from the waiting room, the plot into which she was about to involve herself—as unwittingly as a fly which swerves aside into a spider's web—was in the making.

She was half way across the platform when she heard a transplanted Iowa farmer ahead of her telling his wife:

"There's Bill Pope, the man who killed Brazos and drove the Wild Bunch out of the country back in the 90s." The pride of showmanship was in his voice. The lean figure at which he was pointing was the first one Barbara had found in complete harmony with the naked mountains and the long flats. She let her eyes linger on the man whose exploits of former days had been emblazoned in newspaper headlines ever since he had reappeared—from no one knew where—to reëstablish himself in a huge adobe house at the scene where they had taken place, and become a sort of latter day Buffalo Bill.

He was sitting at the open window of the expensive black sedan straight backed as if he were in the saddle. His lean form was unadorned by the exaggerated trappings of the cinema. His unpretentious high crowned hat was of the sort you will still find in any southwestern sheriff's office. There was no sign of lethal hardware on his person, but his leathery cheeks and long, drooping white mustache conformed with the stories which she had read about him.

He looked out of place in that big, modern car. It should have been a horse that he was riding, not a plush, upholstered seat. The driver, of whom Barbara had a glimpse, was fashioned along the lines of a later model. He was slim of figure. His sleek hair and the look of sophistication in his hard face didn't fit with the khakis and the wide rimmed hat which he was wearing.

The queue was edging forward toward the stage and Barbara turned her eyes ahead, after she had discovered the third occupant of the sedan. The right halves of both seats had been removed and a door had been installed in its rear to admit a wheel chair on which this one was lying. A moment after Barbara looked away he plucked Pope by the sleeve. His upturned face was as smooth as an egg, his small pale eyes were dancing, and his voice was shrill with excitement altho he was barely speaking above his breath. He said,

"The dark haired woman in blue slacks: she's handing her ticket to the stage driver now."

The woman whom he had described had given her ticket and she was disappearing in the driver's vestibule before he finished speaking. Her eyes were black, her dark hair had been given a permanent wave and beauty parlors had conserved her good looks and slender figure, but no one would mistake her for under 30 at the least. Her only betrayal of the fact that she had seen the man in the wheel chair was her haste in entering the stage and her choice of a seat on the opposite side from the big sedan.

Pope had gotten a bare glimpse of her back before she vanished, and he managed to pick out her blue slacks thru the stage window. He followed them as she walked up the aisle. He murmured:

"Fifth seat from the rear, right hand side. I'll see you when I get home, Vilas." And he left the sedan hurriedly. He was barely able to make the stage before it pulled out. He was standing in the vestibule with his back toward the interior, groping in his pocket for change to pay his fare, while the driver backed the long vehicle in a wide half circle. This brought the seat which Pope had described close to the sedan's rear window. The woman who had occupied it had seen what was coming in time to slip into another across the aisle and closer to the front. And Barbara had taken the place which she had vacated before Pope had finished paying his fare.

There was no real resemblance between these two, for Barbara's dark locks had been given a more disordered wave by nature; her eyes were gray, and her face lacked the hardness of the older woman's. But she too was wearing dark blue slacks, and when Pope passed up the aisle he saw her face for the first time.

"Vilas," he told himself, "sure did pick them young while he was in circulation." He found his way to a rear seat where smoking was allowed, and proceeded to roll a cigaret. If you had seen him then, you would not have dreamed that he had been confronted with the threat of disaster.

Barbara turned her eyes to the window and viewed the streets of Tuscorora. Like a good many western railroad freight division towns, it had no other excuse for its existence. The brief vistas of duty roadways between sunbaked wooden buildings flashed by. There wasn't a living thing in sight among them excepting several hens. She turned her attention to the passengers around her.

As was to have been expected in war time, most of them were middle aged. The stamp of conventional eastern villages and small farms was indelibly impressed upon them, and altho the men had adapted the customary khaki of the border they were as out of keeping with the wide, harsh landscape as the town which lay behind them now. A half dozen thick chested Apaches and a sprinkling of Mexican laborers lent a bit of the western flavor which Barbara had been seeking, and the sight of Bill Pope, bolt upright in a rear seat, smoking a brown paper cigaret, was as a promise of old west color which she hoped to find at her journey's end.

The macadam road was as straight as a tightened wire. It seemed to bisect an enormous circle, bounded by ragged mountains. The sun cracked flat was as level as a ballroom floor, and there was a mirage far in the east where the earth seemed to have turned to undulating waters. In the remote north, where naked high peaks kept changing color, a thunderhead had gathered. Its lower edges were turning black. A pair of burly Apaches two seats ahead of Barbara were regarding it intently. She couldn't hear what they were saying and, if she could, she wouldn't have understood for they were talking in their own guttural tongue. So she had no hint of what the distant presence of that cloud portended for her and for the others, while the stage sped on toward the mountains. And she paid no attention to the dips which the road took at intervals toward the middle of the afternoon as the valley floor began to rise imperceptibly to its northern edge. These crossed shallow depressions which carried terrific runoffs of storm waters from the naked mountains, once every two or three years.

Somewhere in the north, Delight awaited her. She had learned that much from road maps, but nothing more. Of the benefactor whom she was to meet after her arrival, she knew as little as on that evening nearly three months ago when she had been stunned with the news that the bank which had begun foreclosure proceedings was going to honor her checks to an amount in four figures.

Since that evening of the blizzard there hadn't been a day when she wasn't speculating on the mystery of his identity picturing him as she would find him when he confronted her in Delight. As time went on, the pictures had varied; but there was always one element of resemblance: he came to her out of the past—the old days when the west was young, when men like Bill Pope rode and fought along these open reaches beside the border.

So during the long ride while she was gazing thru the window, watching the encircling mountains change color as the stage sped on northward, her heart was beating faster with the knowledge that she was about to solve the mystery of her benefactor. And adding to the exhilaration was the knowledge that she had managed to bring the sheep thru. The wool clip had paid her fathers' debts and she had accomplished what she had set out to do by her own efforts.

One regret remained, and it was present now as it had always been since that night when he had come so unexpectedly into her life—she wasn't going to see the messenger who had brought the news to her. Harvey Furlong was his name; she had gotten that much from the bank where he had left the draft on deposit. But that was all she had—that, and the memory of him. She wondered where he was now. Probably back overseas. And whether he ever thought of her. Day dreaming of him had become a habit with her; she was indulging herself in it again—as she had every day and every night since she had watched the spotlight on the tractor swing and vanish, bearing him away into the storm.

And so, when the other passengers saw the danger which was sweeping toward them, she remained oblivious. The rest of them were starting toward the front door, the sound of their shuffling feet and the clamor of their voices snapped her back to knowledge of what was going on. Then she heard a sullen roar. She saw a coffee colored wall of water marching down the depression which the stage was crossing.

Society Waits Big St. Luke's Fashion Show

By Thalia

The opening of the opera on Monday evening was heralded as a blazing post-war sartorial spectacle, with tails and white ties flying and the ladies scintillating in dazzling jewels, furs, and gowns. But no amount of wishful thinking can overcome nature, and even tho the first week in October may see the trees decked out in their most brilliant adornments, the ladies wait until the new fall models arrive before they plan their dazzlings. Those models are traditionally shown for the first time at the St. Luke's fashion show which takes place on Wednesday at the Medinah temple at Ohio st. and Wabash av.—and if you haven't bought your tickets yet you had better hurry to 942 N. Michigan av. and get them or you'll miss the biggest and best charity fashion show of the year.

The predominant color at the opera among the ladies as well as the gentlemen was good, safe black, and almost all of the best dressed women wore it. There were a greater number of tails and white ties than in the war years, but no notable mass movement toward the return of that social armor. One predominantly popular fragrance was emanated by both the gentlemen and the ladies—the aroma of moth balls. [It was the city's first cold night.]

Handsome fur coats, and jackets, and capes, even those of the spectacular new furs like the glamorous blond mink, as well as of the elder ermines caught the eye at a distance but the nose as they passed by. Head dresses, so prominent last year when fantasies of every sort from orchids to cabbage roses coyed lofty coiffures, were absent or subdued. There was only one authentic diamond tiara noted in the audience.

In the days when the opera was the bouquet of the social season every fashionable hairdresser had the crucial day of the opera's opening engaged months ahead. Every exclusive dress shop and every chic dressmaker had been busy for weeks preparing for the great night. Furriers were proud of their fabulous creations which appeared there for the first time. And a fashionable jeweler whose artistic efforts were not on display might just as well close in despair. Opening night at the opera set the season's fashions, even in social contacts, for no one who expected to be a part of the city's social life ever was absent from it.

The lists of boxholders and their guests were printed after every performance, except the "popular" Saturday. Monday was the chicest eveing, but everybody couldn't make the diamond horseshoe on those November and December Mondays.

Those lists were not only practically pages out of the social register, but sometimes appearing in the right box often enough opened its august pages to a newcomer. No woman, except out of necessity, ever left her seat during the first entre act because that was the time when the lists were compiled and also the correct time for the gentlemen to pay their formal respects. There was a social pattern to opera going as conventional as the cut of the gentlemen's tail coats. The "show" at the opera was only half on the stage.

And each year the city and opera fathers made up tremendous deficits! Now, I understand, the opera is happily as popular as the movies. On Monday evening there wasn't a vacant crevice in the vast Civic Opera house and many future performances have already been sold out. Last year for the first time since Chicago has had opera there was no financial deficit. And this year's prospects seem even more financially bright.

The first night of the symphony last week had a true post-war brilliance, for practically every one in the boxes and many on the main floor wore their best evening outfits. It was the opening of the symphony's 55th season and auspicious-

Experts Put Finishing Touches on Tribune's '45 Fashion Show

By Rita Fitzpatrick

Last minute bustle and excitement is rife behind the scenes of the American Fashions show.

Fashion experts are combing exclusive shops for that final perfect hat or the exact fur piece to complete an outfit. Others are pouring over glittering jewel collections to select the choicest pieces for the glamorous American Fashions models to wear. In the nation's finest dressmaking and tailoring establishments, a tuck here and a tuck there add the finishing touches to a beautiful costume.

At W-G-N studios, where four performances of the show will be given on the matinees and evenings of Oct. 25 and 26, preparations are being made for the staging of the production. Scripts are being completed by expert writers so that each ensemble in the show will be described in graphic detail.

The production will be in the hands of Mary Afflick, who has been with W-G-N for the last 15 years and who produced last year's highly successful show. Lee Bennett, radio actor and former singer with Jan Garber's band, will be the announcer.

Lovely Virginia Clark, who played the role of "Helen Trent" for 10 years on the radio and who is now director-in-chief of the popular Charm School program on W-G-N, will be the commentator for the main American Fashions collection. The teen-age ensembles, which have a separate showing this year, will be described by Beryl Vaughn who plays a leading role in the "Citizens of Tomorrow" radio series.

The stage of W-G-N's spacious studio theater will be hung with silver and gray velvet and banked with palms. A wide, thickly carpeted runway will pierce the center of the studio from the stage to the back, allowing every person in the theater to have a clear view of each costume modeled by the country's loveliest mannequins.

Six historical costumes, depicting the change in style every 100 years from 1545 to a futuristic 2045, will be shown against backgrounds harmonious to their periods. These settings are being planned by Charles P. Kilgore of The Tribune advertising art staff and the stage will be in charge of E. H. Johnson, head of the Tribune color studio. The prologue to the show will be read by John Barclay, commentator and narrator on the Chicago Theater of the Air, and the music will be arranged and directed by Irving Kaplan, director for the Chicago theater movie house.

Fifty-two costumes in all are to be shown, all designs selected from among thousands entered in the American Fashions contest by amateur and professional stylists from 45 states. Each of the 52 ensembles won a $50 prize and are eligible for the grand prizes of $2,000, $1,000, and two $500 awards. One of the $500 prizes will be given for a teen age frock.

As in the former five shows conducted by the American Fashions group, the public will select the grand prize winners. Audiences at each showing will vote on their favorite ensembles and a total will be taken at the final showing.

For the two Sundays following the show, the American Fashions collection will be shown in color photographs in the rotogravure sections of THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE, so that Chicagoans, who were unable to get tickets after the sell-out more than a week ago, will be able to see the ensembles in all their colors.

Miss Diana Hill

Mrs. Bartholomay, Miss Hill, and Mrs. Cherry, are three of the young women who will be modeling the latest and most beautiful in fashions at the annual St. Luke's Fashion show Wednesday afternoon at the Medinah Temple, 610 N. Wabash av. The show is the largest amateur one in the city and contributes a substantial sum to St. Luke's hospital every year. Tickets to the gala event are on sale at 942 N. Michigan av., and will be available at the door of the temple Wednesday.

Mrs. Arthur W., Chicago—To rejuvenate a pair of black suede shoes, I applied an equal mixture of olive oil and black ink. Results were good. This treatment removed that slightly "rusty" look the shoes had acquired.

Mrs. Edmond H., LaFayette, Ind.—When washing "washable" wallpaper I have learned it is wise to use rich soapsuds in cool water, so flowers or pattern leaves won't wilt and fade. And to prevent rings, since I can't dunk a wall in a tub for rinsing, I wet first an area larger than the area to be washed, always overlapping areas.

Freda S., Oskaloosa, Ia.—I wash the ball fringe on my curtains with the curtains. Then, before hanging on line, I dip the balls in clear water until they are filled with water, and hang them out without squeezing out the water. They'll dry round as a berry and fluffy as new.

Dora D., Chicago—When washing chamois, I use lukewarm water, and add a little glycerine to last rinse water. In this way it stays soft, especially if I work it between my fingers before it is quite dry.

Drama League to Hear N. Y Critic Oct. 22

By Irene Steyskal

If there is a pronounced flutter of expectancy in the Chicago Drama league's official circle, the explanation is to be found in the announcement for the opening meeting. Confessing to a splurge for the anniversary occasion, the program chairman will bring here for the first meeting of the 30th season the witty and handsome New York critic, John Mason Brown, recently referred to by Helen Hokinson in one of her gay-spirited clubwomen cartoons as "our mental cocktail."

Anticipating a rush for reservations, Mrs. Alvan W. Jenkisson has issued a presidential decree that the party, because of the space limitations of the Casino, where it is to be held Monday afternoon, Oct. 22, will be a membership gathering exclusively—no guest tickets available.

Since his last lecture appearance before the Chicago league, Brown has attained new stature in the role of navy lieutenant. Entering service shortly after Pearl Harbor he was commissioned and assigned to Vice Adm. Alan G. Kirk's staff, taking part in both the Sicilian and Normandy invasions. His running accounts broadcasts to the men below deck on Kirk's flagship of what was happening on the Sicilian beachheads were collected under the title "To All Hands," and there were critics who rated the book the most distinguished work published in 1943.

Now retired from active duty, Brown is back at dramatic criticism on Broadway, writing a weekly column for the Saturday Review of Literature and broadcasting on the "Of Men and Books" radio program.

His talk for the Drama league will have for the title, "Grease Paint and Printers' Ink."

Mrs. George B. Wendt is program chairman of the league this season. Her plans for meetings later this winter include a lecture by Kenneth Horan, Chicago novelist and the league's vice president, on Nov. 13 at the Arts club, and a Christmas performance by the Martin and Olga Stevens marionette theater of "The Nativity" on Dec. 17 in Curtiss hall.

The drama discussion group, a small circle of members engaged in a serious study of the theater, is headed by Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, who has set Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 30, for the opening session in the Cordon. That day the group will hear a talk by William Harrigan of the "Dear Ruth" company. Play reviews are in Mrs. Carl S. Winters' charge this year. Mrs. Winters plans to present Rozetta Segal Alk on the morning of Oct. 31 in the Arts club in a review of "A Bell for Adano," and Vera Bautz Ward on Nov. 20, also at the Arts club, in a program on "The Hasty Heart."

Already this season the league has given theater parties for "Carmen Jones" and "Anna Lucasta," and has plans under consideration for holding others for both productions. Parties for "The Tempest" are set for the evening performance Tuesday and the Wednesday matinee, and leaguers will have more Shakespeare on the afternoon of Nov. 14 and the evening of Nov. 15, attending "A Winter's Tale" theater parties.

Mrs. Jenkisson and her board have plans shaping to entertain the "Winter's Tale" cast at a noon breakfast in the Crystal ballroom of the Blackstone on Tuesday, Nov. 6. Mrs. Arthur M. Hauser Jr., is play attendance chairman. With 850 names now on its roster, the league has been obliged to close its membership. For the first time it has a waiting list.

Opera permeating the musical air of Chicago as the season moves into its second week, the Musical Arts club, catching the spirit, opens next Sunday in the Cordon with a vocal flourish. Silvio Insana, who is a member of the group, has been busy for several months coaching singers of the club and a guest or

Fresh from the Hills . . . . By Marge of Sunrise Mountain Farm . . . . Oak Ridge Ozarkians

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

WITH all the big news about the atomic bomb filling the air and everybody's mind, we Ozarkians are just a little smug. One of our families, believe it or not, has had a hand in that great project there at Oak Ridge. The family is not unknown to Chicago, for they are Mr. and Mrs. Chester Spies, who were formerly located in the Northwestern university settlement on Chicago's northwest side. Undoubtedly they will be remembered by many, for Mrs. Spies had charge of the girls' work department and Mr. Spies had the boys' work. When Mr. Spies went into forestry work in the Sylamore district here in Arkansas, they bought a mountain home near Winslow, where Miss Maud gets out that intrepid Winslow American.

Then Uncle Sam loaned Mr. Spies to the safety department, and they left their home, first for a Louisiana war project, and then on to Oak Ridge. They are still located at Oak Ridge and haven't the faintest notion when Mr. Spies will be released. When they do come back we Ozarkians will never tire of hearing Mrs. Spies tell what it was like to keep house in Oak Ridge.

When Mr. Spies was first sent for he was simply directed to go to Clinton, Tenn. Mrs. Spies put her foot down on staying home alone. There were just the two of them, their children had grown up and married, and why should they be separated. She could find someplace to live, as she had in Louisiana. They got out the car, shined it up, and were having it oiled and greased when a second telegram came for Mr. Spies. He was told to go to Oak Ridge. They bent their heads over a Tennessee map. No Oak Ridge. By putting the two telegrams together they decided Oak Ridge might be close to Clinton, so away they went into the hills of Tennessee.

Suddenly they came upon what was obviously a military project, with workmen coming out of the gates. They asked one of the men if that was Oak Ridge. He gave no answer. They asked another. Still no answer. A third gave a gruff: "See the guards." At the gate Mrs. Spies was barred from entering. Mr. Spies was held while some one phoned to the office where he would be stationed to ask a guide to come for him. For hours and hours Mrs. Spies sat waiting outside the gates. But at that she was not so unfortunate as one woman who had to sit in the car all one cold mountain night waiting for her husband to return from that initial trip inside the gates.

Not a house was available in Oak Ridge at that time. When Mr. Spies returned to his wife at the gates they drove on to Knoxville to find a room for themselves. For months they lived in crowded Knoxville, elbowed by annoyed southerners who resented the vast horde of intruders who had suddenly upset their peaceful way of living. During that time thousands of pre-fabricated houses, architecturally designed along the lines of a modest trailer, were set up in Oak Ridge on streets hastily grooved out of the mountain sides among the trees planted years ago by mother nature. Mr. Spies learned of one house that he could get. He asked Mrs. Spies to go out to see it.

"No, indeed," she said. "If it has a roof, we'll take it!"

Now she wouldn't be so certain of that! For over a year she has lived in that bird-sized house, with its tiny front room, wee galley for cooking, and miniature bedroom. Doors of a closet and the galley can be opened up to form partitions, so that gives an idea of the tiny size. A community bathroom and wash-house are still being shared with a half dozen other families. Streets now paved were then ankle deep in mud or dust, according to the state of the weather. But there Mrs. Spies, gracious, poised, and lovely, set up housekeeping.

The town grew so fast it was always outgrowing facilities, like a small girl outgrowing her pinafores. Stores that were adequate one day were suddenly far too small for the crowds of customers. Then women learned a super-market was opening up. Everybody rushed to that. When Mrs. Spies arrived she found crowds of women milling before the doors, with a 15 year old boy barring the way. After the building had filled with customers, 10 women were allowed to go inside to do their shopping when 10 other customers had been counted out. Thruout those first days Mrs. Spies stood in block long lines waiting to get in. After a while such markets sprang up here and there, for Uncle Sam had wisely planned that this great project should be broken up into communities, similar to Chicago's shopping districts, with stores, beauty shops, movies, and other familiar shops for each community.

Mr. Spies had a half dozen badges, but Mrs. Spies was given just one. It had the word "resident" upon it. If they went outside the gates, they must show their badges upon their return, and the car was searched for liquor, firearms, and cameras. Inside the gates they could move freely about the town, and life went on just about as in any other industrial city. At night crowds of workers would mill about Jackson square, going to the movies, eating ice cream in the drug stores, and just standing around talking.

Mr. Spies was too tired to do any gadding, and Mrs. Spies found ways of occupying her time so thoroly that she was glad, too, to call it a day when the Tennessee sun had gone down. She took the Gray Lady course and spent many hours at the great hospital, where some of the finest doctors and nurses of the nation were stationed. When she finished her course there were not enough diplomas to go around. That incident brought to light one of the interesting facts about this great project.

To safeguard the secret of Oak Ridge and its vastness, no figures were ever allowed to be sent out. That is, no one could order a definite number of anything, from toothpaste to hospital bandages, for that might give the enemy some inkling of the great scale of activity. When the Gray Ladies were graduated the secretary of the organization was not able to write for a definite number of diplomas, so Mrs. Spies did not receive hers until after the secret of Oak Ridge was out.

Nobody knew what was being made, nobody knew how long they would be there, nobody could understand why such vast amounts of materials came in and nothing went out. And they were all honor bound not to ask questions. They could only stare in awe at the phenomenal growth of the project. Work was carried on in three shifts, day and night, with never a letup. Almost overnight streets and whole communities showed up where only the mountain sides had loomed before. The people who moved into those houses were a complete cross-section of America.

The Spies family lived in a community largely given over to construction workers. On one side of them lived a second generation Bohemian family with a college graduate son who was a pilot. Nearby lived a young couple with the wife trying desperately to keep up appearances when her husband got hold of some of that contraband liquor. Across the street was a little family with two small boys. As in any other town the father played ball with them and took them on hikes on off-duty hours.

Many talented people were included among the workers in the project and symphony concerts were not unusual. A string orchestra and a couple of bands also sprang into being. Little theater groups got together and before long shows were being given, with both actors and audiences thoroly enjoying the performances. A newspaper was published, but copies of it must not be sent outside. Tennis tournaments were held and boxing matches were well attended. Visitors could be admitted from outside the gates only by permit. Every one lived from day to day, thinking neither ahead nor behind. Children went to school and neighbors complained of barking dogs that wakened sleeping husbands.

A white church building with a spire, called The Chapel on the Hill, was used in turn by all denominations, beginning with the Catholics early Sunday morning and continuing until late evening. Its time was also parceled out by turns thruout the week. Arriving early for Episcopal service, the Spies once were guests at a Methodist wedding, and another time at a Presbyterian christening. Mrs. Spies could prepare for their Sunday outings by having her hair done at a good beauty parlor, and she could buy a new dress at one of the smart specialty shops, several of which had been sent out as branches of a Knoxville store.

When the atomic bomb secret was spilled to the world, Mrs. Spies' radio was out of order. She heard a little newsboy crying an extra of the Oak Ridge paper on the street. She went to the door of her tiny house and asked:

"What is it, sonny?"

"Why, it's all about us here in Oak Ridge," he said.

It was the first hint of the truth Mrs. Spies had had. She read the story of the atomic bomb with the same throat-choking thrill with which you and I greeted the news. Then from the moment that first bomb was dropped until Japan capitulated, the tension at Oak Ridge was so great that both Mr. and Mrs. Spies were, as she said, completely ironed out. But now all is well. With genuine interest, they can watch the tremendous amount of work still going on. Their town is still growing. Streets are paved, gardens are growing, red, white, and blue morning glories are climbing over their little trailer house. Zinnias and marigolds are blooming beside the door. Across the street the tulip trees are turning golden.

"Haven't we lived a rich life, honey?" asks Mr. Spies.

"Yes, dear, we have! And we're still living it," replies Mrs. Spies.

Some day, when Mr. Spies' work at Oak Ridge is done, they will come back to live among us, and how we shall enjoy them!

Young Artists to Give Recital for Clubwomen

The 1945 winners and runners-up in the annual scholarship contest of the Chicago Woman's Musical club will be presented by the club in recital at 8:15 o'clock Wednesday night, Oct. 24, in Kimball hall. Neither of the young contest winners—Miss Joan Bishop, mezzo-soprano, and Miss Eloise Matthies, pianist—are strangers to the stage since both are former quiz kids and also have appeared previously in public musical programs.

Eighteen year old Miss Bishop, whose career was launched as pianist at the age of 11 when she played with the Chicago Symphony orchestra under the baton of Frederick Stock, sang the role of Siebel in a production of "Faust" last March at the Eighth Street theater. A pupil of Shirley Gandell, she now is a member of the Chicago Opera company chorus.

Miss Matthies, a student of Howard Wells, has been guest pianist for the Chicago Sunday Evening club on two occasions, and was winner of a music contest sponsored in 1942 by the Beverly Y. M. C. A.

Miss Eloise Matthies

The runners-up who will share the program are Miss Mary Ellen Kindt, pianist from Kenosha, Wis., who also studied under Wells, and Miss Dorothy Sandre, soprano, a pupil of Mme. Dorothea Derrfuss. Miss Kindt received her early musical training from her mother.

An open house concert and tea at 2 o'clock tomorrow will usher in the new season for the Lake View Musical society. Members may bring guests to the program, which is to be given in the Cordon club by member musicians of the society.

Participating artists will be Margaret Cree Evans, who was first cellist with the Grant Park symphony last summer; Ruby Spencer Lyon, soprano, who has appeared in a number of Broadway productions and who now is soloist of the First Baptist church in Evanston; Kathleen Haight, pianist, and Louise Evans, accompanist. Miss Evans is a member of the Chicago Women's Symphony orchestra and of the W-G-N radio staff.

Mrs. Henry B. Vanzwoll, social chairman, is in charge of the tea, and the program is under the direction of Mrs. Alice Shearer.

The Music Study Club of Chicago will base its study course for the year on Hazel Gertrude Kinscella's book, "History Sings," and the lesson topic for the season's opening meeting at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Woman's City club will be "Atlantic Coast Beginnings." The lesson will be presented by Frieda M. Wille, and will be illustrated with a group of songs by Henriette E. Ronge. Mrs. P. George Prescott heads the organization this year.

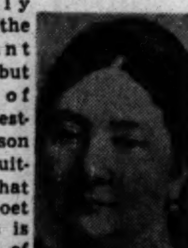
When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Oct. 23, 1897.

Dear Julia: We have been having lovely weather this week, not the "melancholy days that the poet Bryant speaks of, but days full of warmth suggesting the "season of mellow fruitfulness" that some other poet calls it. This is the best time of the year in Illinois, I think. It is as if Mother Nature couldn't bear to have us feel her daughter October's charms were not equal to those of May and so had to put a dash of rouge on her cheek to make us believe her still young.



Mrs. Edwin L. Gillette

I have been making calls this afternoon along Michigan av. and have enjoyed it very much. These were visits I really wanted to make, not the kind that constitute social drudgery. I began at Congress st. and, just next to the Auditorium annex, rang the bell at No. 228, the home of the George C. Walkers, but found Mrs. Walker wasn't in. Then I called at 229, the home of Mrs. Stiles Burton and Mrs. Ira Holmes [grandmother and mother respectively of young Burton Holmes]. They told me that Burton will give his fine lectures again this season and I was delighted with the news. Mr. Stoddard, who has entertained us for years, is growing old and this young Chicagoan will soon be taking his place in our affections. I do love illustrated lectures on foreign countries.

My next call was on Mrs. William Blair, whom you remember from Maplewood seminary days. I found her as lovely as ever. She asked for you and sent her love. We laughed over school days in Pittsfield, and thought it interesting that we should have bought crinoline from Marshall Field when he was a young clerk in Deacon Davis' store there. And now he is one of the richest men in America. His wife died more than a year ago and we hear rumors that he is to marry one or another of our rich widows. His great house at 1905 Prairie av. is a lonely one now, as his daughter Ethel lives in England and his son Marshall travels in Europe with his family most of the time.

I had intended to call on both Mrs. J. H. Dunham and Mrs. T. B. Blackstone, but I found I had spent too much time at Mrs. Blair's and I hurried on to Mrs. Edwin L. Gillette's, 306 Michigan av., for Martha Jr. had asked me to inquire of her about a French teacher. Mrs. Gillette, whom you recall as Josephine Perley at Maplewood seminary, is an authority on the subject, as she founded the Club Francais de Chicago in 1879 and speaks the language fluently.

Mrs. Gillette's house is handsome, always immaculately kept, the exterior always wearing a coat of white paint, the interior in beautiful order. I noticed especially today in her parlor the four Healy portraits of the family. They are extremely valuable, now that G. P. A. Healy is gone. Mrs. Gillette's own three-quarters length portrait is one of the finest of these and dominates the room, hanging as it does above the white marble mantel. As I sat waiting for her to come down I took up a book from the center table called "Ornaments of Memory." I smiled as I noticed that it is exactly like one Will and I have, given us as a wedding present. It's a bit old fashioned now, but I still keep mine on the parlor table because it is so handsomely bound I can't bear to banish it, as Martha Jr. wants me to do. Martha tells me I mustn't be a "back number" and I suppose Delphine [Josie Gillette's daughter] tells her mother the same thing.

The Gillette house has made social history. The Sturges family, who owned it before they bought it, entertained Sheridan and other officers during the Civil war, and Mrs. Gillette is a famous hostess.

And now I must close. Yours lovingly,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND

FOOT NOTES

Mrs. William Shippen Jenks, 10 E. Schiller st., is a daughter of Mrs. Edwin L. Gillette, who in 1897 lived at 306 Michigan av. [old number]. The house was razed in 1911 and a low "taxpayer" building stands on its site. . . . "Auditorium annex" was the old name for the Congress hotel.

An Old Church Celebrates

The South Congregational church, Drexel blvd. at 40th st., is observing its 75th anniversary Oct. 14 to Oct. 21. Many prominent south siders have been connected with this fine church, outstanding among them William E. Hale, William A. Bond, Robert E. Jenkins, and Mrs. Agnes M. Foss. Mrs. Foss is living at an advanced age in the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Wilson, 4815 Woodlawn av.

Young folks is so much bolder 'n' they was
When I was a girl.
Emma Stowell an' Mamie Horton
Was showin' me their new photos
Took by Masters' Gallery.
The two girls was pitchered
With their backs to the camera
So's everybody could see
They could set on their hair.
That wouldn't of been considered modest
In my day.
But I spose I got to remember
It's the year 1885
An' the world is changin'.

War Time Life of Niseis to Be Theme of Meet

The story of Japanese Americans during World War II. as depicted in the film, "A Challenge to Democracy," will be viewed by Chicago section of the National Council of Jewish Women at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday in the club rooms.

Augmenting the color movie will be talks by Tats Kushida, a graduate of the University of California who spent two years in a relocation camp in Arizona, and Hugh B. Murphy. Both speakers now are employed by the war relocation authority of the United States department of the interior.

Produced by the office of war information, the motion picture has been released by the WRA, the federal agency responsible for dealing with resettlement problems of Americans of Japanese descent. As a war measure, these persons were evacuated from their west coast homes in 1942 and relocated in all parts of the country.

The film portrays many phases of life in relocation centers, the contribution of resettlers to the country's war effort, and news flashes of Nisei service men in European war theaters.

Mrs. Samuel Baker, chairman of the council's national affairs group, will assist Mrs. Charles Levin in conducting the meeting.

At 7:30 o'clock on Wednesday night, members of the council's Career Group will gather with their friends in the club rooms to hear a talk by Judge Jacob Braude of the Boys' and Women's courts. Miss Faye Freedman and Miss Esther Guggenheim arranged the program, which is to be followed by a tea and social hour.

Delegates to the council's recent North Central regional conference in St. Paul, Minn., went on record as indorsing the national organization's position favoring unrestricted immigration of homeless Jews into Palestine.

Bird Note

Young birds which emerge blind, naked, and helpless are the product of relatively small eggs, while young hatched from relatively large eggs are down-clad and active from birth.

two in excerpts from "Aida," "La Boheme," and "Martha," and, in full costume, the little company will offer its arias, duets, and ensembles in a gala program.

Taking part will be Naomi Cook, dramatic soprano; La Vonaline Sackett Hansen, coloratura; Constance Merrill Hurd, soprano; Jay Swann, bass baritone, and William Wolski, tenor, with Edith Aamodt as accompanist. The idea for the afternoon of opera originated with the program chairman, Miss Ada Honderick, who is managing the program. The time is set for 4 o'clock.

The club will have as guests for the festive occasion Mrs. Charles S. Clark, president of the Conference of Club Presidents and Program Chairmen, and Paul Schulze, president of the Municipal Art league, representing the two organizations with which affiliation is maintained. Mrs. Theodore W. Passailaigue, who has newly assumed office, will preside.

Week's Plans of Clubwomen in Chicagoland

That vigilant eye which citizens are admonished to keep alert in the interest of good government has been on long-time service in the Woman's City club, and evidence of its effectiveness locally in one special field will be given by Mrs. Moses L. Purvin at an evening meeting Wednesday.

Mrs. Moses L. Purvin [Ward Photo]

For 35 years Mrs. Purvin has served as chairman of the club's city recreation facilities committee. She will give an illustrated talk at 7:30 o'clock on the committee's civic effort, her program being the first of an indoctrination series. These evening programs are designed to set the background for present work by reviewing the history of the various committees.

V. K. Brown, director of the recreation division of the park district, will be a guest of the club Wednesday night. Mrs. Purvin will show slides of Chicago's early shore line and the present beaches, of developments in the park system, and, to enliven the program, will include pictures of bathing beauties of the '90s.

Following a morning board meeting and special luncheon for the managers, a current book review committee program and tea will be held in the afternoon, when Mrs. Titus G. Le Clair, chairman, will present Lois Cromwell Klein in a reading of Tennessee Williams' prize winning play, "The Glass Menagerie." Mrs. Le Clair, a new chairman, will be introduced by the president, Mrs. Harry M. Mulberry.

Dr. Vida A. Latham's public health department will take over the October meeting of the Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs tomorrow in the Bismarck hotel, presenting as guest speakers on a day long program Dr. Bertha Van Hoosen and Dr. Augusta Webster. Dr. Van Hoosen, surgeon at the Womens and Children's hospital, is scheduled for an 11 o'clock talk on "Medical Bug-a-Boos," and when she finishes the meeting will be open for questions. Dr. Webster, medical director of the Chicago Cancer Control clinic, will discuss "Progress in Cancer Control" at 1:30 o'clock. The meeting will be convened by Mrs. Charles J. La Hodney, federation president, at 10 o'clock.

Three musical members of the American Daughters of Sweden will give a program for the club at its meeting Tuesday night in the Fine Arts building. Accompanying herself on the guitar, Mrs. E. W. Carlson will sing; Miss Phyllis Bergquist will play a piano group, and Miss Nancy S. H. Berg, soprano, also will sing. The program was arranged by Miss Mildred Frohman with the assistance of the music chairman, Mrs. Lester Lundquist. A preliminary business session will be conducted by Mrs. Alma Swane, the president, at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Ethel Colson Brazelton will give a current events program for the Chicago Woman's club at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday morning in Curtiss hall, which will include a news commentary, "World Atoms Awhirl," and a review of Lau Shaw's book, "Rickshaw Boy." There will be a regular business meeting at 2 o'clock.

• • •

The Chicago Woman's Aid will meet for a music breakfast at noon Tuesday, when Rose Lyon Du Moulin will be presented in a lecture recital, "Musical Mosaics." Irving Pflaum, newspaper columnist, will address the club at a noonday current events breakfast Friday.

The opening luncheon meeting of the Jewish Big Sisters Tuesday classifies as a musical event, for Fausto Cleva, artistic director of the Chicago Opera company, is to be present as a special guest, and several of the singers will present a program of opera excerpts. Set for 12:30 o'clock, the party will be held in the Standard club, with Mrs. Samuel S. Hollender presiding.

ly a victory opening, for not only was the evening itself a sellout, but the season's subscription sale is the greatest in the symphony's history.

Edward L. Ryerson, president of the orchestral association, and Mrs. Ryerson had a large party which filled not only their own, but the neighboring Charles Swift box, and after the concert entertained their guests at a 55th anniversary party for the orchestra. One of the boxes purchased for the season by an anonymous donor, has been offered for the use of wounded service men in memory of their son, Lt. Morton B. What war was like on opposite sides of the world was told us this week by a well known Frenchman and a charming young Filipino. Pretty little Maria Osmena, daughter of President Osmena of the Phillipines told "The Story of My Father and His People" at the first lecture of the Woman's Athletic club's fall season on Tuesday morning. She made her audience realize that the resistance of the Filipinos to the Japanese was a matter of deep and practical gratitude to the United States, for that resistance was often a costly one for the people of her country to whom the Japanese made the most alluring proposals. But to the masses of the people the Americans had brought what they cherished most in the world, she said—the chance of an education.

The women of the Philippines had found social freedom from the Spanish haremlike life and enjoyed the same educational advantages as the men. They were very active in club work for the betterment of their fellow islanders, she said, and her own exciting enthusiasm in telling of their work testified to the social responsibility and fellow feeling which has been her generation's heritage in the Philippines.

When the Japs came, she said, as many as possibly could joined the guerrillas, whose number was made up more of civilians than of experienced fighters, of teachers and professional men, than it was of political leaders and ordinary simple warriors.

Women, with their children, went to the hills with their fighting men and themselves bore arms. She recited many harrowing tales of the indignities and bitter cruelties to which the Japs subjected natives suspected even of admiring the days of the Americans. But, she said proudly, there never was one instance where an American was turned over to the Japs despite their cajolery or threats.

The Filipinos soon found, she said, that the Japs were infuriated by laughter, so one of the favorite jokes of her fellow countrymen was to declare that the letters of the Japanese news agency Domei stood for "disseminator of most erroneous information," and to laugh every time they saw the word.

How little the French had to swallow in the way of actual food and how much in the way of mental torment was told by L'Abbe Ernest Dimnet, the delightful French Catholic priest who is known to millions of American readers as the author of "The Art of Thinking" and other books. He is making a visit to this country, as he did almost annually before the war.

He spoke before the newly formed American Relief for France and some of its ardent workers at an "at home" given by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ballard at their home in Hubbard Woods in honor of the officers and directors of the society. Many Chicagoans have known the delightful abbe for many years. Your Thalia met him first almost 15 years ago in Paris. He was then 65 years of age, one of the most delightful of raconteurs, a thoro man of the world, if not a wordly man, one of the rarest of combinations.

TO BE MARRIED

Miss Barbara Ricketts, whose engagement to John J. Rothan Jr. of the navy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rothan of Surf st., is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Ricketts of Fox Lake. Mr. Rothan has just returned from more than three years of duty in the Pacific, where he twice was awarded the Presidential unit citation. He temporarily is stationed in New York. [Moffett Photo]

During the German occupation he lived in his little apartment in Paris near Notre Dame, walked a half mile to what he euphemistically called his "shabby" meal, and managed apparently only by sheer will power to emerge alive, for at times, he said, he was so weak with lack of food and the cold that he literally could not dress himself.

One day when he scratched his finger on a piece of iron, his resistance was so low that the infection spread thru his arm and he was four months in the hospital with what the doctor told him was a major epidemic of normally minor infections caused by malnutrition. The aged and babies died overnight from a "touch" of the flu. L'Abbe Dimnet lost 47 pounds, and never in all the years that I knew him was he ever more than a slight [tho always merry] little man.

"I am a Christian and I tried to be one in connection with the Germans, so I shall not tell you many things which I might," he said, but his very reticence emphasized the brutality and stupidity of the Germans.

Following Abbe Dimnet's very moving talk Mrs. Walter Kirk outlined the proposed program of the American Relief for France. Workrooms have been opened on the fourth floor of the McCormick building where all kinds of clothing and supplies will be received, remodeled by volunteers for the use of the people of devastated France, and shipped to France. The newly organized Chicago chapter is one of 300 active units in the United States, according to Louis H. G. Bouscaren, co-chairman with Mrs. Kirk, who also spoke at the meeting.

Some of the British war relief units are now turning their very efficient sewing and knitting efforts to the American Relief for France work.

The vice-chairmen of the Chicago chapter of American Relief for France are Mrs. Ernest Ballard, Mrs. John Collier, Mrs. Charles G. Goodspeed and Mrs. Oscar C. Hayward. Among the more than 30 directors are such well known Chicago women as Mrs. Laird Bell, Mrs. Emmons Blaine, Mrs. Walter Brewster [who heads the Chicago chapter of "France Forever"], Mrs. Arthur Cable, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, Mrs. Thomas Connors, Mrs. Walter Cummings, Mrs. Charles S. Dewey [head of the Washington chapter], Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, Mrs. James H. Winston and Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, now busy as chairman of the St. Luke's Fashion Show.

Certainly you'll never recognize Medinah temple on Wednesday when the St. Luke's show takes it over. Its stage is going to be a lovely, long, white galleried facade of an old southern mansion. Incidentally, the stage set for the show is always white now. Experiment, some of it sad, has proved that only thus can all of the exhibitors be satisfied. This year's set will make lavish use of green in the simulated lawn and the magnolia flanked garden.

Daughters of 1812 Will Open Season Tuesday

Mrs. Franklin M. Miller of 1500 Lake Shore dr. will open her home at 2 o'clock Tuesday for the first fall meeting of the Illinois Society of the United States Daughters of 1812. Miss Florence Deneen [Monfort Photo]

A new project of the club this season will be the collection of books and magazines for the merchant marine library, called "The Public Library of the High Seas."

Chicago chapter of the D. A. R. will hear the state regent, Mrs. J. DeForest Richards, outline the national society's projects for the year at a 2 p. m. meeting Thursday in the South ballroom of the Stevens hotel. Mrs. Richards recently returned from a conference of the society's national board of management. Mrs. Herbert J. Maass is chapter regent.

The Stevens hotel also is to be the setting for a meeting of Chicago chapter's Abigail Adams Evening group of business and professional women at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night. Mrs. Ralph A. Nims will preside and introduce as guest speaker James Supple, Chicago newspaper man, who will review Heindich Hanser's book, "The German Talks Back."

General Henry Dearborn chapter will open the season with a musical program at 2 o'clock Tuesday, Oct. 23, in the Cordon club. Participating artists will be Margaret L. Cashman and Vera Fitzgerald Hazen, and former chapter regents have been invited as special guests.

Aaron Miner chapter will draw up blueprints for the year's calendar at a meeting set for 1:30 p. m. Wednesday in the Central Eleanor club rooms, 17 N. State st.

Hadassah Will Open Conclave Here on Oct. 22

Firm in the determination of reestablishing a Jewish nation in Palestine, Hadassah, women's Zionist organization in America, will gather 1,000 delegates in convention here from Monday, Oct. 22, thru the following Thursday to plan expansion of all of its Palestinian projects. Miss Pearl Franklin, Chicago school teacher who is known thruout the organization for her many years of service as a Hadassah leader, is the convention chairman.

Miss Pearl Franklin

Before the war, Miss Franklin visited several times in Palestine to study needs of the repatriated Jewish groups. A reforestation project in the country is named for her. She is the honorary president of Chicago Hadassah. The active president of the local organization is Mrs. Bertha Rissman, who will head the Chicago delegation. Mrs. Rissman is a member of the national board.

Guest speakers scheduled to address the convention include Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Judge Harry M. Fisher, Sen. Owen Brewster [R., Me.] Dr. Solomon Goldman, Dorothy Thompson, Dr. James G. Heller, Nachum Goldmann, Mrs. Samuel J. Rosensohn, and Ira Hirschmann.

Dr. Goldman, who formerly was president of the Zionist Organization of America, and Judge Fisher, both of Chicago, will speak at the opening session. Mr. Hirschmann and Mrs. Rosensohn, who head a campaign committee to raise $4,000,000 for an under-graduate medical school in Palestine, will be the speakers on the following night. The school is to be built by Hadassah and the Friends of the Hebrew university. Sen. Brewster, Miss Thompson, and Dr. Wise are scheduled for the Wednesday night session. Dr. Wise is co-chairman of the American Zionist Emergency council.

Dr. Heller, who is chairman of the United States Palestine Appeal, will speak on the closing night, and at that session Mr. Goldmann, representative of the Jewish Agency for Palestine in this country, will sum up the Zionist position.

The forthcoming will be the 31st convention of Hadassah. Every state will be represented at the meeting. The organization has 700 chapters.

Serving on Miss Franklin's convention committee are Mrs. James Olshan, Mrs. S. H. Soboroff, Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Evelyn Hattis Fox, Mrs. Ruth Diamondstone, Mrs. Harry Berkman, Mrs. A. A. Weinberg, Mrs. Benjamin Lavin, Mrs. Mamie Yuckman, Mrs. Carl M. Halperin, Mrs. Robert Levy, Mrs. Jack Lederer, Mrs. Reuben Kaufman, Mrs. Edwin B. Bernsen, Mrs. Jacob S. Pohn, and Mrs. Eli Baron.

Palestinian projects which the organization expects to expand are its medical centers, public health and child welfare programs, land reclamation, and the youth rescue program known as Youth Aliyah.

The work of rehabilitating the refugee Jew will have the attention of the Chicago women's division of the American Jewish Congress at the opening meeting Wednesday afternoon in the Standard club. In a talk entitled, "We Jews—Postscript to Exile," Mrs. Charles E. Shulman will discuss in achievements of the World Jewish congress in that endeavor. Mrs. Shulman is a member of the executive groups both of the American and the World Jewish congresses. The Chicago women's division is headed by Mrs. Milton J. Krensky, who will convene the Wednesday meeting at 1:30 o'clock.

Altrusans Will Hear a Talk on Post-War Jobs

The future employment situation will challenge attention of Chicago Altrusans at an 8 o'clock meeting tomorrow night in the Cordon club, 410 S. Michigan av. Prophecies in the air concerning a forthcoming wave of unemployment determined the executive and professional women of the club to make a comprehensive analysis of the situation, and as a step in this direction they have invited Dr. J. H. Hazlehurst, personnel consultant, to speak at tomorrow's gathering on "Work Opportunities."

Dr. Hazlehurst worked as a training consultant during World War II. with Maj. Gen. Levin Campbell, army ordnance chief, and also with the war man power commission in the training within industry department. The talk, which is open to the public, will be preceded by a dinner for members and guests of the club. The meeting has been arranged by Miss Alva Lowrey, program coördinator, and Miss May Cavanagh, chairman of the club's vocational information committee.

Miss Lowrey, who is an interior decorator, is to be the guest speaker at a noon luncheon meeting of the La Salle Street Women set for Wednesday in the Central Y. M. C. A., 19 S. La Salle st. Miss Lowrey specializes in the study of old glass, china, and icons.

A dinner gathering of the Women's Advertising Club of Chicago, to be held at 6:15 o'clock Tuesday in Huyler's restaurant, 310 S. Michigan av., will bring as speaker Carlyle Emery, advertising man, who has written, produced, and directed his own radio shows. Following his address on radio's mass power, Mr. Emery will conduct a question and answer forum.

The Chicago Office Supervisors' club has invited Joseph H. Green, director of Modern Speaking Counselors, to talk at a dinner meeting Thursday in the Central Y. M. C. A. His topic will be "What You Have to Say and How to Say It."

On Tuesday night the Women's division of the Electric association will meet in the association dining room to hear Mrs. Mary Davis Gillies, interiors and architectural editor for a women's magazine, discuss "Modern Electrical Development in Homemaking." Six o'clock dinner will precede the program.

Following a business session Wednesday, the Woman's club of the Chicago and North Western Railway System will have tea in club quarters.

ConsumptiveRelief Juniors Plan Fall Style Show Friday

Miami Beach Is Ready for a Big Season

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. [Special]—Miami Beach hotel operators, apartment owners, and all other business people are preparing for what is expected to be the greatest winter season in history, and the entire city is ready for early winter guests.

Outside of repairs, alterations, and maintenance, Miami Beach has not changed in appearance since construction work was halted shortly after Pearl Harbor, but upon release of building restrictions the largest construction program in history will be started here.

Within two months after the declaration of war Miami Beach was converted into one of the largest air corps training centers in the United States. Most of the city's 335 finest hotels were leased by the army for "ready made" barracks where more than half a million soldiers were housed during their basic training course.

At present the army has 85 hotels under lease, but evacuation of these buildings is now under way and the last hotel will be returned to its owner before Christmas. With these additional accommodations, Miami Beach again will be ready to entertain its normal seasonal capacity of 250,000 visitors.

In addition to housing facilities there are plans under way for remodeling many of the city's night clubs, entertainment and recreational centers. Golf courses and parks formerly used by the army as training fields have been released and the city now can offer every recreation and entertainment feature that was available before the war.

In view of the almost certain rush to Miami Beach this winter, it is strongly urged that serious thought be given to making hotel and transportation reservations well in advance. It is almost a certainty that these accommodations will be scarce.

North Carolina Plans Highway up Mt. Mitchell

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—The peak of Mount Mitchell, highest mountain in the east, will be readily accessible at last. The North Carolina state highway department has announced plans for a modern highway which will link the peak with near-by Blue Ridge pkwy. The new highway is expected to bring thousands of visitors to the peak, where there is a look out town. The state parks division hopes by next summer to have shelters for overnight campers, as well as refreshments and other facilities. A water system is now being installed.

Tucson, Ariz., Ready for Boom in Tourist Travel

TUCSON, Ariz.—The first resort area in the southwest—and perhaps the nation—to become completely reconverted to tourism is Tucson, Ariz., the Old Pueblo south of the Gila. Corrals are full of cow ponies, saddles, and bridles refurbished, guitars tuned up, chuck wagons dusted off—the land of time, space, and sun is returning to a peaceful life.

National Park Attendance Up Since V-J Day

If the great upsurge of travel to national parks that followed the discontinuance of gasoline rationing is any indication of what will happen in the full post-war travel season, the country's national parks will enjoy one of the biggest years in their history, according to Newton B. Drury, director of the National Park Service.

Sheanandoah National park, in Virginia's Blue Ridge mountains, virtually was isolated during gasoline rationing, but on the first Sunday following V-J day four cars a minute were checked in at the park. Mount Ranier National park in Washington experienced its all-time high in visitor use on Sept. 2 with 17,254 visitors. Carlsbad Caverns National park in New Mexico made its next to highest travel record the same day, registering 3,741 persons.

At Zion National park in Utah, 8,480 persons were registered the last week in August, as compared with 1,815 visitors the same week in 1944. Bryce Canyon National park, in the same state, also showed a marked increase in attendance. Throngs were reported at Great Smoky Mountains National park in Tennessee and North Carolina the first week following the end of the war.

The superintendent of the Sequoia-Kings Canyon National parks in California reports that attendance in one week in the last of August was about 500 per cent over last year. Yosemite National park, haven for members of the armed forces and war workers for the last four years, was visited by more than four times as many persons in the last week of August than during the corresponding period in 1944.

Grand National Park in Arizona, during the week beginning Labor day, registered an increase of 245 per cent, with a total of more than 1,100 daily. Other areas with unusually high attendance which taxed all facilities following the end of hostilities were Mesa Verde National park, Colorado; Petrified Forest National monument, Arizona; Rocky Mountain National park, Colorado; Yellowstone National park, Wyoming-Montana-Idaho, and Boulder Dam National Recreational area, Arizona-Nevada.

Altho travel to the national parks has slackened since Labor day—as is normal for this time of the year—it still continues to be several times as heavy as it was at the same time last year.

For National Park service personnel charged with the administration of various national parks and for concessioners operating hotels, lodges and other overnight accommodations for visitors, this heavy post-war travel presented a major problem, Drury said. Altho all the national parks remain open thruout the year, scheduled tourist accommodations generally close in September, but simple, informal accommodations are maintained in the major areas as long as weather conditions permit. Such accommodations are now in operation—are, in fact, the type of facilities that have been generally available thruout the war years.

It is estimated that visitors to all units of the national park system for the year ending Sept. 30 totaled approximately 9,900,000, including an estimated 2,300,000 military visitors. The peak travel year for the parks was 1941, with 21,050,426 visitors. With the opening of the travel season next June, the National Park service hopes to operate the national parks on full schedule and looks forward to one of its busiest years.

Autumnal Colors in Pennsylvania is a Thrilling Sight

HARRISBURG, Pa. [Special]—Persons who have waited and planned for an autumn vacation when the Pennsylvania hills and mountains and meadows will be aflame with color may expect an unusually rare treat this season, says the state department of commerce. Reports indicate that this season will be one of the most colorful of recent years.

Autumn has a special appeal to many persons even in normal years, with the clear, crisp mountain air, the browning fields, the colorful hillsides, and the warm days and cool nights. Then, too, October is the prelude to the small game season in November and the big game season that follows the first two weeks in December.

Hotels and inns in all parts of the state still are crowded and will be so, but many of the seasonal hotels and inns are remaining open longer this year to accommodate still greater numbers of persons.

FLASH! Complexions Can Now Be Bleached Into Younger Looking, More Radiant Beauty by Mercolized Wax Cream
THE thin outer layer of skin called the scarf skin has less blood nourishment and circulation. It is the oldest of skin layers, and becomes dull, drab, harshened, freckled and browned by wind, soot-laden air and sun. It thus covers up the natural baby-pink skin beauty underneath. But the lovely bleaching action of MERCOLIZED WAX CREAM on this skin surface is a delightful surprise. New skin beauty results with a soft glowing freshness and radiance that can be the envy of everyone. Thousands of women have used MERCOLIZED WAX CREAM for years. Thousands of others will THRILL at discovering what it may do for them. Use only as directed.
PHELACTINE DEPILATORY—REMOVES FACIAL HAIR. Here is a clean, easy way to take ugly superfluous hair off the face in a few minutes. It extracts a portion of hair embedded under the skin along with the surface hair. Not a cream or powder. Has no unpleasant odor. Clear your face of superfluous hair with Phelactine Depilatory.
OILY SKIN—Helped by SAXOLITE ASTRINGENT—It is easy to help oily skin look fresher and better with the invaluable aid of Saxolite Astringent. Just dissolve Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and pat it on the skin several times a day. It subdues excess surface oil, tightens skin surface by temporary contraction, and leaves the skin feeling delightfully refreshed.

Art Institute Guard for 41 Years Honored

By Eleanor Jewett

I have walked with beauty,
Seen it, tasted it, smelled it;
I have admired beauty and guarded it.
Who can best say what beauty is—
He who creates or he who enjoys it?
I have created beauty in verse,
Running words like silks from my tongue;
I have drunk from the ponds of others' wit,
Hung purple thereon.
Forty years I have walked with beauty,
Guarded, cherished, protected, loved.
Now who shall say he knows beauty?
I have created verse, linked words,
To channel my dreams.
Powder from my gun sleeps in its cap.
E. J.

These lines are written to Hiram Powers Dilworth, who, on Oct. 2, started his 42d year as an Art institute guard. Mr. Dilworth is a poet as well as a guard and his long association with the beauty of the treasures over which he is custodian colors his verse, verse chiefly religious in nature.

Mr. Dilworth's first little brochure, "The Year, Twelve Sonnets" is to be found in the library of the University of Chicago. His "The Cup of Joy" is in many libraries, including those of St. Petersburg, Fla.; Northwestern university and the University of Wisconsin; the Chicago Historical society and the Chicago public library, and Antioch college. We doubt if the gun on Mr. Dilworth's hip has ever been fired, but the pen in his pocket has stirred many hearts. Sensitive to beauty in forms, this Art institute guard with with a group of his confrères, may be counted among the many critics the museum is host to each year. They are friendly critics, but shrewd. Beauty is still the chief ingredient in any work they find worthy to catalog among the museum's permanent treasures.

The finest show in town this month, by all odds, is the exhibition of works by artist members of the Chicago Galleries association, 215 N. Michigan av. It is a stunning show. Macena Barton ranks well to the top with her fascinating stunt picture "The Mirror," one of the best canvases a Chicago painter has turned out in months. It is a subtle piece of painting, intricate and involved and completely intriguing. The artist has painted the reflection of herself painting on this same picture in a tall, old fashioned pierglass.

The palette itself, set up in the foreground, is just that nice bit of realism, finely conceived, which makes all the difference in the world in the way imagination works. Marcena Barton has painted this particular picture with good judgment, wit, humor, tenderness, and a catalog of detail which increases the magnetism of her technique several fold. "The Mirror" is an outstanding achievement.

The exquisite landscape by Orrin A. White, "Quiet Pool," is another highlight in the show. Mr. White has forgotten dynamic symmetry for the moment and turned his brush to recording the tranquil charm of the flat Illinois or Iowa countryside. He gives us a painting that is filled with charm and beauty, unsensational but eternally true. Frank I. Johnson offers one of the most brilliant portraits in the show, a simple, honest portrait of a business man, excellent in composition, values, and manner. Oskar Gross, in a moment of fun, turned in an engaging self-portrait with a scrap of chess-board. F. R. Harper has a delicious group of young mother and little son, fresh and charming.

Another unusual portrait is the persuasive likeness of Glenn Price by Richard Chase, and still another intriguing portrait is "Day Dreaming," a little girl indulging in this favorite indoor sport, painted beautifully by Shirley Friend.

Walter Graham, who is making a series of paintings of country fairs, contributes "Riders Up," a gorgeous canvas, colorful and spirited. Nina K. Griffin has a delightful study of a white house in the shade of an old tree, "7 South Street, Rockport, Mass." Gianni Cilfone with "Low Tide, Gloucester" and Arnold Turtle with "The Bay" offer two stunning marines, two pictures so fine that it takes more than an effort to tear the visitor away from his delighted inspection of them. Both Mr. Cilfone and Mr. Turtle are to be congratulated on the beauty and strength of their work.

Jessie Arms Botke shows a radiant "White Peacock and Hollyhocks," very decorative and very lovely. Opposite it hangs the magnificent bird study, "In the Tropics," by Karl Plath, with the plumage of the richly colored birds so soft your finger in imagination can nestle in the feathers. Charles Killgore has a decorative landscape, "California Sycamores," stylized but fluent of line. Marshall D. Smith has a strong canvas in "Algerian Brigands" and Oscar D. Soellner a jeweled still life in "Still Life." "Butterflies" by Julius Moessel is rich in color and masterly painting; "East Gloucester" by J. Jeffery Grant is very fine.

There is an attractive little exhibit of water colors and oils by Nelly Deachman in the Tea Room Gallery, Mandel Brothers. Several flower arrangements are charming in color and composition and two studies of a young woman, one a ballet dancer, are thoroly delightful. Mrs. Deachman holds a warm place in the hearts of many Illinois artists for her excellent handling of the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts' exhibitions. Her ability and knowledge as a painter increase her value as one of the chief arbiters of the society's welfare.

Maurice Seymour displays unusual facility and skill in his superb photographs of the ballet on view at the Chicago public library. He is perhaps the most distinguished photographer of the ballet we have today. His prints are absorbing, on several scores—the dancers they portray, the costumes they depict, and the poses they illustrate. His is fine photography at its best.

The Cordon, Fine Arts building, opened its first exhibit of the season last Friday with a showing of work in painting and sculpture by artist members of the club.

Fashions and Fancy

By Judith Cass

A fashion expert taking a sartorial survey of the Arts club's rococo little dining room during the tea hour on its recent opening day surely would have noted Mrs. Marshall Davison's Victorian tailleur; the soft brushed wool suit worn by her guest, Mrs. Tom Braniff; Mrs. William Henry Wood's beguiling bonnet of golden brown velvet and cocoa ostrich plumes, one of the most feminine seen in many a day; Mrs. Edward A. Leight's sequin-spangled ensemble; and the extra-long jacket worn by Mrs. Arthur M. Wirtz, who is tall and slender enough to show off one of the tubular long torso suits to perfection. Mrs. Braniff's was the only southern accent in the room. She and her husband had come from Dallas, Tex., to stay at the Blackstone for a week while he conferred with a Mexican-American aviation research group. To tea in the Arts club she wore a two piece gray wool suit with a yolk and shoulders of shocking pink wool, and a small toque of mink. Mrs. Davison's two piece black faille suit with its rippled peplum was reminiscent of the 1890s, and her high bandbox hat combined black and pink cabbage roses and green ribbon streamers. The tea gave Mrs. Wood her first chance to exercise her new duties as social chairman of the club, a post which she inherited this year from Mrs. Arthur G. Cable. Her pretty face was swathed in coarse brown veiling which fell from the brim of her fetching hat, which was worn back on the head with its crest of ostrich plumes riding just above her pompadour. Her gown was of palest cafe au lait wool, and the coat worn over it was of a slightly deeper shade. Touches of gold glittered about Mrs. Leight's black town suit, from the handsome brooch pinned to its jacket and her heavy gold bracelets to the band of gold sequins circling her high-crowned black felt fez. Her blouse of yellow China silk dotted in black was tucked at two-inch intervals all the way down the front. Mrs. Wirtz set off her light brown tweed suit, cut with straight skirt and long jacket, with tobacco brown accents—a brace of sables and a Victorian cartwheel laden with dark brown ostrich fronds. Some of the others at tea: Mrs. George Arthur Kelly and her daughter, Mrs. John Irving, both in black, the latter with hearts and spades parading over her tiny hat; Mrs. Charles S. Clark, in pale blue wool, and Mrs. Louis K. Boysen in a brown coat dress and crownless red felt bow hat.

The opening of the Chicago Opera company brought forth an audience which was handsomely but not extravagantly dressed, and while black and white predominated among the costumes of the women in main floor and box seats, there was more color present than at any of the war time openings. If a pre-opera fashion showing sponsored by the Illinois Opera Guild is an accurate forecast, next year's event should be colorful indeed. From a palette of colors that ran riot from American beauty, tangerine, and rose cedar to mulberry and pansy blue, the designers had created costumes which dazzled the eyes of the spectators. Equally dazzling was the costume of the guest of honor, the opera star, Bidu Sayao, whose chocolate brown faille dress was trimmed with plaited gold kid about the cuffs and on the dress. Three gold birds in flight were pinned to one shoulder, and her brimmed, off-the-face hat sparkled with brown beads. Double purple orchids were pinned to the matching brown cape across her shoulders. Blue and brown were worn by Mrs. Richard Whitten to hear Miss Maria Osmena speak on the Philippines at the first of the Woman's Athletic club lectures last week. With her suit of pale blue wool, Mrs. Whitten wore a matching hat brimmed with a wide band of brown grosgrain ribbon which tied in a bow at the front. Her shoes were alligator pumps, and she carried a fur scarf of kolinsky.

Career Girls' Clothes Sleek and Distinctive

By Rea Seeger

Shrewd young shoppers operating on limited clothes allowances, usually the career girls, are luxuriating in the smart shop within a well known Chicago store that is filled with good looking dresses, all priced reasonably, none tagged with anything above the $30 limit, many costing considerably less.

Such smart clothes have been designed by the famous midwestern designer, Paul Sachs, a genius who caters to the taste of sleek, well groomed career girls with office-social wardrobes to assemble.

In the current collection will be found the famous butter smooth gabardines made into tailored one piece dresses as well as in the clever two piecers. Also shown are the button-on dresses, distinctive side button models, the buttons and buttonholes doubling smartly for decoration as well as fasteners. The colors of the gabardines this season are unusually intriguing: Aqua, strawberry, caramel beige, and a lime green. Ink black buttons and buttonholes provide the contrast. There are dresses and two piece models with the tops of color, the skirts of black, brown, or navy.

Also featured in a grand array of smart new silhouettes and dresses of fascinating detail, are the models of thin wool and crepe. Neutral tones of gray and beige, effective cinnamon shades, scarlet, and the all-purpose blacks, assure a wide and interesting choice. Paul Sachs originals are distinguished by the details. One, for instance, has the feminine long fitted basque top with flashing contrasts of satin used against the dull crepe of the dress. On one model bows are tied smartly at the side of both the bodice top and the long well fitted skirt.

Dress clothes are varied and distinctive in this same late fall and early winter collection. Some have the alluring flash of sequins, but they are motifs of discreet size and splendor. Others have velvet or satin contrast. Some of the more party-ish dresses are made of self-patterned brocade. These in handsome blacks and other dark colors are the answer to the date dress problem. Many are so simply fashioned as to permit the owner to wear them at the office, then later for the theater.

All the bright shades imaginable are available in the handsome dresses made of thin wool crepe. altho plenty of dark shades come in the same models. Chinese contrasts particularly are popular this season. Vivid panels of Chinese tangerine or vermillion, equally high colored tassels, and Chinese beads for buttons, will be tempting extras for the shopper hunting for dash of color combined wtih dark colored materials.

Smart shades of brown and copper vie with the models made of the high, strong colors and those of black and winter navy. Gray is another neutral featured for a basic or foundation color, around which the important accessories may be used skillfully. Smartest of all are the clever two color combinations used in the single costume to be worn as a dress-suit. Chamois yellows and all the colored gabardines make excellent top contrasts for the slim, utterly plain skirts of sharp monotones.

Sketched are four representative Paul Sachs originals, expressly designed for the shoppers on limited clothes allowances. They are tops in sleek distinction and flawless details. These and many others will be found in a Chicago store. For further information call Superior 0200.

DePaul Polish Club Plans Social Gathering Oct. 24

We are about to become acquainted with the first of the many exciting "things to come" which were promised us. Plastic gun covers which provided invaluable protection to fighting equipment returns to us in the guise of a beautiful and brilliantly colored plastic raincoat.

Gun covers of necessity possessed outstanding qualifications and the new rain protectors are equally remarkable. The coat is straight of line with deep, wide raglan sleeves, which make it possible to don over a topcoat. The front closing fastens up to a snug neck line under a smooth fitting, turn-over collar. A narrow belt ties at front. This plastic coat contains no rubber, is grease-proof, waterproof, noninflammable, and will not crack, dry, or rot. To be cleaned one merely sponges it off with soap and water. It is available in periwinkle blue, jade green, red, white, black, and opalescent in small, medium, and large sizes. It is priced under $8.

A triangular kerchief which serves as a rain hat is sold separately in the same vivid colors.

A Friend in Need

[If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer need, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.].

By Sally Joy Brown

Drab, bare rooms are depressing, and often the realization that the average piece of furniture is beyond their limits, causes great discouragement to many families who apply to us for aid. This state may even become the cause of friction between parents. Such tension tends to lessen when quarters take on a semblance of livability. Many readers probably have surplus items stored in basements or attics, which, gathered together, would be a great help in saving homes from dreariness this winter.

A social worker is interested in the L. family, which consists of parents and four children, girls 7, 3, and 1, and a boy 2 years old, living on the south side. Subsequent to their recent move to larger quarters Mr. L.'s working hours were materially shortened, and his earning capacity now is barely sufficient to supply daily necessities for his family. The purchase of extra furniture is beyond consideration, and consequently some rooms stand empty. This home would benefit greatly by having living room furniture, floor covering, lamps, desk, bookcases, and bedroom pieces.

Mr. A., a discharged veteran, recently released from the hospital, is eager to establish a home and looks to our department to help him and his wife obtain household equipment for three rooms. The most essential needs are a bed complete with mattress and springs, a dresser, kitchen table and chairs, a gas stove, heating stove, and a few pieces of living room furniture. The address is on the west side.

Mrs. R., whose husband is in the army, recently found a flat for herself and baby. She is finding it difficult to meet all the needs of her small household on the family allowance and she cannot seek employment to supplement them. These chilly mornings require added heat for the baby and, lacking an oil heater, she has resorted to lighting the small gas oven. We hope a stove of the type mentioned, suitable for heating four rooms, can be found for her. The address is on the near north side.

After months of exposure to sun and wind . . . it's wise to make a check-up of your complexion. If there's even a beginning of a dry and faded look, with tiny wrinkles forming around the eyes and mouth . . . start using EDNA WALLACE HOPPER Homogenized Facial Cream TONIGHT! This cream is homogenized to give just the EVEN lubrication your skin needs NOW! Pat it on face and neck, using upward and outward strokes, with an extra amount pressed on wrinkles or lines. Leave on 8 minutes, then remove. You'll be amazed at how much more soft and glowing your skin will appear and how quickly you'll look your loveliest and fairest. Ask for EDNA WALLACE HOPPER Homogenized Facial Cream at your Cosmetic Counter . . . inexpensive way to a wonderful Facial at home!

Doesn't this crisp, cool Autumn weather give you that fresh-out-of the-bandbox feeling . . . a yen for good tweeds, a smart new hair-do, elegant grooming? Then try the perfect complement to your exciting October mood,—VICEROYS! This cigarette is somehow just RIGHT for this wonderful season! The VICEROY flavor is mellow as Autumn sunlight,—the choicest domestic and Turkish tobaccos blended into smoking delight! Each fragrant puff comes filtered through a smart (and very special!) filter tip which guards you from the annoyance of unwelcome tobacco particles in your mouth and bits of cigarette paper stuck to your lips. It keeps tobacco crumbs IN the cigarette and checks tars and resins OUT! Superb cigarette, VICEROY . . . favored by discriminating women!

Even in Babydom, there can be a "new fashion" sensation . . . and I think Mothers agree that PLASTI-CLEER Baby Pants are one of them! Who would ever think that plastic chemistry could do so much for BABY . . . giving him certain and absolute assurance of leak-proof panties without a stitch of rubber in their making . . . panties that are guaranteed waterproof, oil and acid resistant, heatproof! Washable, besides! PLASTI-CLEER Baby Pants are light, and yet durable. They won't chafe or irritate! They're made by Goodyear Rubber Sundries, Inc., New Haven, Conn., in white or flesh . . . opaque or transparent. Supply is limited, but mothers will find some at Madigan Bros.

Twin-Taste Sensation for Your Salads!

Salads shouldn't ever be "sissy"—for it's so easy to put hearty he-man flavor into them! Try this recipe that's spiked with the twin-taste sensation all men love—BEST FOODS Mustard-with-Horseradish sauce!

PIQUANTE BEAN SALAD

¾ cup cooked lima beans
¾ cup cooked string beans
½ cup cooked kidney beans
Dash Worcestershire Sauce
¼ cup Hellmann's or Best Foods French Dressing
½ tsp. Best Foods MUSTARD-with-HORSERADISH

(1) Mix French Dressing with Mustard-with-Horseradish and Worcestershire Sauce. (2) Add lima beans, string beans and kidney beans. (3) Mix thoroughly and chill. (4) Serve with lettuce sandwiches. Yield: 6 servings.

BEST FOODS Mustard-with-Horseradish adds the double savor of mustard laced with zesty horseradish . . . a twosome flavor that compounds appetite appeal in so many dishes! Try this recipe this week!

One Good Flavor Deserves Another!

Here's that market basket again—with the bottles of SCHLITZ giving us the high-sign that this food shopper didn't forget that good food deserves its Good Companion. SCHLITZ Beer is just exactly that . . . a friend to food, a delicious brew-beverage at all meals! Since it is brewed with just the kiss of the hops, only their delicate flavor is captured . . . resulting in a sparkling drink that outlaws harsh bitterness. When you taste this delightful brew you'll begin to understand why the world over it's known as the beer that made Milwaukee famous. So be sure to specify SCHLITZ when you order beer from your Food Store . . . It's brewed by the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

Fashion Hints!

ATTENTION! Eyes front . . . chin up . . . and "tummy" in! If you've a mature figure, why try to manage on your own—when there's a P. N. PRACTICAL FRONT CORSET to help you to slimmer, lovelier lines? Are there sags, spread and bulges that sort of "spill over," making any dress you wear unnoticed because the lines are lost? Then a PRACTICAL FRONT CORSET is just what you need to discipline that figure and get it back in trim. The famous inner vest will support the stomach and that excess flesh will be redistributed so that inches are cut from your figure! Comfortably, too! You'll feel as smartly turned out in your new frock as the colonel of a regiment! Ask at your Store for a PRACTICAL FRONT CORSET; or write to Nancy Sasser, 271 Madison Ave., New York 16, N. Y., for name of nearest corset shop.

Just another reminder of the "nicest" way I know to let a serviceman or woman know how thoughtful you are of his or her comfort . . . by including in your Christmas Gift Box a can or two of DR. SCHOLL'S Foot Powder. It will descend upon its receiver like "manna from heaven" . . . bringing wondrous, relief-giving comfort to sore, tired, perspiring and walk-weary feet! And don't forget how refreshing and soothing DR. SCHOLL'S Foot Powder can be for your own feet, too! Besides, it's perfectly wonderful for "easing" new Fall shoes, helping ward off Athlete's Foot and keeping feet odor-free. To chairmen of Overseas Gift Committees: Be sure to include DR. SCHOLL'S Foot Powder in your gift boxes!

FOR DISTINGUISHED SERVICE IN "LIGHTING ACTION" . . . RONSON Lighters get top citation from GI JOE! In a survey just completed by the American Legion Magazine, 51.91% of our recently returned servicemen preferred a RONSON Lighter to all other makes. I've been holding your hopes high for the time when RONSON Lighters would again be obtainable for safe and "luxurious" lighting. That time is HERE . . . and you will soon observe RONSON Lighters on civilian sale in increasing quantities . . . the RONSON "Whirlwind" Pocket Lighter, with the disappearing wind shield . . . that exquisite RONSON "CROWN" Table Lighter in rich silver plate, together with other Pocket and Table models, will be available to you for Holiday Gift-Buying! A RONSON will make a gift to outshadow all gift-giving . . . a gift that has been well worth waiting for!

The polish you use may be the "last word" . . . your manicure expensive and perfect. But unless your hands are soft, smooth and young-looking, they'll never be the kind poets and lovers write sonnets about! So I'd suggest you give less time to the "trimmings" . . . and more to the simple, everyday business of smoothing on a good hand cream like PACQUINS. See how quickly you can help change that chapped, rough and reddened handskin to lovely, satin-smooth softness . . . more lily-white and young in appearance! Pleasant business, too, for PACQUINS Hand Cream is snow-white and fragrant . . . disappearing quickly after you smooth it on, without leaving a trace of stickiness. PACQUINS Hand Cream was first made to help doctors and nurses protect their hands against roughness and chapping in spite of 30 to 40 scrubbings a day. From that professional beginning, it has become the favorite hand-cream BUY-LINE of lovely women everywhere. Ask for PACQUINS Hand Cream at Drug, Dept. or 10c Stores—a MUST to help safeguard your hands from chapping effects of cold weather and the roughening disasters of housework!

Many's the everyday dish that can be made "special" by the simple addition of WELCH'S Grapelade or Orange Marmalade! Tuck WELCH'S Grapelade into a fluffy omelet and see what this sweet-taste of fresh grapes does to it! Set a jar of WELCH'S Marmalade on the table . . . to be spread on waffles or pancakes and see how the flavor of FRESH Oranges "makes the dish"! Both of these "fruit gems" are made by the Welch Grape Juice Company,—from FRESH Grapes and FRESH Oranges! No ersatz flavoring . . . no artificial coloring . . . just "goodness," from the first spoonful to the last speck in the jar! So good, in fact, you'll want to eat them with a spoon! Serve them from morning breakfast to midnight snacks and watch your family enjoy them! Ask for both at your Grocer's!

Fall Lip Flattery!

A LIPSTICK WARDROBE! . . . you'll just HAVE to HAVE one! HELENA RUBINSTEIN packs a lipstick foursome into a felt kit to guarantee lip-shade flattery to your coloring and to the Fall fashion colors most becoming to you! Each lipstick shade is selected with scientific forethought according to HELENA RUBINSTEIN'S Color-Spectrograph,—so whether your hair is red, blonde, brunette, medium-brown or silver gray, your four Lipsticks are RIGHT for your individual coloring as you wear each with the color family for which it was designed. The cost of the kit is amazing when you consider the research and care that's gone into its making . . . 4 full size HELENA RUBINSTEIN'S lipsticks for only $2.50!

Can your complexion pass a masculine "eye-test" at any time — always lovely and smooth to behold, and even nicer to touch? No? Then learn what marvelous things a small jar of tinted cream holds for you! It's HOUBIGANT'S "Translucid" CREAM-TONE . . . a new make-up base that gives your skin the soft and precious look of damask. CREAM-TONE is non-drying, non-caking and there's none of that unattractive "masked look" that's made so many of us distrust the use of make-up bases. Choose HOUBIGANT'S "Translucid" CREAM-TONE in dark, medium or light . . . each shade blended to match natural skin tones perfectly. Cost is $1, plus tax, at better stores.

It's no fun to be fat, for how can a fat lady be glamorous? So if you want to slim down, remember that tests by medical doctors showed that 100 people lost 14 to 15 pounds in a few weeks by following the simple AYDS Vitamin Candy Reducing Plan. Why not try it yourself? It's the comfortable way to reduce. In following the AYDS Plan according to directions, you don't cut out any meals—simply cut down on them. No exercise . . . No laxatives . . . No drugs . . . Absolutely harmless. Cost for a month's supply is only $2.25. Money back on the very first box you buy if you don't reduce to slimmer, more glamorous lines! Ask for vitamin-fortified AYDS at Netcher's Boston Store, The Fair, Mandel's and leading Drug Counters.

Fit, Comfort, Service!

Music Therapy to Be Theme of Oct. 17 Lecture

The story of music as a healing agency in hospitals will be described by Mrs. Esther Goetz Gilliland in a public lecture at 8 o'clock Wednesday night, Oct. 17, in the People's church, Sheridan rd. at Lawrence av. The talk, which is to be illustrated with representative musical selections, is under auspices of Chicago alumnae chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota, national women's music fraternity.

The fraternity's 35 alumnae chapters over the country have adopted as their chief service project for the year the support of music therapy programs in military hospitals, and a silver offering taken at the Oct. 17 gathering will go toward purchase of needed musical equipment for the hospitals.

Mrs. Gilliland, who has been named director for the national project, recently returned to Chicago from Detroit, Mich., where she served at the Eloise hospital as the first music therapy interne under Dr. Ira M. Altshuler, nationally known neuro-psychiatrist. Dr. Altshuler spoke here before a recent regional conference of the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Miss Mollie Wiggins, alumnae president, has been assisted with arrangements for the benefit lecture by Miss Gloria Dowson and Mrs. Edgar R. Hooper.

Brazil to Be Theme of Pan-American Council Program

An evening gathering of the Pan American Council, set for 8 o'clock Thursday in the Woodrow Wilson room at 84 E. Randolph st., will bring as guest speaker Mrs. Wanda Wilkins of Sao Paulo, Brazil. Her talk on Brazil will be augmented by a colored movie of Sao Paulo, filmed recently, and an exhibit of music, art, and literature of Brazil, as well as a collection of semi-precious stones and samples of woods of the country.

Mrs. Wilkins' late husband was a citizen of the United States, and she lived in this country a number of years. She founded the first English-American kindergarten in Sao Paulo, and has worked extensively with American and Brazilian Red Cross organizations.

John Alexander will direct the Thursday night program, which is to include a group of native songs by Miss Nilda Bahia of Bahia, Brazil. Lucile Haynes-Carewe is program chairman for the council.

Odd Statistics

Learn to Cope with Children's Daring Exploits

By Gladys Huntington Bevans

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

In dealing with the venturesomeness of little children we should try to strike, in this regard as in so many others, a happy medium. That is to say that we should neither timorously hold back our small child's attempts at adventure or new experiences, nor should we force them into attempting to do things which are really hazardous and beyond them, with the idea of making them more independent, or letting them learn to avoid danger by actually allowing them to get burned or bumped or cut.

You know those comfortable, sociable, seashore scenes—blue-green waves breaking with a roar, white foam rolling up on the sandy beach, children building castles and digging wells, mothers sitting in groups, talking, knitting.

A small boy attired in a miniature red sun suit and lugging a gaily decorated pail swaggers unnoticed toward the water's edge. He trips over the handle of the pail, struggles to his feet, grabs the pail, falls in the loose sand, pushes himself free of the offensive pail, struggles to his feet, grabs the pail, and staggers on toward the water.

A knitter looks up from her work. "O, Mrs. Thomas look! Chub is going right down into the water. You sit still. I'll run and get him."

"No, let him alone. He knows what he's doing."

The chubby little boy approaches within a few feet of the water, stops, stands a minute, then turns, trots back, and continues his digging.

"You see?" his mother says. "The other day he went too close. A wave crept up unexpectedly and splashed all over him. Now he knows what to expect and keeps away from the edge."

It is a good plan, when possible, to let the children learn many things thru the graphic working of cause and effect. With a reasonable exercise of judgment we can decide how much freedom we are to allow our children in order that they may find out certain dangers for themselves. Are we to guide them constantly, or should we let them "come a cropper" once in a while?

"Don't do that!" "Don't touch this!" are commands that we mothers use all too often. Of course we must keep watch so that our young children do themselves no physical harm. But if they have a passion for attempting something that really is not dangerous, jumping off an enticing step, or climbing on the big armchair, why not let them satisfy this longing? If a child is thwarted forever in his little excursions into unknown situations, it kills his love of adventure.

Some adults, instead of being timorous, actually believe in using extreme measures in order to teach a child the "don'ts" and push him into adventure. A burned child may avoid the fire, but that doesn't mean that we shouldn't see that the fire screen is in place and that the pin cushion and the garden shears are out of the reach of small hands.

Learning based on fear engendered by real injury is harmful learning. But neither should we frustrate a child's adventurous spirit by our own chronically fearful attitude.

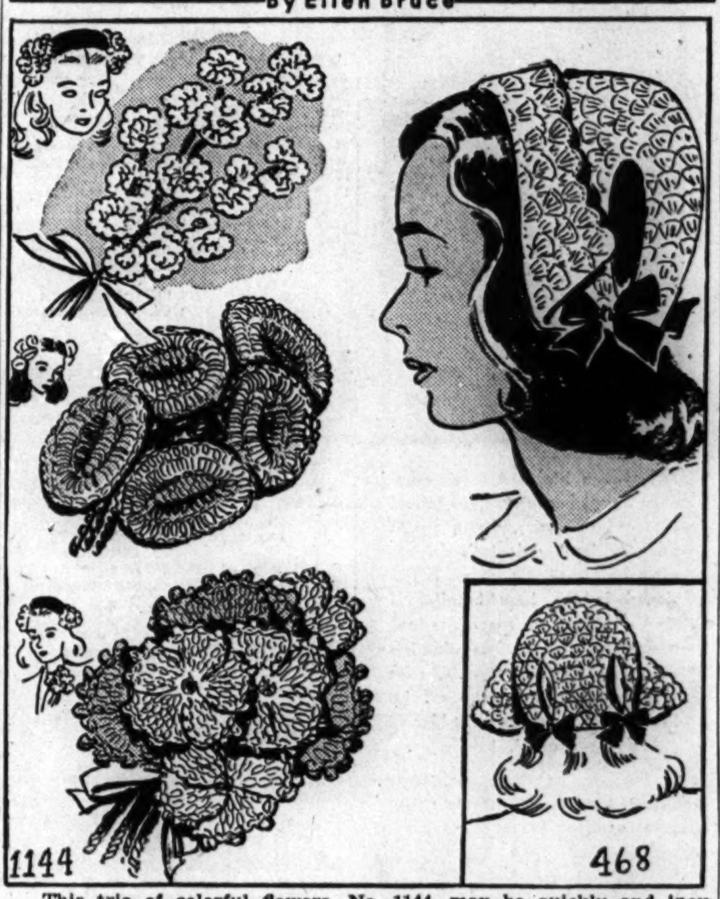
Designs for Needlework

By Ellen Bruce



This trio of colorful flowers, No. 1144, may be quickly and inexpensively crocheted to serve as effective boutonnieres on fall clothes. The flowers are colorful and are made of the simplest stitches.

A beguiling Dutch bonnet, No. 468, is quickly and easily crocheted all in one piece. The attractive shell stitch is used thruout. The bonnet is fastened at each side of the back with velvet bows of contrasting colors.

For instructions in making either one of these items, send 15 CENTS in coin [30 CENTS for both—wrap coin securely] to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth av., New York 1, N. Y.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
2 no trump	Pass	4 hearts	Pass
6 hearts	Pass	Pass	Pass

In this column I have frequently declared myself as a staunch advocate of the simple, straightforward, and direct method of bidding slams. Had there been any lingering doubts in my mind on that subject, our experience in the most recent national tournament would have dispelled them.

Today's hand is from the team-of-four events which was scored on a total point basis. It accounted for a swing of 750 points in favor of the winners of this particular match. The bidding indicated in the diagram was that by Mrs. A. M. Sobel, who sat North, and your reporter. Her opening bid of two no trump may be regarded as somewhat irregular by many players who are not in favor of suppressing a five card major suit. However, she strongly favors directness and where a hand contains the necessary high card "count" for a two no trump opening and is suited to no trump play, she feels that less confusion is apt to result from a direct quantitative bid. The response of four hearts is strictly according to Hoyle. It denotes a six card suit and probably a little over one trick. South realizes that the partnership holds over six honor tricks and that a game in hearts is therefore a certainty. A temporary bid of three hearts would be unsatisfactory because it would involve taking more drastic action at a later stage in the bidding. By jumping to four hearts South completely discharges himself of his obligation towards the hand and permits partner to make the final decision. This decision Mrs. Sobel made promptly by bidding six hearts.

At the other table, the bidding proceeded as follows:

North	East	South	West
1 spade	Pass	2 hearts	Pass
3 diamonds	Pass	3 hearts	Pass
4 clubs	Pass	4 diamonds	Pass
4 hearts	Pass	Pass	Pass

In explanation of the three diamond bid, it should be pointed out that this pair regards a new suit at the level of three as a one round force even when made by the opening bidder. At the wee hours of the morning following the participants were still engaged in a vigorous discussion as to whether North or South should have bid more. But the point I wish to make is that if players of the caliber of this pair, can get mixed up in a maze of complicated bidding, how much more likely is it that the average player will become confused by involved methods.

Now Is Time to Bake Your Fruit Cakes

By Mary Meade

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

It's time to make fruit cakes, for fruit cakes need ripening and Thanksgiving and Christmas aren't too far away. The keeping qualities of fruit cake depend in the first place upon how much fruit is used [the more fruit, the longer it will keep] and, in the second place, how it is packed for storage.

Many women like to baste fruit cake with wine as it ages. But sometimes the mistake is made of adding too much wine at one time, and inducing mold.

This is my own adaptation of an old fruit cake recipe, one I like very much. I still have part of a cake on hand from last year's baking and it is moist and well flavored.

Rich Dark Holiday Cake
[About 10 pounds]

- 5 cups sifted cake flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 2½ teaspoons cinnamon
- 1½ teaspoons cloves
- ½ teaspoon allspice
- ½ teaspoon ginger
- 2½ teaspoons nutmeg
- 2 cups butter or margarine
- 2 cups brown sugar
- 8 eggs, separated
- ½ cup molasses
- 1 cup sour milk
- 1 cup brandy, rum, or part of each
- 1 pound raisins [seeded]
- 1 pound candied cherries
- 1 pound candied pineapple
- 1 pound candied mixed fruits
- ½ pound citron
- 1 pound pecans
- ½ cup grape jam

Sift flour before measuring. Resift with leavenings and spices several times. Cream butter well, add sugar gradually, and beat until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks, beaten until thick, mix well, and add molasses, milk, and jam. Add half the flour and mix well. Add brandy and rum, then rest of flour, mixed with fruit and nuts. Fold in egg whites which have been beaten until stiff but not dry. Bake in greased pans lined with brown paper, also greased. Keep oven temperature at 275 or 300 degrees, no higher. Time required depends upon size of cakes. If two loaf cakes are made from this recipe the time will be about 4 hours. Smaller cakes require shorter baking, a 1 pound cake about 1½ hours.

Dark fruit cakes like that one probably are most popular of all for they have the most pronounced flavor and best keeping qualities. But many cooks love white fruit cake, especially for the parties around Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Party Fruit Cake [White]
[Three 8 by 4 by 3 inch loaves]

- 1 cup margarine
- 2 cups white sugar
- 4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 2½ teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup water
- 1 pound white raisins
- ½ pound citron, sliced fine
- ½ pound candied cherries, sliced fine
- ½ pound candied pineapple, sliced fine
- ½ pound candied orange peel, cut fine
- ½ pound candied lemon peel, cut fine
- 1½ cups shredded coconut
- 1 pound blanched and toasted almonds, sliced
- 8 egg whites, beaten until stiff

Prepare fruits first. Rinse raisins in hot water and dry. Cream fat thoroly and add sugar gradually, mixing until light. Sift flour before measuring. Then resift with baking powder and salt. Add alternately with water to batter, mixing smooth after each addition. Add fruit, coconut, and nuts, mixing well. Fold in stiff beaten egg whites last. Fill greased pans lined with greased brown paper almost full as fruit cake does not rise very much. Bake cakes at 275 degrees for 2 hours. Peel off brown paper while hot.

Mincemeat already contains many of the fruits used in fruit cake and there are some excellent recipes which make use of it. This one is an apartment sized fruit cake.

Mincemeat Fruit Cake
[Two 1 pound loaves]

- ⅔ cup vegetable shortening
- 1⅓ cups firmly packed brown sugar
- 4 eggs, beaten
- ½ cup orange juice
- Grated rind of 1 orange
- 3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 cup chopped nuts
- 1 cup chopped candied cherries
- ½ cup chopped candied orange peel
- 2 9-ounce packages mincemeat

Steam the mincemeat by heating in the top of a double boiler until softened. Cream fat and sugar thoroly, beat in eggs, and add orange juice alternately with flour sifted with baking powder and soda. Mix well and add nuts, fruit, and softened mincemeat. Fill two greased loaf pans lined with heavy brown paper which has been greased. Bake at 275 degrees for 2 hours.

For other good fruit cake recipes see "Holiday Cookies and Fruit Cakes," a booklet which also describes decorating the baked cakes. The price is 5 cents, by mail. Address orders to Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune.

OVELMO CREAM AND SOAP

Thru the Looking Glass

One beauty specialist has tucked mascara, eye shadow, and special eye cream in a gay little package that contains everything necessary to beautify the orbs and make them an arresting facial feature.

If you've been following the trend of cosmetic fashions, you probably have noticed that emphasis is going to the eyes and eye make-up, to share the limelight with lips and lipstick which have held center stage for so long. You'll play up your eyes against dramatic fashions in dresses and hats and if you haven't already acquired it, develop a skill in using eye make-up artfully.

The nice thing about it is that we won't follow the sheep in this as we did in mouth make-up when practically all mouths looked alike with a broad "glamor droop." You can't make your eyes look like any one else's, but you can beautify them to give distinction to the face.

One beauty specialist has brought out a neat little combination package of make-up that will give you everything you need to start you on the road to eloquent orbs. Here in a pretty miniature band box of sapphire blue decorated with a harlequin mask of cerise satin are mascara, eye shadow, and a small container of rich eye cream.

The mascara is something special. It's the cream variety and waterproof so that should you get caught in the rain or a weepy movie it won't betray itself in smudges. No water is necessary for its application.

All you have to do is put a little of the cream on the brush that accompanies it and stroke it quickly over the lashes. Work from the inside out to the very tips of the lashes, and use a light hand; a little mascara is better than a lot. The lashes are left silky and soft, and the added color doesn't look artificial. The mascara comes in three colors: Black for brunettes, brown for blondes, and a beautiful blue for evening wear for all color types.

Eye shadow can do wonderful things to give the eyes depth and make them seem larger than they actually are. Here you can select one of the five shades to emphasize the natural color of the eyes. Apply it sparingly, fading a tiny dot of the tint from the lower inside corner of the lid up and out toward the brows.

Not too many of us are acquainted with the nice things a touch of shadow can do to lend beauty not only to the eyes but the whole face, and once experimented with it becomes a part of make-up routine.

Learn to use eye make-up skillfully and you've mastered a trick that will make the face infinitely more interesting and arresting.

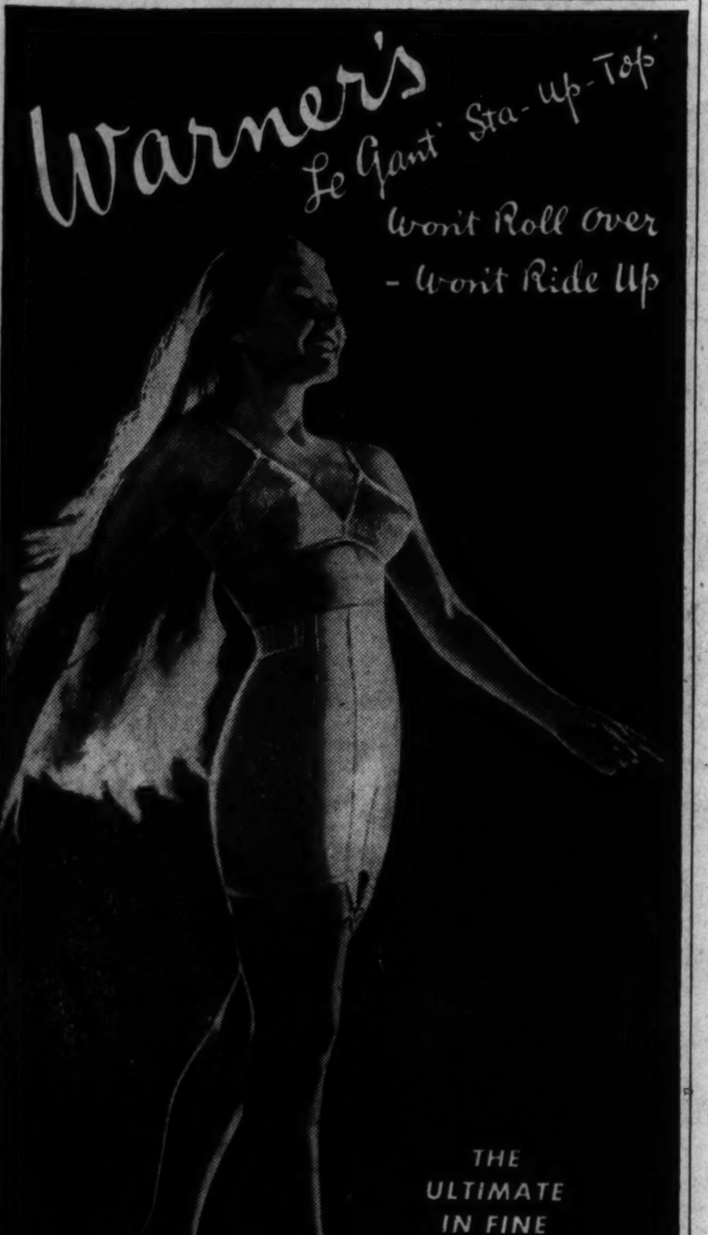
Hints for the Housewife

An empty adhesive tape spool is just the thing on which to wind your tape measure. In this way the tape will be kept clean, unwrinkled and ready for use.



Lady of the House

"My foot is on my native heath"

A small boy, chided for some misdemeanor, stoutly defended himself by saying, "But, mother, we're on our own land, aren't we?"

That seems to be the desire uppermost in the minds and hearts of many of our young men returning from the wars. They want the feeling that comes from possessing some small bit of land all one's own, to have and to hold and to cherish.

Whether the job is raising chickens, turkeys, cattle, hogs, wheat, corn, soy beans, potatoes, or the fruits of some milder clime does not matter so much as does the feeling that one is an integral and permanent part of a great nation of freeholders whose sustenance and treasure comes from the land. America!

Returning from other lands, these men—

"Love their land because it is their own,
And scorn to give aught other reason why;
Would shake hands with a king upon his throne,
And think it kindness to his majesty."

HALLECK

It was Emerson who said "The first farmer was the first man, and all historic nobility rests on possession and use of land." I am sure there was a woman at the farmer's side.

"A Lady with a Lamp shall stand
In the great history of the land,
A noble type of good,
Heroic womanhood."

From the wide spreading farm, from the cabin with a little river at the end of the garden, from the snug little house on a tiny city lot, comes evidence of this. There is poetry in contour plowing and rhythm in the hum of machinery; grace and cadence in homely recurrent household tasks.

From Florence Denison, after reading Louis Zara's "This Land Is Ours":

Here on the hill they laid the little one.
The first to say good-by to the new home.
They left the little oak trees growing there,
And built a fence. And in the new turned loam
They set a sweet wild rose and maiden hair—
They knew from here they would no further roam.
Here was their home. Their wanderings were done.
One hundred years have passed since that bleak day.
Atop the hill the giant oak trees wave.
Five generations since have seen the dawn
In this their home. And each has left its grave
On the high hill, a token and a pawn—
This land is ours. Each generation gave
Its blood and bone to mingle with this clay.
This land is ours. Was ours from that first day
When our own flesh was mingled with the sod,
And watered with our tears. Thru all the years
Feeling a kinship with the common clod,
Yet knowing we are one with circling spheres;
Part of a plan that is a plan of God.
This is a trust which we shall not betray.

From the foothills of the Ozarks, Alice Harris Wheeler sends greetings, wishing we might see all the gorgeous golds and browns and yellows of the hills of Little Egypt.

Indian Summer

I own a little home divine
In the sunshine.
I hang patchwork quilts out on the line,
I rake dead leaves and fallen vine
I build a pyre of leaves and vines
In the sunshine.
My dahlias red, my dahlias gold,
Hold the sunshine.
Falling leaves, dying grass,
Another day, another lass
Will own this home of mine,
In the sunshine.

Those who recall when much of Chicago's outlying districts was open prairie will appreciate Huldah P. Beers.

Changes

Time was when I went to market,
I walked thru a woodland space,
Where birds sang high in the tree tops,
Gay wildflowers smiled in my face.

Nor streets were there nor sidewalks,
Just shady long, winding lanes.
Today, O, I grieve to tell it,
Nothing of this remains.

For city folks spying this paradise
Were eager its beauty to enjoy,
Not thinking that they in their pongings
Would themselves this beauty destroy.

Their dwellings are now so many,
All beautiful, row upon row,
But few are the trees and the warblers;
Gay wildflowers will never more grow.

By way of contrast, Lillian Oswald calls our attention to an older section.

Chicago's Gold Coast

Old residences stand, moody yet strong,
Within the city's twilight and the dawn
In somber quietude upon the lawn
Behind great iron fences, and along
Uneven pavements people pass them by
With hurried step while romance hovers near
Beyond the shadows, dark with mystery,
And memories of a smile or a tear.
Symbolic of a generation past,
Majestic beauty, delicate with age,
A blossom pressed within an ancient tome;
Tho fragile, it is strong enough to last
In penetrating perfume on the page
That brings back thoughts of love ones and of home.

These Helps Will Lighten Home Chores

By Edith Weigle

One of the cleverest household helps that has appeared recently is a sheet of chemically treated paper that polishes silver. Saves you the time and mess of getting out a liquid or a paste and flannel rags and cloths, and does the work in a jiffy.

Simply wash your knives, forks and spoons and while they are still wet rub them with the dry sheet of polishing paper. Off come the tarnish and the egg stains, quickly and easily. Then rinse the pieces again and wipe them with a clean towel.

One of these sheets goes a long way, and four packages with 24 to the package cost only a dollar. There's a hole in the envelope-shaped container to hang them up by.

For washing lingerie, sheers, woolens, knitwear, hosiery and girdles there's a pleasant, lightly scented powder that contains no soap, so leaves no curds on the garments. Also, instead of two or three rinsings, as with most soaps and soap flakes, only one quick one is required.

Because a little of this cleansing agent goes a long way a tubelike package contains enough for 15 to 20 washings of lingerie and delicate duds. And it will leave a whiff of fragrance in them afterward. Be sure to follow the directions exactly; they're given on the package. The price is only 49 cents.

Not on the market yet, but in the process of being manufactured is a liquid that's a war-born product. It is a treatment that can be given to fabrics—to washables such as aprons, overalls, uniforms, children's rompers, and to curtains and draperies—to make them water repellent, stain resistant and dirt resistant.

Because it is a stable wax emulsion it impregnates each fibre of the material, making it nonabsorbent. Thus the whole cloth becomes water and stain resistant, its makers claim. It leaves no odor and we're told there is nothing in it to harm the skin or the most delicate fibres.

Clothes are treated simply by dipping them into a solution of this liquid mixed with water. They are ironed in the usual way, but while still damp, and the wax in the treatment makes ironing smoother and easier. Garments will require less frequent washings, we're informed, because they will stay new looking and crisp longer; colors will be kept bright longer, too.
